Conacher Finds Cobourg Hospital More Like Penal Institution

COBOURG, Ont., Oct. 28.—(CP).—Evidence brought out at a meeting here yesterday of the Royal Commission investigating Ontario's mental hospitals prompted Commissioner Lionel Conacher, M.P.P., Toronto Bracondale, to remark the hospital at Cobourg was "more like a penal institution."

"It seems that way," agreed Chairman C. A. Magone, K.C.

The case in question involved a girl inmate, whose father sought her release. The release was held up pending an investigation into conditions at the girl's home.

"I feel that this girl requires further training here," said Dr. George H. Kidd, medical superintendent.

"She is under sentence here, as it were," commented Mr. Conacher.

In connection with another case, that of a girl who had been committed from the village, the commisison was informed her father had objected to her marrying. The girl, it was said, was a mental defective.

Just Wanted To Wed.

"Apparently she is in the hospital because she wanted to get married," commented Mr. Magone. "Her father sent her away because of this and the hospital is being made a party to it. Why should the government pick a husband for her?"

Dr. Kidd replied that in his opinion, she would always require supervision.

Her father, it developed, had given instructions as to who could see the girl and who she should write to while in the hospital.

"It is a hospital rule that letters are to be delivered unopened to the patients, but in this case you felt that circumstances were such that this rule need not be adhered to?" asked Commissioner Counsel Eric Silk.

"Yes," replied Dr. Kidd.

Later the commission inspected the buildings.

Millbrook Band Honors Member

(Examiner Correspondence.)

Their president, George McKnight acted as master of ceremonies and expressed the pleasure of the band at being present to pay their respects to a deserving couple. Lieut. W. H. Peryer, their leader from Peterborough was then called upon for a few remarks in which he wished them a happy married life, stressing tolerance, the opposite of which caused many unhappy marriages.

A lovely electric mantel clock was presented Mr. and Mrs. Powell, along with a scroll containing an appropriate address and signed by the bandsmen.

Mr. Powell replied on behalf of his wife and himself and thanked the band for their gift. He promised record attendance in future at practice, wife and weather permitting, after which the visitors sang heartily, "For They are Jolly Good Fellows."

Cards and crokinole were played by the festive throng until lunch time when the bride assisted by Mrs. F. J. Smith served lunch.

Delegates fro mthe United States attended the International Foundry Congress in Warsaw, the first ever held in Poland.

New York, Oct 28 (CP).

THE bloodhounds of Huntsville, Tex., penitentiary are going to have their old pal, Jim Berry, back among them again, as soon as his transfer from Sing Sing can be arranged, police revealed yesterday.

Jim, an old cow hand with a love for dogs and horses, was doing a stretch down at Huntsville in 1927 and the warden hearing of his leanings gave him charge of the kennels of 87 bloodhounds. The dogs got to love their new master. Then one day Jim got to craving the wide open spaces and went over the wall.

The warden set the hounds on Jim. They caught up with their old keeper after a few miles and joyful was the reunion. They romped with him all day, running ahead and barking back playfully until night came on and Jim, embarrassed by their happy howling, ordered them home. Home they went.

The warden, still peeved about the whole thing, insists Jim return to serve his unexpired term at Huntsville.

Square Shooter Comes Out On Top Kinsmen Club Is Told By Alex Ponton Of Balmy Beach

In business or sport the fellow who shoots square is the one who always comes out on top, Alex Ponton well known coach of the Balmy Beach Senior Rugby squad told the Kinsmen Club at the regular meeting in the Empress Hotel Thursday night, when he gave an inspirational talk studded with compliments to the young but courageous Orfuns who set the Canadian rugby world agog with their sensational win over Sarnia Imperials last Saturday.

"Bill Irwin is the fellow who has the leading football team in the East today, you must realize that the Beaches are also the underdogs to Sarnia and that is another reason why the Petes should be proud. The Orfuns defeated the best football club, and one can't belittle such a feat. At Montreal when they kept putting up zero marks for each quarter of the Sarnia-Orfuns game we thought something was amiss, and it was not that we were underestimating the Orfuns, because the Beaches have played your team, and know its calibre.

Beaches Must Win

I hope our friend Cec. Perdue is wrong in his predictions because the Beaches must win the next three games or I'll know the reason why. Right now we are in a rather unenviable position.

Ponton gave a brief history of the Balmy Beach club in which he said the team had its beginning 14 years ago in a rather obscure east side park, for the simple reason that many of the players were not in the same class as the Argonauts, or at least were given to understand that. Every year they lost money, he said but the team spirit and a dogged determination to get somewhere had its reward in 1930 when they won a Dominion Senior Crown. Ponton contended that high school boys have been the backbone of the team down through the years. He paid glowing tribute to Ted Reeve, who has always been the foremost supporter of the Beaches and lauded Ab Box, as the mainstay of the Beaches for the past few years.

Use Home Talent

It's a good idea when you are starting a club to import two or three players for positions but I am a firm believer in the practise of building from the bottom with home talent. Fellows like Marsh, Loucks, Magee or Curtain have the stuff that makes top rank senior footballers and I am confident that if Peterborough continues building the team, giving home talent every chance they will have a wonderful crew in a very short time.

"At this point I would urge everyone of you to take an interest in some young fellow who is ambitious and needs help. Get him into sports, start him right and stay with him. Sport is a valuable education, every fellow can't be a top rank athlete, and often we find that the chap who is not an athlete has the ability to succeed in business where the athlete would fail.

In football there is no hope of remuneration, we have no professional football, like we have professional hockey, but the young fellow in football is just as anxious to use his athlete ability and incidental popularity to help him succeed in business. That type of young man in my opinion deserves a chance to make good in the business world.

The great athletes today capitalize on hero worship to succeed in business and that is as it should be, Ponton stated.

Should Have Ideals

A young rugby player should have ideals as well as ideas, he said. Unless you have some ideal you will soon fall by the wayside, succumbing to one of the common bad habits. Steer clear of the fellows who drink, swear, gamble, smoke or are women crazy. You owe it to yourself and your future to live clean and to play clean, and although we don't like to harp on it, nevertheless it is very true that the men in either sport or business who shoots square always comes out on top.

The fellow who is clean on and off the playing field is not only an asset to the team but to the country. The publicity he gets will assist him in carving a place for himself in the business world later, and every great athlete should remember there are hundreds of teen age boys who rate him as the greatest guy in the world and rugby players especially owe it to their young supporters that they exemplify the best there is at all times.

Open Up the Game

The average spectator at a rugby game knows little about it. He likes to see somebody smacked and he likes to see the ball in the air, because when the ball is clear the fan has a good view of everything that is going on.

I feel, too, that defense in Canadian football is much stronger than offensive play, and there is a thought in the back of my mind that the time may come when we may have to adopt a few more features of the American style of play to open up the Canadian game. I am not suggesting that we adopt any of their tricks, but merely drawing your attention to the fact that several of the teams playing senior rugby in Canada are very evenly matched, and may improve their defensive style to the point where the game would not be interesting to watch. The forward pass has done much to liven up the game.

The speaker was introduced by Hal. Leybourne, who said Ponton had been a sprinter on the Canadian Olympic team in 1920 at Antwerp and had been associated with rugby since 1920, and at the conclusion of the talk Emmett F. Sheehy voiced the appreciation of the club for the interesting talk.

H. A. Cranfield, president of the Peterborough Football Club, spoke briefly and said in part: "If the Orfuns can pull through this year we will be back in 1939 with a much better squad." He forecast Sarnia to beat Montreal Nationals on Saturday and the Orfuns to give Balmy Beach a real tussle.

H. L. Bamforth, coach of the Peterborough Collegiate rugby teams for the past few years, spoke briefly, and R. D. Clendenning of Toronto, a strong supporter of the O.R.F.U., tendered his best wishes to the Orfuns and the management of the club.

Alderman R. M. Glover, called on by the chairman to say a few words, said: "No person in the world of sport to-day is better qualified to give good advice to young athletes than Alex. Ponton, our guest speaker. I wish to congratulate him on the fine job he has done coaching the Beaches down through the years, and for his contributions in keeping rugby on a high plane." Alderman Glover also said a rugby team is always a better team if built from the ground up with home talent.

Dr. E. M. Crouch, chairman of the club, thanked Howard Shimer for arranging the splendid program.

INFORMATION WANTED.

From Detroit comes a letter to the local police department asking for information in regard to one Henry Smith, a stationary engineer. He is thought to have lived in the vicinity of North Bay in 1900. Friends in Detroit are anxious to learn something of the Smith family and apparently believe that Peterborough and North Bay are close to each other.

NICHOLSON REMANDED.

Facing a very serious charge in regard to a member of his own family, Pierce Nicholson was remanded until Tuesday when he appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning. Nicholson asked for the remand, stating that he wanted to consult a lawyer and the Crown was not ready to go ahead in any case. The accused has not yet pleaded or elected.

NO SATURDAY ADJOURNMENTS.

A request from a Toronto lawyer who is appearing in a local liquor case that the hearing should be adjourned until Saturday, November 5 did not meet with a very cordial reception at the hands of Magistrate Langley to-day. "I will sit on Saturdays when there have been arrests the night before, but I am not going to have any cases adjourned to that day," he declared.

LEAVING CITY.

Kinsmen honored one of their number, H. A. Leybourne, manager of the Auburn Mills, who has been promoted to the staff of the sales office at Montreal, at the regular meeting on Thursday night when Ellsworth Deyell presented him with a gold-headed walking stick. Mr. Deyell voiced the regret of the members in losing Mr. Leybourne, and tendered the best wishes of the club for his success on his new job.

GETS JEWEL

At the regular monthly convocation of the Royal Arch Masons held on Thursday night in the Masonic Temple, E. B. Fowler, was presented with a Past Princ.pal's 25-year Jewel which marks a quarter of a century of active membership following the holding of Principal's office. The jewel is presented to the local Chapter by the Grand Chapter and then to the member in tribute to his record of service.

STILL IN FORCE.

Citizens should remember that the Home Improvement Plan is still in force and that it is possible to obtain loans for all kinds of repairs or improvements to homes by the owners. Several people got the idea that when the National Housing Act came into existence the Home Improvement Plan was discontinued but this is not the case. Local banks will gladly explain the plan and lumber companies are willing to give any information without obligation. The plan covers sewer installations, decorating and painting, roofing, built in cupboards, hardwood floors, and the hundred and one similar jobs.

The police department reports that there are still some 100 dogs in Peterborough for which no license tags have been issued this year and it is intimated that unless there is some speedy action on the part of the owners, some of the latter may get a chance to see how the police court functions.

GUESTS OF CHOIR

ALL SET FOR PARTY.

Don Scott, chairman of the Kinsmen Club Entertainment Committee, reported on Thursday night that plans have been completed for the annual Hallowe'en frolic at Brock Street Summer Gardens. He urged the members to attend in costume, and said the prizes this year will be appropriate and valuable. The frolic is a public venture and every person is eligible for prizes. Proceeds are to further club work.

ELECTS OFFICERS.

Sixty Catholic young people attended a re-organization meeting of the Columbus Junior League on Thursday night in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum. Tentative plans for a very active winter were discussed by the group and a definite program will be drawn up at the next get-together. Officers for the year are Armene McCarthy, president; Clem O'Toole and Helen Ross, vice-presidents; Clara Grisdale, secretary; Jack Lynch, treasurer.

BLAME DEFECTIVE WIRING.

Defective wiring caused the second fire in two days last night, Fire Chief George Gimblett reported, following a call to 104 Aylmer street shortly before seven o'clock. A temporary wire had been installed to connect a radio and caused a short circuit, he said. No damage was done N. H. Bradley, Aylmer street, suffered burns about the hands when his truck caught afire on Aylmer street. The fire department extinguished it with a hand pump and little damage was done.

PRICE INCREASE FORECAST.

Official estimates of the potato crop for Canada in 1938 place the total yield at a little under 37,000,000 hundred weight which is 14 per cent lower than last year's yield and the lowest since 1915. Dry rot and other conditions are blamed for the low yield along with the fact that many farmers planted only a small acreage this year. Locally it is expected the prices will be affected to the extent of showing an increase in the near future, as the demand for winter supply makes itself felt.

Unorthodox Fashion Of Wearing His Braces Fails To Aid Man Charged With Being Drunk

The fact that a man accused of being drunk had one wing of his suspenders inside his vest and the other outside impressed two police officers as an indication that he was under the influence of liquor, they testified during a police court case Thursday afternoon.

The accused, in explanation, said that he was a butcher and his braces, when he was using a saw, chafed his shoulder so that he had got into the habit of wearing the right part of his suspenders outside his vest.

Unbottoning his coat and throwing it back, he revealed that he had his braces on in that unorthodox fashion even in court.

However, the two officers, Constables W. A. Clark and Percy Sexsmith, had seen other signs of intoxication and described them for the information of the court, with the result that Magistrate Langley, K.C., accepted their evidence and registered a conviction, despite the testimony of the accused that he had not had a drink on the date mentioned.

He was fined $10, but in view of the fact that he had been kept locked up on Thanksgiving Day, Magistrate Langley set the costs at 75 cents. W. J. Arthur Fair was defence counsel.

Second Offender Is Given Three Months

Convicted as a second offender under the Liquor Control Act, John Yates was sentenced by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning to three months imprisonment in the county jail on a charge of illegally possessing liquor.

Most of the evidence in the case was heard at the Thursday afternoon session of the police court. Two witnesses called by the Crown testified that they had met Yates and his wife in the American Hotel on the night in question and in company with them and an elderly man whom they did not know drove to the residence of Mrs. Max Vincent. They stated the car was driven into the laneway alongside the Vincent house and that Yates went inside and came out shortly afterward carrying a carton which was put on the floor in front of the back seat of the automobile. One of the witnesses said that it was a carton of beer.

The party then started to drive to Yates' house and as they were travelling east on Sherbrooke street near Sherbrooke Place another car, which they thought was the police car, pulled alongside add a flashlight was turned on them. Their own car was driven into Sherbrooke Place behind some houses there and the party got out and tried to make their escape. The car, which belonged to one of the witnesses was seized by the police.

Police Car Follows

Constable W. A. Clark testified that he was driving east on Parkhill Road in the police car when he saw a car drive into the laneway near Mrs. Vincent's house. He had driven past and then stopped and when the car came out again he followed it, at times travelling at 40 miles an hour until on Sherbrooke street he pulled up alongside and turned his flashlight on the other machine and then on to himself so the others could see that he was an officer.

The other car did not stop but turned into Sherbrooke Place behind some houses and he followed on foot in time to see the occupants get out and start to run. He pursued one of them and grabbed him, stating that his prisoner was an elderly man. He was bringing him along when he saw Yates with a carton of beer in his arms hurrying away from the car whereupon the officer released his first prisoner and arrested Yates.

"And what became of the elderly man?" asked Magistrate Langley.

This morning Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry called Inspector J. F. Reid to testify to a bottle taken from the carton which Constable Clark had stated he had found in Yates' possession, which had been sent to Toronto for analysis. The certificate of the analyst was produced and put in as exhibit. It showed that the contents were intoxicating.

Moves For Dismissal

W. J. Arthur Fair, who acted in Yates' behalf, cross-examined the witness closely as to the identification of the bottle and afterward when the crown's case was declared closed made a motion for dismissal on the ground that the bottle had not been properly identified.

The motion was refused and Mr. Fair after consulting with the accused announced that he did not propose to call any defense evidence.

In giving judgment Magistrate Langley said he was satisfied that a clear case had been made out by the crown. It was true that the witness called to prove the analysis (Inspector Reid) did not seem to understand the certificate very well but that was not important. What really mattered was that it should be understood by the court and he was satisfied on that point.

"I have no option therefore," remarked the Magistrate, "but to deal with you as a second offender and the penalty is set forth."

He then imposed a sentence of three months.

Vegetable Men Favor Market Twice A Week

The possibility of developing a mid-week market was discussed by the Peterborough Vegetable Growers' Association at their meeting Thursday night in the office of F. C. Patterson, representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The established custom of marketing farm produce locally on only one day in the week, crowding sales into the few hours of one morning, was regarded as a detriment in some respects to farmers. One man reported that chickens were sold last Saturday afternoon as low as fifteen cents a pound, producers being willing to sacrifice price rather than take the poultry back home with them. And it was said that the reducing of the price reacted even against the merchants who stocked them for the retail trade.

The idea was only broached but it was suggested that the Association might be the nucleus of a larger organization to operate in the interest generally of all the farmers of the district who sold their products on the local market. One of the members proposed as a possibility the pooling of contributions to be used in an advertising campaign directed to the development of a Wednesday market. It was believed that merchants on the whole might be sympathetic toward the idea which if successful would bring more sellers and buyers out at the middle of the week, obtaining a better distribution of the sales of produce.

The Association decided to exhibit a display of vegetables at the Royal Winter Fair, and also approved the idea of sending two displays to the Canadian National Exhibition one for each week for the purpose of maintaining freshness of appearance.

The Rambling REPORTERS

A 4-POUND LOSS

A whimsical note was interjected into the report on the Jackson Park summer camp for underprivileged children by Kiwanian John I. Allen, chairman of the committee dealing with the camp.

The children in attendance gained 475 pounds during the summer and would have gained more except that some had had their tonsils removed. "The hospital didn't return the tonsils," he reported ruefully, and estimated that each lost about four pounds as a result of the operation.—P.

W. A. Richardson Elected Head Kiwanis Club

W. A. Richardson was elected by acclamation president of the Peterborough Kiwanis Club for the year 1939 at the annual elections held at the club's weekly luncheon at the Empress Hotel to-day. He will succeed L. J. Pettit to the chair when the new officers are installed during the club's first meeting in January.

It was not a convenient time for him to take over the presidency, but he realized it was a duty and would forego other plans to fill the position, Mr. Richardson told applauding Kiwanians following his election.

Bill English and Vern Morphet were elected vice-presidents of the club and the board of directors for 1939 consists of Jacob Low, Lawrie Mitchell, Neil Warrander, J. A. Troke, D. Ovens, J. Lewis and W. Derry. Tom Mark was re-elected by acclamation treasurer of the club. The secretary will be elected by the executive at its first meeting.

Election of officers took up most of the club's luncheon hour. Secretary J. A. McKone read a report by Kiwanian J. I. Allan on the club's camp for underprivileged children and members moved a vote of appreciation of his efforts, in an unprecedented move. Cost of the camp this year was between $1,200 and $1,300, Mr .Allan reported. Next week Kiwanians will vote on the question of incorporating their organization.

GERMAN DOCTORS RESTORING GIRL CALLED "TOTAL WRECK"

"HAPPIEST PERSON"

Swansea — Six-year-old Dinah Frayne of Swansea, described as a "complete wreck" eight months ago, may yet make a good recovery, thanks to German specialists. Dinah suffered a fractured skull, two broken ribs, multiple injuries to one leg, and a paralyzed arm when she was knocked down by a car and dragged 40 yards in January.

At the assize court, when the child was awarded damages of £4,000 ($20,000), her counsel said she would "never know the pleasures of youth," while Mr. Justice Singleton declared that no money could compensate her.

But medical science is working wonders.

Dinah's head and ribs had been mended, and a Swansea surgeon had, almost miraculously, saved her leg, but specialists feared that her arm would have to be amputated.

Met Injured Cyclist

Then Paul Preiss, German cyclist, injured in a trial in Wales, was taken to a Swansea hospital. Mrs. Frayne took him flowers, and a friendship started between the Fraynes and Herr Preiss. A friend of Herr Preiss suggested flying Dinah to Berlin to see specialists.

"When I offered to pay the fare for myself, my wife, and Dinah, I was told 'there is nothing to pay. You are the guests of Baron von Falkenhayn'" W. J. Frayne, Dinah's father, said.

"Half an hour after I arrived at my hotel in Berlin a German entered and asked to see me.

"He had come from the Berlin clinic of Dr. Sauerbruck. He examinde Dinah immediately and made arrangements for her to enter the clinic next morning.

Prescribed Massage

"The German specialists prescribed special massage and electrical treatment and asked me to take her back in six months' time. The treatment is doing good already.

"Dinah can move the upper part of her arm, and can make a slight movement from the wrist.

"Dinah is the happiest person in the house. She awakens me with her singing in the morning. She has a crutch, but when she comes down to breakfast she throws the crutch down the stairs, and hops down after it. It is her courage, I am sure, that will pull her through."

PROPOSE TO REBUILD 18TH CENTURY INN

Flogging Headmaster of Westminister Found Rest There in Great Fatigue

London.—The Highgate licensing justices decided that an application by the owners to rebuild the 18th century inn, the Royal Oak, Muswell Hill, should be adjourned.

The chairman (Colonel J. Abraham) said the case was being adjourned on condition that the plans for the new building should be posted at the court to give the public an opportunity of seeing them.

The present building, which is one of the few wooden public houses in England, dates back to 1793. An inn called the Royal Oak stood on the site even earlier.

E. King, making the application for the owners, recalled that in the 17th century many people travelled to Muswell Hill to take the curative waters of a well.

In 1660, he said, Dr. Bushy, the famous "flogging headmaster" of Westminster, came to Muswell Hill, where (he wrote) "in great fatigue we retired" to find rest in a cosy little inn, the Royal Oak."

COURT RETURNS SON BEATEN BY PARENTS

Allegedly Knocked Senseless After Morning Whimpering

Portland.—Peter, the 20-months-old son of Thomas Barras of Alexandra cottages, near Weymouth, who was bound over for cruelty to the child, is now to return to his parents.

It was alleged that the boy had been beaten senseless because he whimpered when awakened by an alarm clock at 5 a.m.

At Portland, Mrs. W. G. King, the police court missioner, said: "I am asking if you will give your consideration to the child returning to his parents. Both wish to have him back, and the father is most anxious to have his litle son home again."

SIDE WING TORN OFF PLANE LANDS SAFELY

Leiston, Suffolk. — Pilot-Officer Watts of Honington aerodrome, Suffolk, lost his way in a gale and driving rain at Leiston while flying a bomber. He struck some trees and had his port side wing torn away, narrowly missed two cottages and then went on to land without scratching himself.

Arthur Chambers, the first to reach the airman, was surprised to find him alive.

"Where am I?" he asked. "I saw the trees and thought it was all up. I let go and chanced my luck."

FIND FROZEN FLEAS FIT FOR FISH FOOD

New Industry Is Started by English Farmers

London.—A new industry — flea farms to provide food for ornamental fish—has been established in England.

The flea farms are in the country far from London and were set up after it was accidentally discovered that fleas can be kept frozen for some time without harm.

Frozen fleas look rather like brown sugar. "Fleas in aspic," they are called. Six cents worth, spread on fine gauze, contain thousands of fleas. Thrown into the warm waters of the tank, they soon come to life. They are considered to be the best food for tropical fish.

500 MILES PER HOUR IT'S AN ODD FEELING

British Squadron Leader Flies Single-Seater—Averages 408 m.p.h.

London.—The Hawker Hurricane single-seat fighter in which Squadron-Leader Gillan flew from Turnhouse airdrome, Edinburgh, to Northolt in 40 minutes last February, averaging 408 m.p.h., actually attained a speed of over 500 m.p.h.

From take-off to landing, the 327-mile flight took 48 minutes, but the pilot passed over Northolt airdrome five minutes before landing, which brings his average speed up to 456 m.p.h.

"After 40 minutes," he writes, "I decided to descend. The air speed was now 400 m.p.h. and the ground speed probably 550 m.p.h. I had an odd feeling flying through cloud at night at a speed I knew to be in excess of 500 m.p.h. Coming out of cloud at 5,000 feet, I saw momentarily a red light flashing the letter of my station (Northolt). But by the time I had registered this I was seven miles further on."

BOY BARRICADES BEDROOM

Wealdstone, Middlesex.—Officials called at a house to take a 13-year-old boy to an approved school.

They found he had barricaded himself in a bedroom.

The officials brought a ladder and climbed to the window, but the boy had foreseen that. He had blocked the window with furniture.

Eventually they reached him, and at Wealdstone juvenile court he was placed on probation with three others after being accused of larceny.

M.P.'S DAUGHTER WINS HER OWN ACQUITTAL

Charged With Dangerous Driving—Saves Money by Having No Solicitor

Brentford.—Nineteen-year-old Ann Mason, daughter of Lieut.-Col. the Hon. G. K. M. Mason, wealthy Conservative M.P. for North Croydon, successfully conducted her own defence at Brentford police court.

She was summoned for dangerous and careless driving and for neglecting to stop at a policeman's signal. The summonses were dismissed on payment of costs.

I couldn't see the point of engaging a solicitor and throwing money away," she said afterwards. "It was a perfectly clear case.

"If I had had a solicitor I would have had to foot his bill out of the allowance my father gives me, and that would have meant I would have to go without a dress or a pair of shoes or something."

Miss Mason is beginning a course in domestic science. "I just want to be useful and feel competent," she said. "I am not taking up domestic science as a profession."

Lieut.-Col. Mason, heir of the first Lord Blackford, is a director of half a dozen companies, including the Midland Bank and the Guardian Assurance Co. His country seat is Compton Castle, Somerset.

He married the nurse who tended him after he was wounded in the first battle of Ypres.

DRIFTS ALL NIGHT IN YACHT WITH MAJOR'S BODY ABOARD

Youth's Employer Dragged Into Ocean by Chain of Anchor

RESCUE TOO LATE

Southampton — Alone with the body of his employer, Major Hugh Ferrars Courage, which lay in the tiny cockpit, 19-year-old Reginald Peters of Ryde (Isle of Wight), drifted helplessly about Southampton Water throughout the night in the 11 foot yacht Fore.

Major Courage was dragged overboard by the anchor-chain. Peters pulled him back on board, unconscious.

For hours he tried in vain to revive the major with artificial respiration.

Finally the yacht grounded and Peters, on the point of exhaustion, rowed ashore to tell of his ordeal.

Police officers boarded the yacht and Major Courage's body was carried ashore with a door as a stretcher.

Peters said: "We anchored off Fawley, but the yacht dragged her anchor several times.

"I was working the hand-winch when the anchor chain hit my leg. I looked round, but could not see Major Courage.

"I threw a lifebelt to him and he seized it, but then I felt something hit the bow and saw the lifebelt drifting away. I could see only the major's legs. One was entangled in the chain. I got a line round one of his legs and freed the other from the chain.

"Then I got the boat-hook, hitched it in his braces and lifted him aboard.

"I carried him into the cockpit and tried to bring him round, but there was no response."

When he realized that the major was dead, Peters covered the body with canvas and sat by it until daylight.

He had been with Major Courage as a deck-hand in the yacht for five years. This was to have been their last week-end cruise of the esason.

Major Courage was an uncle of Mr. A. D. Courage of Courage and Co., Ltd., the brewers.

SURRENDERED JOB WAITS AT CHURCH

Croydon — Miss Iris Liddington, aged 22, waited for an hour at Croydon parish church for a bridegroom who did not appear. The wedding was then postponed.

Miss Liddington of Waddon, Surrey, said that she was to have married Robert Henderson, who had been lodging in Addiscombe.

She met him at a Croydon dance about two years ago, and had given up her work to marry. She hoped to hear from him. Inquiries had shown he was no longer at his Addiscombe address.

WINS $3,890 IN FRAUD BUT WON'T CLAIM IT

Postal Employee "Bets" in Pool After Race—"Horrified by Winnings

Kingston-on-Thames. — William Richard James, 51-year-old post-office clerk, of Beresford Ave., Surbiton, had in prospect a pension of £2 ($10) a week and a gratuity of more than £200 ($1,000). He has lost all that, and also his job. His offence was an attempted racing pool fraud.

Derek Whiteley, prosecuting James at Kingston-on-Thames police court, said it was a post-office rule that employees should not bet, but James betted in another name.

He stamped an envelope "1.30 p.m." on Aug. 13 and, after the racing, filled in a Littlewood's coupon which won £778 ($3,890). Suspicion was aroused when a representative of Littlewood's called at James' house with the cheque and learned from his wife, in his absence, that he was a post-office official.

Sir John Cameron, defending, said that James, with 35 years' service, had wrecked his life by yielding to a sudden temptation.

MANNEQUIN QUITS COUNTER MARRIES 70-YEAR-OLD BOSS

LARGE CAR WAITS

Oban, Argyllshire.—The secret of a wealthy 70-year-old draper's marriage to a 25-year-old assistant and mannequin in his store came out at Oban, where the couple were spending their honeymoon.

Charle. E. Bourke, owner of a big drapery store in Belfast, married brunette Anne Hale, eldest of a family of eight, by special license at Belfast. He had been a widower for 18 months.

Mr. Bourke, who owns a car, but drives to his shop every day in a van, one day invited Miss Hale to his mansion home, Kensington, in the Knock residential district of Belfast. His car waited for her.

Their friendship grew and day after day they met in secret. In July Mr. Bourke proposed and was accepted. He then visited Mr. and Mrs. Hale on their farm at Ballymoney, near Banbridge, and received their consent to the wedding.

Still no hint of the romance was allowed to leak out, even at the shop.

Miss Hale was in her usual place behind the counter on the morning of her wedding day. Unobtrusively she changed her frock and overall for a costume and said good-by to her friends. They thought she was going on holiday

But Mr. Bourke's car was waiting to drive her to Killala Lennoxvale, where she was received by Mrs. Northridge, daughter of her bridegroom and some years older than herself.

Mr. Bourke was there, and in the presence of a few friends they were married at the house by his son-in-law, Dr. Northridge, tutor at the Edgehill Methodist Theological college.

"We are very happy and having a lovely honeymoon," the bride said. "We didn't know anyone outside a few near relatives and friends was in the secret."

At an Aldershot court-cartial, when they pleaded guilty, it was stated they crashed on the London Rd. between Camberley and Bagshot in swerving to avoid another car.

GIRL CASHIER FOILS THE WHISPERING MAN

She Keeps Telephone Pest Whispering Until Police Trap Him

London.—A young woman theatre cashier was thanked on behalf of the postmaster-general at Marylebone police court for services which helped to bring to justice a telephone pest known to the police as "the whispering man".

For four years the police had tried to trace him. Since last May his activities had cost the post-office £40 ($200) a week.

Now, owing chiefly to the courage of the girl cashier, Miss Dulcie Warner, of Cricklewood, he stood in the dock—Christipher Patrick Murphy, 28-year-old commercial traveller.

Murphy was charged with sending a message of an indecent character by telephone and with assaulting Detective Crerar, of Scotland Yard.

It was stated in evidence that for the past 11 months a "phantom" voice had spoken by telephone to Miss Warner at the theatre in Coventry St. where she was employed.

On instructions, she kept the voice in conversation until she became exhausted. Meanwhile the police had traced the source of the call to a kiosk in Bayswater, where Murphy was arrested.

Murphy was sentenced to two months hard labor for the assault and fined £10 ($50), with 10 guineas ($52.50) costs, for sending the indecent telephone message.

PEARLY KINGS' BISHOP RETIRES FROM PULPIT

Rev. A. W. Barker Spends 22 Years on Old Kent Road

London.—Nearly 100 pearly kings and queens from all parts of London attended St. Mary Magdalen church, Massinger St., Old Kent Rd., S.E., to say "good-by" to the Rev. A. W. Barker, the "Costers' Bishop," retiring after 22 years in the Old Kent Rd.

Jim Duckworth, 70-year-old pearly king of the Old Kent Rd., said farewell on behalf of the coster community. "It's many years since Mr. Barker first invited us folk to park our donkeys and carts outside and come to church," he said. "Now he's giving up the reins, and we wish him all the best. I can't say more."

In his farewell address Mr. Barker said:

"Thank you, Jim, for your words. I am sorry your own son is not here today." Leaning forward in the pulpit, he whispered confidentially to the congregation, "She's hopping."

Referring to his successor, the Rev. N. E. Field-Jones, curate of St. Mary's church, Bermondsey, the vicar said: "There's only one thing wrong with him. He's a bachelor, and this is a 'two-man job.' I'll marry him free as soon as he finds the right woman."

After the service Mr. Barker entertained several hundred of his guests to tea in the church hall.

AUTO MUDGUARDS OF GOLD PAINTED AND SMUGGLED OUT

POLICE ON QUI VIVE

Rome.—The smuggling of money out of Italy appears to have grown to tremendous proportions, and the police are making great efforts to put a stop to it.

It was stated that a Jewish banker who recently left the country had the mudguards of his luxurious car made of solid gold and painted over in the ordinary way. The police searched the inside of the car and even cut open the cushions but could find nothing and allowed him to go.

The Marchese Godi di Godio, a retired diplomat, whose English-born wife is in prison on a charge of trying to smuggle £10,000 ($50,000) worth of lire out of the country, has been placed under arrest. Signor Renato Sacerdoti, a stock-broker of Jewish origin, has also been taken to the Regina Coeli prison in Rome.

He is charged with having owned the money which the police found under the mattress in the Marchesa's sleeping-berth in the Rome-Paris express. According to the police report published recently, she denied all knowledge of the money, but after being cross-examined for 16 hours stated that it belonged to Signor Sacerdoti.

TRIES TO END LIFE AT THE AGE OF 102

Paris.—One of the oldest men of France, the 102-year-old peasant, known to everyone in the village Gueret, in the Creuse, as Grandpa Anicolas, attempted suicide by stabbing himself four times in the chest. "I thought I was tired of life," he explained when he came out of the hospital a few days later, "but now I realize I was wrong. Maybe I was drinking too much. I shall go back to my farm work and wait till death finds me."

MALAYA HIGHLANDS GET SCOTTISH TROUT

Transferred Ova Now Spawning in Rivers

Singapore.—Trout from Scottish and west of England rivers have been successfully introduced into the rivers of Cameron Highlands, the highest range of mountains in the Malay States — only 400 miles from the equator.

F. Birtwistle, director of fisheries in British Malaya, declares the trout ova were brought to Malaya in refrigerators aboard ships from Liverpool. The trout were allowed to grow in "nurseries" and when fully developed were introduced into the rivers where they are now beginning to breed.

PLAN DUGOUT VAULTS FOR CHURCH WINDOWS

Valuable Paintings, Statuary To Be Buried Half-Hour After War Begins

Paris.—Preparing for all eventualities, the department of fine arts in agreement with church authorities took preliminary measures to save as far as possible the beautiful churches of France from destruction in the case of war.

Plans have been minutely worked out to bury the paintings, statuary and other treasures of the churches in bomb-proof cellars. Even the priceless stained glass windows of the Chartres cathedral and other famous churches can now be removed and buried in safety within half an hour, according to an announcement.

The buildings themselves will be protected by thousands of sandbags, though they are of little use in the event of direct bombardment.

SWEDISH WHEAT BIG CROP

Stockholm—Sweden this year will have a record wheat crop, according to latest government statistics. It is expected to yield as much as almost 700,000 tons, as compared to 580,000 tons in 1937. The crop of winter rye may be some 10,000 tons smaller, being reduced from 400,000 tons to 390,000 tons, and the hay harvest is estimated at 5,950,000 tons, or about 100,000 tons less than for 1937.

LAWYER USED CHEQUES AS MERE BOOKMARKS

Cape Town, S.A.—It would have been better for Beauclerk Upington's heirs if that prominent lawyer had cashed cheques instead of using them for bookmarks.

Executors of Upington's estate found the distinguished king's counsel left nothing of great value besides a fine law library and some sporting prints.

The eccentric lawyer's habit of using cheques as bookmarks was legendary but no one placed much belief in the story. His executors found it was true. They discovered hundreds of cheques, in books, in his files, in the original envelopes or attached to covering letters of firms which had briefed him. Some were for sums of more than $500. Some were dated in 1914. Many were signed by persons now dead. Almost all were valueless.

In addition they found that Upington had used proceeds from his lucrative practice to make anonymous gifts of as much as $2,000 at a time to what he considered worthy causes. His only relatives were two sisters in England and a nephew in the Transvaal.

SHELVED FORTUNE

Chorley Wood, Eng.—A stamp collection, valued at £500,000 ($2,500,000) and kept for 25 year, uninsured on the bookshelves of the late T W Hall's home, is being sold. He collected 2,000,000 stamps in 60 years.

FORGERY GANG 'TURNED UP' BY WOMAN SECRET AGENT

Believed to Have Produced $5,000,000 Worth of English Bank Notes

SURPRISE MEETING

Paris.—One million pounds worth of forged English bank-notes have been sold in Paris to unsuspecting currency hoarders by an international gang, it is believed by police.

Several men, suspected to be members of the gang, have been arrested here. In the possession of one of them, it is alleged, £2,480 ($12,400) of forged £20 ($100) notes were found.

The woman was sent to receive the money and was told to meet two members of the gang in a Latin Quarter cafe.

There one of the men produced two revolvers and threatened to shoot her if she revealed the transaction. He asked her to meet them in another cafe later for the final transaction.

It is believed that the notes were forged in Italy, and that several other members of the gang, mostly Italian, are still at large, and have sold notes with a face value of about a million pounds.

FALSE PASSPORTS TO ENGLAND SOLD

Paris.—False passports to England can be bought in Paris at prices varying between £10 and £60 ($50 to $300) it is stated by police officials. Sales have boomed in the last three months, when Austrian refugees have been pouring into France. A special section of the French police has now been appointed to hunt the forgers.

CROWS PUT CRIMP IN RULES OF GOLF

Penalty Abolished for Balls Carried Away

Bendigo, Australia.—Golfers here are on the verge of jitters because of the large number of balls that are carried off by crows during golf matches.

To save them from some agony, the Eaglehawk Golf committee has ruled that when a golf ball is carried off by a crow from an unusually advantageous position, the golfer will have the privilege of depositing another ball as near as possible to where the original one lay and continue the game without penalty.

JOINS WOMEN MAYORS

Peterborough, England.—Mrs. C. W. Bryant, only woman member of Peterborough town council, accepted an invitation to become the town's first mayor.

HIGH-HEELED SHOES CAUSE OF FATAL FALL

Caught in Carpet Throwing Woman Downstairs

London. — Wearing high-heeled shoes, Mrs. Caroline Holley (51) of Camberwell Rd., S.E., tripped the Lambeth Walk at a dinner dance. An hour later, at home, the shoes caught in the carpet and she fell downstairs. Her neck was broken.

The shoes looked strangely out of place in Camberwell coroner's court, where a verdict of "Death by misadventure" was recorded.

"My wife was delighted with those shoes her 73-year-old husband, William Holley, said afterwards.

"I made a special journey to buy them that day and, as I used to be a shoe manufacturer, I chose a particularly good pair."

"LIFE SENTENCE" TO WOMAN

Uptongrey, Eng.—Charged with cruelty to a dog, a 76-year-old woman was debarred from keeping a dog for 10 years. "I shall be dead by then," she said. "That is why we made it so long," replied the judge.

AFRAID TO MARRY

CHAPTER 33

HOW SHE got out of the room Judy wondered a long time later. Why she didn't wait for Ronald's answer when Abbey asked him to marry her, she did not know. Perhaps because she was so certain what it would be.

He loved Abbey—he must love Abbey—hadn't they planned together? Hadn't they asked each other desperate questions that morning in the dining room when she came down to an early breakfast?

Even if they had not, there was only one answer that a gentleman could make at such a time.

So Judy began to plan her life again. Sometimes it seemed to her that she was a workman who built, pulled down, adopted another pattern, and tried again. She wondered, then, if any edifice would stand strong and triumphant against the storms.

Then the design contest made its announcement, and Judy, reading it in the paper on the subway, clung to a strap because her knees were suddenly weak, the world was instantly glorious. She had won!

She knew now that she had not really believed that she would— that she had formed a life buoy of her eager hope and used it to keep her head above the swirling waters of the last weeks.

A man left the train and she sank into the seat. And the train rushed on thriugh station after station and she did not know it. She was savoring for the first time the rich happiness of recognized accomplishment. Later she would get in touch with the contest headquarters, give them her address. They had only her father's law firm address now. Why, how stupid she was! Doubtlessly there was a letter for her there. Maybe the check itself.

But it wasn't the check that was important. It was the fact that the merit of her work had stood out.

She looked, then, at the number on the post of the subway and Laughing at her own absent mindedness, she changed trains and started uptown. At Wall street she left the subway and walked down a narrow canyon to the law firm.

The secretary had a new deference in her maner. Even in her glow of happiness Judy sensed it. Success changed people's attitudes toward you, she observed fleetingly. Her voice lilted, as though a fife and a flute and a violin played together, when she asked:

"Is there any mail for me, Miss Martin?"

"Lot of it, Miss Rogers. From everywhere. And Mr. Heaton has been trying to locate you. May I congratulate you?"

"Oh, thank you! Isn't it wonderful?"

"I suppose you'll be opening the town apartment? Oh, no, that's closed, waiting to be leased. Besides, it's such a small check. But I do think maybe I can get a job now...."

"A job? But you won't need one!" Miss Martin observed.

For the first time doubt entered Judy's mind. She and Miss Martin might be talking about different things.

"What do you mean—have I an offer, too?" she asked.

"An offer?" The girl's brows were perplexed. "No, I don't think so. I don't know. But your father. Those oil wells coming in! It's like a fairy tale!"

Judy sat down, suddenly limp.

"You mean we're rich again?"

"Yes, didn't you know? Oh, of course, you couldn't. I'm so stupid. You disappeared."

It was Mr. Heaton, the senior partner, who talked to Judy. Her father had relented for his harshness. A bank account was at her disposal. The town apartment was to be opened, servants re-engaged, her rooms prepared.

Judy listened, not caring. Then she asked: "My mail? Have I any?"

"Yes, a great deal."

He rang for a secretary, who brought it in. Judy skimmed through the envelopes. Ah, here was her notification. She ripped it open. There were formal pharses, but she gathered that her sketches had excited the judges Would she please get in touch with the headquarters?.

"May I use your telephone, Mr. Heaton?" she asked.

"Certainly."

She was Judy Rogers, the heiress, again. Mr. Heaton now had time for her. She could use his telephone, too.

She promised to call at the office of the committee in charge of the contest at ten-thirty the next morning. She listened to a smooth voice saying: "Would you accept a position Miss Rogers? Cordelli was one of the judges and she's been begging for your address ever since."

Cordelli! She was one of the six big names in style design. Would she accept a position!

In her glee she jumped up, planted a firm kiss on the elderly lawyer's surprised cheek, grabbed her letters, and ran to the door.

"I'll be back tomorrow," she called.

"Judy, tell us where you live?"

"In a seventh heaven," she answered.

Then suddenly the magic drained away. Facing her in the doorway was a tall young man with red hair, tired gray eyes, a thin face.

"Judy!" he said, and his face grew younger, happier.

"Hello Ronald. I won the contest."

It was an inane remark now. But she must say something.

"Good girl! I thought you would."

"I'm just leaving...." What right had he to come along and break her golded bauble? Why couldn't he stay away and let her float it among the stars and pretend that it was jeweled and eternal?

He did not move to let her pass.

"Judy, will you dine with me tonight? I'll be finished in a few moments."

She shook her head. Better not to open up that. Unless—perphaps he had not become engaged to Abbey. After all, she had not waited to hear. But if he had not, he had been discourteously rude. Still— he might have broken it, when he learned—no, IF he learned —about the dog.

"But your fiancee...." she said, waiting for him to shake his head and end the nightmare.

He did not simle. "She won't care."

"I haven't congratulated you. May I?"

"If you wish. I'd like to see you."

"I'm ever so busy. The contest and the new job I'm taking—" Contests and new jobs. Foolish things with which to fill the days from now until she didn't care any longer that a girl named Abbey, a scheming, ruthless, glittering creature, could reach out and take what she wished. Only five minutes ago, her award had been so important. How could life change so suickly?

Ronald closed the door into the older attorney's office and drew Judy down the hall.

"Try to understand about everything, Judy. Some day you will."

"Oh, I do now. Perfectly!" Then because he looked so tired, so serious in his entreaty, she added: "You'll go far, Ronald. I want you to. I'll root every mile of the way. Never forget that."

His hand closed over hers. "I won't Judy. Not ever!"

Her eyes were almost black with their unshed tears when she reached the street.

Earl Baldwin Brands Public Dinners Health Wreckers

London, Oct. 28 (CP Cable)

EARL BALDWIN in one of his rare, formal appearances in public since he resigned as prime minister, last night made a few blunt remarks about public dinners.

He told the Worcestershire association, at whose dinner he presided here, that they were "the most tiring functions there are."

"I was a fine, healthy man when I first took office and I leave it a wreck," he said. "I think public speaking is at the bottom of it."

Lord Baldwin said: "I am never going to any more public dinners except the county association's."

DOROTHY DIX

Husbands and Fathers Do Not Need to Be Autocrats, but They Should Insist That Families Live Within Their Financial Means

HAVE husbands, domestically speaking, got soft and wives become tough? There was a time, and not so long ago, when the man was the head of the house and the cock of the walk, but now it is the hen who rules the hoost, and Chanticleer crows very mildly in his own barnyard.

Consider the families you know, omitting, of course, your own. Isn't it the wife who is the supreme dictator and arbiter of the family destiny? Doesn't she decide where it shall live and in what style? Doesn't she rear the children single-handed, according to her own fomula, and settle every problem connected with them, from the kind of baby food they shall eat to what professions they shall follow and whom they shall marry entirely without reference to their father's views on the subject?

Aren't the people that a family know solely the wife's friends and never the husband's? Don't the Smiths break their necks in trying to keep up with the Joneses if the wife has social ambitions instead of living within their means in the old neighborhood as the husband would prefer? Doesn't the wife pre-empt the whole house for her own behoof and benefit and never so much as give the man who supports it a single hook in a closet for his very own?

Don't even the children and the servants intuitively recognize that the woman is the she-who-must-be-obeyed and kowtow to her while none is so poor as to do reverence to the man who wipes his feet on the doormat before he comes in, and humbly hopes that his wife won't have lost enough at her afternoon bridge to make her cross and start her to picking on him?

Now, of course, no man is going to admit that he is henpecked, that he is scared to death of his wife and that he doesn't dare to pipe in his own home, much less to stand up for his right, but he will concede that most men are nothing but bill-payers in their families and that they don't even have any say-so about where their money goes.

There is poor old Jones whose wife drags him around to parties at nights when he is so tired that all he wants to do is to sit down in an easy chair and rest his feet. There is Smith whose wife bankrupted him in making him buy a house he couldn't afford to keep up. And so on and so on. But the reason that they, themselves, let their wives run everything and manage the children is because they are so much engrossed in their business, etc., etc. Which is as good an alibi as any.

As Brother Jasper says, "the world do move," and naturally no one would wish to go back to the time when a man's position as head of the house gave him the opportunity of exercising a grinding tyranny over his family, such as was so graphically portrayed in "The Barrets of Wimpole Street," where the father had so enslaved his children that they cowed before him.

But there is a long difference between the man who is an autocrat in his family and the one who washes his hands of all responsibility for it beyond supplying its physical needs. I for one, think it a great pity that husbands and fathers have abdicated and turned over the domestic thrones to their wives.

I believe that it would save many a family from coming to want if the man who earns the money regulated its expenditure and forced his wife to live within their income. There are wise and prulent women who can be trusted to spend judiciously, but there are thousands of others in whose hands a dollar burns until they throw it away who ruin their husbands with their extravagance and kill them trying to pay their bills.

And I am very sure there would not be so many wild girls and boys who bring their parents shame and sorrow if Father was still head of the house, and established an authority that had to be respected; if Father still laid down principles to which children had to conform and if his word was still law in his household.

It takes a cool head and a firm hand to guide children, especially in these lax days, and women have neither when it comes to dealing with their own precious pampered darlings. And I think that even women are happier when they are bossed by their husbands than they are when they boss them.

GOODNIGHT STORY

By MAX TRELL

"Yes," said Ting-a-Ling, smiling at Knarf and Hanid who were sitting in the front of the little rowboat, "I've just discovered a new way to go fishing."

"It's a great improvemenot over the old way," Ding-Dong broke in. He was sitting next to Ting-a-Ling in the back of the boat.

"Show it to us," Knarf put in.

"Now the first thing we do in our new way of fishing," Ting-a-Ling explained, "is to make a little loop in the end of the line and put it around our little finger."

"Why do you do that?" Hanid wanted to know.

"That's the end where you catch the fish on. You can't tie it around your finger," Knarf said in surprise.

"But this is a new way of fishing.

"How can you fish that way?"

It isn't anything like the old way, you see," Ting-a-Ling said, smiling again.

"It's an improvement," agreed Ding-Dong.

"Now just watch. We both have our little fingers looped very neatly in the lines. The next thing to do is this—"

With these words the two Chinamen dropped the poles gently into the water. They floated off a little ways. But Ting-a-Ling and Ding-Dong kept them from floating away altogether by keeping their fingers looped in the line.

Knarf and Hanid were quite astonished. "That's upside-down fishing" they cried. "The lines should be in the water and you should be holding the poles. How can you ever catch fish that way?"

"Oh, we don't expect to catch any fish," said Ding-Dong.

"Of course not," added Ting-a-Ling. "We expect the fish to catch us. For years and years—ever since anybody can remember—people have always been catching fish. But no one has ever turned around and given fish their chance to have the same fun. It isn't fair."

"Not fair at all," Ding-Dong said.

"So we're going to sit here until the fish come along and make up their minds to catch us. And that's our new way of fishing."

Now what do you think of that?

Peterborough Institute Warned Bingo Games Are Taboo

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 28. — About sixty officers of the Women's Institute of Peterborough district attended the district officers' rally held in the Memorial Hall, Lakefield, on Tuesday. Mrs. J. E. Houck, of Brampton, represented the department and was the special speaker at both morning and afternoon sessions.

The morning session Mrs. Houck devoted to explaining the duties of the various offices of the society. She said that it rests with each branch what means they shall use for raising money, but one method is taboo, i.e., the use of bingo games.

The speaker advised the officers not to make extra fees a burden to members bacause this would prevent some members who were poor financially from making the contribution of their services to the society.

She stressed care and method in the planning of programs.

At noon, a pot luck dinner afforded opportunity for the ladies to meet and chat together, thus exchanging ideas from the different branches.

Following dinner, Mrs. Stanley Higgins, president of the Lakefield branch, welcomed the guests in a short address. A presentation was made to Mrs. George Weller of Warsaw, who had been for six years secretary-treasurer of the district. Mrs. Harry Mann of Trent River, the present secretary, read the letter of address, and Mrs. Harry Shearer of Hall's Bridge, vice-president, presented Mrs. Weller with a piece of luggage.

Planning Programs.

A mock election was then held, with Mrs. Houck explaining the correct procedure.

The main topic was Mrs. Houck's lecture on "Planning of Programs." "We must not forget," she said, "in planning our programs, that our aim and ideal is mainly an educational one, and that while the social side is important, it is only secondary to the educational side."

"Current events should keep members in touch with foreign affairs as well as with events of more local interest," she continued, and spoke of the "Home Beautification Plan" which is being tried out in some counties of our province. Carleton County is one where this plan has been tried. A section of land is set aside—usually including several farms—and by co-operating with the land-holders arrangements are made to improve and beautify it, by the planting of trees, etc. The plan has met with marked success," Mrs. Houck said, in conclusion.

Mrs. Wellington Lean of Apsley, president of the district presided during both sessions.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Color photography of the Toronto Skating Carnival, taken under somewhat unfavorable conditions from a rink-side seat, were reproduced at the Collegiate Institute Thursday night by J. W. McFarlane of Rochester, N.Y., as a practical and non-professional example of the progress accomplished in the science of photography.

Mr. McFarlane is president of the scientific and technical section of the Photographic Society of America. He came to Peterborough under the auspices of the local branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada, clipped his address to an edequate outline of the problem of reproducing colors with a camera, and entertained the large audience with still and motion pictures. He began by explaining the composition of the spectrum, showing colors that are complementary, and indicating how color processes are built up from the elementary knowledge of colors that exclude definite elements of the spectrum.

For instance, a blue-green color will remove red light passing through a transparency, magenta will take out green, and yellow eliminates blue. Mr. McFarlane demonstrated the effects of such color filtering by using gelatine sheets, and then went on to demonstrate the subtractive method in the general process employed today in technicolor. Three color emulsions are built up on a common base, the blue green subtracting red of the spectrum, magenta taking out green, and yellow removing blue, but at the same time allowing the colors to which they are susceptible to pass through. That is the principle of the kodachrome films as Mr. McFarlane presented it.

Some Colors Filter Others.

On the screen he showed exactly how some colors filter others, and by superimposing them on the screen with three small projectors he accomplished the same result as by taking a picture with the kodachrome film. His own photography was excellent with remarkably detailed color stills of flowers, sunsets, moonlight, sea and snow scenes, and so on.

A film showing a domestic scene and entitled, "A Family Album," subtly suggesting to parents that they can preserve moments from the youth of their own household presented the lecturer's wife and three small children, one of them an uncertain toddler, in the natural humor of childhood that all parents and especially all mothers know, and appreciate, too, in spite of all the work that claims their attention. O. A. Back of the Canadian Kodak Company assisted Mr. McFarlane. W. T. Fanjoy, president of the Engineers, was chairman.

Actor's Wife Inspects Home

Mrs. Lyle Talbot examines the second floor window of her home through which her actor-husband, Lyle Talbot, dragged a friend, Frank D. Parker, to safety from flames which destroyed the nine-roomed home. Talbot was asleep when the fire of undetermined origin spread rapidly through the house, and he was forced to jump from a second storey window.

Do You Know?

That a good method of avoiding confusion and getting dishes mixed when sending them to community suppers is to attach pieces of adhesive tape with your name written on them? There will be no loss, and the tape will not wash off.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

Dear Friends:

Yes, that is what life is, dreaming a little and worfking a lot, yet if we let work swamp us, we lose our dreams. And we must retain them if we are to make the most of the things we have got.

Forgetting the troubles that yesterday brought, for what can we do about them? And why clutter the fresh page when other nicer things could be written on it?

Learning from the children to whom NOW is the most important thing, and learning also by the wisdom of others, that makes for a happy combination in living.

"Changing your mind—and admitting it too!—when you can see that you've held the wrong view. . . . Pocketing pride with a lift of the chin—Only a fool thinks it's weak to give in."

Admitting you were wrong by changing your mind, that is not so hard as it seems, for many wise men have done that, and been the better for it.

And pocketing your pride would bring more happiness, for it is often pride that keeps us from admitting we were wrong, and doing our best to rectify our mistakes.

"Keeping close check on your thoughts and your speech; learning the lessons that life has to teach; making allowance for folks' funny ways, bearing in mind that it's kindness that pays."

Yes, if we would keep a closer check on our thoughts, we would not let the idea of failure take root, and if we kept closer check, our tongues would not get us into so much trouble.

Making allowance, how few will do that, yet they want it done to them. All of us have funny ways according to some others' ideas, but we take the attitude that everyone else is out of step but ourselves.

And kindness brings big returns, especially glossing over some faults in another as they would gloss over ours. This to me, is one of the big things in life.

"Fitting yourself for the things you desire; earning the right to go up a step higher. . . . Counting your blessings each day that you live—Taking, with thanks, all the good God can give."

Why dream idly when you can fit yourself for the things you desire so much, for everything in life must be earned, ther is no easy road anywhere.

Friendship must be earned by your being a friend, love must be earned by loving, work by working, advancement by advancing and doing a little better than your best.

Counting your blessings will bring some contentment, never doubt that, and combined with Divine discontent with things as they are, will bring you out on the highroad to success, to the betterment of yourself and the world.

And not being too stiff-necked to let God help you, for the strongest need it as much as the weak. None of us are any stronger than our weakest fault, but He can take that and strengthen it so it becomes an asset instead of a liability.

So many have ability, but to let some little fiddling thing put LI in front of it, and it holds them back. Don't you think this is a nice philosophy of Patience Strong?

Then let us use it as a guiding post in our lives, and God knows we need a guiding post to get us over falls and heartbreaks. Your Friend, the road of life with all its pit- ROBERTA.

Gooley - Garvey

DOURO, Oct. 28. — A pretty autumn wedding took place on Tuesday morning at nine o'clock at St. Joseph's church, Douro, when Philomene Garvey, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Garvey, was united in marriage to Leo Gooley, son of the late John Gooley and Mrs. Gooley of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. J. McCarthy, who also said the nuptial Mass. Also present in the sanctuary was Rev. C. J. Maloney of the Sacred Heart church, Peterborough.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father, was gowned in midnight blue chiffon velvet, floor length with off the face matching hat with shoulder length veil and gold colored shoes. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses and lily of the valley.

The bride's sister, Miss Mary Garvey, was bridesmaid and wore wine chiffon velvet with small matching hat with shoulder length veil and silver shoes. Her bouquet was bronze roses. The groom was supported by his nephew, Mr. Dennis Hobbins of Peterborough. The organist, Mrs. Victor Kennedy, played the wedding march and sang hymns assisted by a few members of the choir. The groom's gifts to the bridesmaid was a necklace and to the groomsman a tie pin.

After the ceremony dinner was served to about sixty guests at the home of the bride's parents. Among the guests were the Rev. J. J. McCarthy and Rev. C. J. Maloney. In the evening a reception was held when over one hundred guests were present.

The bride and groom left for Brockville for a brief honeymoon. For travelling the bride wore a crepe dress in torquise blue shade, wine coat, hat and shoes and grey gloves and purse. Mr. and Mrs. Gooley will make their home in Peterborough.

We Noticed

...The new frontfulness becomingly used on a soft wool afternoon dress with "push up" sleeves. Its shade was a soft gray, and it was worn with a tiered felt toque trimmed with tiny ostrich plumes in various shades of pink and purple.

◇ ◇ ◇

◇ ◇ ◇

...Someone at an afternoon tea wearing a frock of heavy black crepe, simply made, but with a lovely old-fashioned necklace of heavy gold set with square, ruby-colored stones that matched the square buckle. Worn with a forward side tilt was a large profile beret of black antelope, smartly trimmed with a gold metal ornament.

ALL-OCCASION BLACK FROCKS

—With Touches of Bright Color

By ALICE ALDEN

The all-occasion dress of black that has touches of gold or of bright color fills an important niche in the wardrobe of the girl who goes out a great deal. Dorothy Lamour, when she isn't draped in a sarong, likes to wear smart little frocks for her afternoon dates. Five o'clock is her name for the frock she is wearing at left. It is of black silk chiffon, having a dancing skirt and softly-tailored gaucho top. Over the slip at the bustline is a flat bowknot of cyclamen-pink ribbon. The long gloves are of matching cyclamen suede. The halo hat is mounted on a darker cyclamen chiffon bandeau. The other frock, worn by Rita Hayworth, is of black suede jersey. The belt is of gilt kidskin.

Sisters Will Attend Lindsay Bride

Yellow, mauve and bronze chrysanthemums and ferns will decorate St. Paul's Anglican church, Lindsay, for the wedding on Saturday afternoon of Ruth Aileen, elder daughter of Reeve and Mrs. William Langdon, who will be married to Mr. Lloyd Frederick Reeves, son of Mrs. Harry Reeves and the late Mr. Reeves, all of Lindsay. Rev. A. J. Goldring will officiate, and the wedding music will be played by Mrs. A. F. Palen. During the signing of the register Mrs. Robert English will sing.

The bride will be given in marriage by her father, and will wear a gown of white suede lace over satin, made on princess lines, with Queen Anne collar and finger-tip veil arranged over a heart-shaped headdress. She will carry a bouquet of Butterfly roses and lily of the valley.

Miss Helen Reeves, sister of the bridegroom, will be bridesmaid, and the junior bridesmaid will be Miss Shirley Langdon, sister of the bride. The bridegroom will be attended by Mr. James Stott of Toronto, and the ushers will be Mr. Jack McFayden of Toronto and Mr. Lloyd Langdon of Lindsay.

The brides mother, wearing a dubonnet ensemble with sequin trimmings, will receive at the reception, which will bt held at Ye Olde Cottage Tea Room. She will be assisted by the mother of the bridegroom, in black velvet with silver fox fur.

On their return from a motor trip through the northern United States, Mr. and Mrs. Reeves will reside in Lindsay. For travelling the bride has chosen a grey woolen suit, with green accessories and black broadtail coat with silver fox collar.

Hallowe'en Tea Successful Affair

Lighted by Jack O'Lanters, and decorated with streamers of orange and black, bowls of scarlet salvia and snowberry, and baskets of brilliant Chinese lanterns, the Kindergarten room of the Queen Alexandra School presented a festive Hallowe'en setting on Thursday afternoon for one of the most successful Autumn teas of the season.

Guests were received by the Home and School Association president, Mrs. V. R. Henry, and by the vice-president, Mrs. D. R. Morrow. The ladies were ushered to the tea room by Mrs. C. C. Doughty.

A silver basket of bronze chrysanthemums and orange candles in silver holders decorated the tea table, which was covered with an attractive lace cloth, and the silver tea services at each end were presided over by Mrs. J. E. R. Munroe and Miss V. Burgess, and Mrs. L. M. Richardson and Mrs. E. E. Frost. Tea assistants were Mrs. J. C. Bateson, Mrs. A. Buck and Mrs. R. Parnall. The table was arranged by Mrs. H. Tremaine and Mrs. A. W. Nelson.

Bud vases filled with tiny bronze 'mums centred the ten small tables, which were in charge of Mrs. W. Franks, Mrs. E. Watson, Mrs. T. Kingdon, Mrs. S. T. Wallis, Miss Almas, Mrs. E. G. Wellwood, Mrs. W. Rogers, Mrs. H. G. Kelsey, Mrs. Ingram, Mrs. W. R. L. Blackwell, and Mrs. E. Boyer. Mrs. S. Kingdon and her efficient committee were in charge of refreshments.

The candy table, which looked very attractive with its colored decorations and bright little baskets reflecting the Hallowe'en spirit, was directed by Mrs. J. E. Smith, assisted by Mrs. J. A. Smith and Mrs. A. E. Chalmers. The homecooking table, also bright with Hallowe'en colors, and laden with delicious homemade goodies, was directed by Mrs. N. Paterson and her assistants were Mrs. A. O. Phillips, Mrs. Connell, and Mrs. S. Dickson.

Soft piano music was played throughout the afternoon by Miss Merrill Smith, and the room decorations were arranged by Mrs. A. Seal, and her committee.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

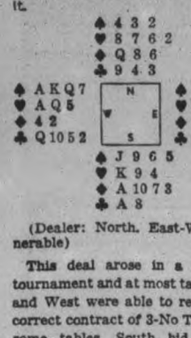
WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

HEAR WITH YOUR MIND

"DIDN'T YOU HEAR North pass his partner's opening No Trump bid? If so, did you hear only with your ears? If you had listened with your mind, you would have known two things — that North was woefully weak and that I consequently had a pretty good hand at least. You should therefore have doubled, since you had an almost average hand." Next time you hear a postmortem like that, try to remember it.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable)

This deal arose in a duplicate tournament and at most tables East and West were able to reach their correct contract of 3-No Trump. At some tables, South bid a weak 1-No Trump. Some West players doubled and after 2-Diamonds by East, went to 2-No Trump, East to 3-No Trump.

A few of the better West players passed but their partners, after hearing passes by West and North, inferred that West undoubtedly held some strength if North could make no response. They therefore doubled and these players arrived at a game in No Trump.

One unfortunate pair received a bottom on the board, for the East player did not have the courage to double and allowed the South player to hold the contract for 1-No Trump. Even though East-West held South to three tricks, they sacrificed a vulnerable game.

Border Fights Hard On Purse For All-India

NEW DELHI, India, Oct. 28 (C.P.). — Syrian Shami Pir who rose recently against the British on the North-West Frontier added a novel touch to northern disorder by plotting simultaneously against British authority and the Afghan regime before he was deported in comfort to his native land.

Shami completes a trinity of obstreperous mullahs who bring grief to North-Western India and cause almost continuous strife between natives and authority, accompanied by sniping, murder and marauding.

After considerable fighting on the Afghan side of the border the Kabul Government unleashed planes and rounded up 1,000 insurgent supporters of Shami to be dealt with later at the capital.

But that is just one phase of guerilla warfare that has cost the Indian purse £30,000,000 ($147,900,000) in the last generation. Conflicting frontier policies—one of "push" and the other of entrenchment — were succeeded in 1923 by "peaceful peentration."

This policy included the construction of strategic roads and establishment of elaborate police patrols. But military pressure had to be brought to bear in 1935 when outposts suffered continual molestation. Fines were levied, rifles confiscated, and tribes brought under submission by force in North Waziriston.

Fight With Fakir.

The elusive red-bearded Fakir of Ipi entered the scene at this stage, organizing raids which proved a constant annoyance to the working parties of road builders. A sharp offensive was rewarded by moderate terms. This was followed by murder, ambush and outrage. So the Government put the district under military responsibility and 30,000 troops were hurried up to guard the "peaceful penetration." But the wily Fakir is still active although his latest movements have been confined to irritation like telephone wire cutting, stealing, kidnapping, laying mines and poisoning water supplies.

Punitive measures aimed at stamping out these latest developments only met with tribal hostilities and right now troops are spending a harassed life. Two colorful bodies are matching wits with the Fakir and his cohorts. The scouts, on regular pay, officered from the army and tribesmen themselves, are lightly equipped, extremely mobile. They are used as advance guards.

The "khassadar," armed to the teeth, is a sort of policeman. But custom hinders his work and therefore he can't be trusted. Sometimes, in the face of an attack, the khassadar holds his post and sometimes he disappears. For if it comes to fighting and he kills a fellow-tribesman on the opposite side, a blood feud may result. The khassadar is used chiefly as an escort, not so much for protection but as a hostage. The Fakir's men are often loathe to fire on a fellow-khassadar.

Fast on the Move.

Comparative immobility has handicapped the regular trops and they have been no match for the swift-footed tribesmen who know every inch of the wild country. This situation has been offset by aerial action although, contrary to popular belief, the Air Force has been used more for relief and even rescue of beleaguered partis and for maintenance of supplies to outposts than for bombing.

The bombing, too, is only partially effective. Warning is given of raids and villages are evacuated. To the nomadic people this is not so great a tragedy as appears. All that happens is a tribe makes yet another move in their annual migration, park on a neighbor's grazing ground (for which they pay him) and the men usually go off to join the skirmish.

Road building is another problem. Frontier contractors, who draw their labor from the tribes, encourage raids because it means an extension of roads. Therefore, when work is nearing completion, workmen encouraged by contractrs, it is alleged, desert, join the Fakir, and become raiders.

After the raid the workers turn up for another spell of stone breaking and rolling for pay which exceeds any profits they might make in cultivating their rocky fields.

The third leader of the rebel tribesmen is the more or less inactive Mullah Sher Ali.

Let United States Watch Out For Japan

"The ominous danger to the United States does not lie in Europe, it appears to me, but more so in the ruthless rise of the Japanese sun over the Oriental horizon."

Lord Bertrand Russell

Keep aloof and alert, but don't become so engrossed in European affairs that the Japanese menace is overlooked or minimized, Was Lord Bertrand Russell's prophetic counsel to the United States in an interview in Chicago.

"The most prudent course for the United States is isolation as long as it is possible," the English author and philosopher advised. "A great and prolonged war in Europe would inevitably draw America into it. However, with support, the British can cope with the European situation. The ominous danger to the United States does not lie in Europe, it appears to me, but more so in the ruthless rise of the Japanese sun over the Oriental horizon.

8,277 Pribil Of Sealskins Are Shipped London Fur Market

OTTAWA, Oct. 28—Canada's 1937 share of the fur seal skins taken at the Pribilof Islands under the terms of the Pelagis Sealing Treaty totalled 8,277 pelts and they have now all been shipped to Great Britain where they will be up for sale at the big London fur auctions during the next few months. How much money the Dominion will get for them will depend, of course, on several factors but '.887 dressed and dyed skins which Canada sold in London in the fiscal year 1936-37 brought a total net return of only a trifle less than $103,500. The average return per skin was about $19.

Under the sealing treaty it is only the United States Government which is permitted to capture fur seals at the Pribilof rockeries in Bering Sea but the treaty also provides that the United States shall turn over to Canada fifteen per cent of the annual take of skins. The percentage is constant but the number of skins which the Dominion receives from year to year varies, of course, with the total kill of the seals. This year Canada rereceived 410 more skins than in 1936. In the earlier year the seal hunt at the islands was interfered with by adverse weather and fewer pelts were obtained than had been expected.

The sealing treaty has been in effect since 1911 and it applies to some Japanese and Russian areas as well as to the Pacific Coast of North America. Under its provisions no sealing is permitted off British Columbia, except on the part of Indians and their methods of hunting are controlled under the treaty. At the Pribilofs, which are the main North American rookeries, the seal herd has grown steadily in size since the treaty became operative and the number of seals was estimated by United States' authorities as having reached approximately 1,550,000 in 1935, as compared with about 126,000 in 1911.

A NOVEL VACATION

Back from his first vacation with pay, a rural postman in England has reported: "First day I pulled me onions; next day I digs me 'taters; and t' other day I thought my new man seems lonely loike, so I went with him for company."

Looking Back
On This Date

This is an important date in the story of British supremacy on the North Pacific. It was on Oct. 28, 1792, that Captain George Vancouver and Captain Quadra, the latter representing the goverment of Spain, met at Nootka to determine the dispute as to right of ownership in these northern waters. Although Balboa first discovered the Pacific ocean, it was an English captain, Francis Drake, who first went north and, after failing to make the northwest passage, returned to what is now San Francisco and took possession in the name of Queen Elizabeth, giving the territory the name "New Albion".

Other English captains had followed but it was not until the coming of James Cook in 1778 that the contest began which ended in the withdrawal of Spain and the recognition of British sovereignty. Cook was commissioned to survey the coast from 45 degrees north to the Arctic ocean. In March, 1778, he passed unnoticed the Strait of Juan del Fuca and, proceeding northwest, discovered and named Nootka Sound, Prince William's Sound and Cook's Inlet. In 1787 Captain Barkley discovered San Juan, and other discoveries by Englishmen followed. Very soon attention was called to the wealth of the sea otter, and it was the pursuit of this industry which led to the final retirement of Spain.

Captain John Meares in 1778, trading from China, came down the coast and established a trading post at Nootka. This post was soon raided and confiscated by the Spaniards, who claimed exclusive sovereignty in the western seas. Although Meares flew the Portuguese flag, he was a British subject and his ship was really a British vessel. This led to a demand for satisfaction by England, which in 1795 Spain finally settled by a payment of an indemnity and maing restitution of British rights and property under a convention signed in 1790.

When Vancouver and Quadra met in October, 1792, they failed to agree and the dispute was referred back to their respective governments. But within three years Vancouver had wiped out all Spanish sovereignty and the white ensign flew to the breeze unmolested.

Now Canada's third city, on that same Pacific coast, bears daily tribute to the son of King's Lynn, Norfolk, who "made the most extensive nautical survey ever completed in one expedition"—George Vancouver.

Jury Blames Snyder In Fatality

Blood Test Shows Condition 'Bleary-eyed Drunk'

TORONTO, Oct. 29 (CP)—Football star of a decade ago, Dr. Warren Snyder was blamed by a coroner's jury today for the death of Reginald Clements, 49-year-old Toronto salesman, killed when knocked from a bicycle by Snyder's automobile Oct. 2.

An inquest was concluded early today with a jury's verdict declaring that "from the evidence we hold Dr. Snyder responsible for the death." Witnesses told of seeing Clements' body hurled beneath a parked car at a mid-city intersection.

Snyder, whose name was known across Canada when he played on the University of Toronto's halfline, was arrested near the scene of the fatality and charged with manslaughter. The following day he was suspended by Attorney-General Gordon Conant as coroner of suburban Mimico.

Dr. Frankish testified that a blood test soon after the accident revealed 3.75 parts of alcohol to 1,000 parts of blood in Snyder's body and said: "A man with that much liquor in his blood would be bleary-eyed drunk."

Some Difference

Highlights of the evidence were:

A confliction in police evidence; two constables testifying that Dr. Snyder "smelt of liquor," "staggered and swayed," had "glassy and stary eyes," and Sergeant Gunnell, in charge of the case, describing Dr. Snyder as "normal," and that "there was no taint of liquor on his breath."

Dr. E. R. Frankish, medico-legal expert of the attorney-general's department, contributed evidence that the blood test taken on Dr. Snyder was3 .25 part of 1000 alcohol; that a man with that much alcohol in his system "was bleary-eyed drunk."

Describes Accident

Nelson Foster, Vermont avenue, who was walking east on Dupont street on the morning of the fatality, said: "I saw the man hit by the car and come sailing through the air toward me and bounced right in front of me on the sidewalk." Moster estimated his distance from the bicycle at the time of the impact at about 60 feet.

The body slid beneath a parked car, he said. After the car hit the bicycle it swerved toward the curb, he added. Asked by Crown Attorney McFadden if there was much noise at the time of the accident, Mr. Foster said: "Yes, there was a funny sound, a dull squashy sound, like—well, I don't just know what you would call it. And there was breaking of glass."

Constable Linton (724), who had helped Sergeant Gunnell push the parked car off the body, said he had asked Dr. Snyder what he knew of the accident.

"Yes, I'm responsible, but I did not see the man on the bicycle," he swore Dr. Snyder said.

"Did you smell liquor?" the witness was asked.

"Yes, I did; he was swaying on his feet; his eyes were glassy and stary and he staggered on his feet."

Scared Speechless Convicts' Trial To Prove Trickery

San Francisco, Oct. 29 (AP)

AN Alcatraz convict, James Lucas, reportedly speechless from fear, was ordered on trial Monday for the murder of a prison guard in a vain escape attempt.

Lucas, 26, Texas robber, appeared in federal court yesterday when Dr. Joseph Catton, San Francisco psychiatrist, said Lucas was "scared speechless but is not insane."

Defence attorneys seeking a delay, said they could not prepare their case because Lucas would not speak to them.

City-Owned Ambulance Recommended

Recommendations for a wig-wag system, better lighting facilities and a municipally-owned ambulance featured the finding of the coroner's jury which under the direction of Coroner Dr. J. C. Smtih of Lakefield investigated on Friday night the death of Joseph Meagher, C.N.R. yard foreman, who died here Tuesday night, a little more than an hour after he had been injured in a collision between a motor truck and a C.N.R. yard engine at the C.N.R. Water street crossing.

The inquest was held in the police court which was crowded. The jury's verdict did not attempt to fix the blame for the accident and the alleged driver of the truck, Alfred Hudson of Lakefield, who is on bail on a charge of manslaughter, was not called to give evidence, although he was present in the courtroom.

Noteworthy features of the inquiry were the fact that under a Peterborough city bylaw train crews are forbidden to blow locomotive whistles within the city limits or to sound their train bell until within 75 feet of a crossing, the testimony of a number of witnesses that the crossing where the accident occured was a particularly dangerous one and should be protected and the evidence that there was considerable delay before an ambulance arrived to take the injured man to the hospital.

The Jury's Verdict

The complete verdict was as follows:

From the evidence submitted we find that Joseph Meagher died in St. Joseph's Hospital in the city of Peterborough in the county of Peterborough on Tuesday, October 25, shortly after 7 p.m. from shock and loss of blood as the result of a collision between a truck driven by Alfred Hudson of Lakefeild, Ont. and the tender of a C.N.R. yard engine No 7142, while in the performance of his duties as yard foreman.

"This jury would strongly urge that a wig-wag or some other precautionary signal be installed at once in order to safeguard the public at this crossing on North Water

British Labor Demands Ministries Of Defence And Supply And No Surrender Of Colonies

LONDON, Oct. 29.—(CP Cable.)—The Labor Party came out definitely last night for ministries of defence and supply in a pre-session manifesto which assailed the government's foreign and domestic policies.

1. Provision of such arms as are necessary to defend the country and fulfil its obligations as a member of the League of Nations and of the British Commonwealth.

2. The country must be made safe from air attack.

3. The resources of the country in scientific knowledge and man power must be organized, including use of the unemployed, but there must be no conscription for the armed forces, or for passive defence or industry.

4. Ministries of defence and supply must be created.

5. Sacrifices must be made on the part of those best able to bear them, with heavier taxation on large incomes and the great fortunes.

6. Home production and storage of food must be increased greatly.

Control Of Industries.

7. National control and ownership of key industries, finance, investment, foreign exchange, food production, foreign trade, coal, power, and arms manufacture must be instituted.

8. Trade must be extended with the British Commonwealth, the United States, and other democratic, frienly countries.

9. Increased use must be made of export credits and imports control.

10. The colonial question—evidently a reference to German demands—must not be solved by redistributing territories among competing powers, but by applying to all colonies not ripe for self-government the principle of international trusteeship in the interests of the colonial peoples and of the world.

The party manifesto accused the government of reducing the League of Nations to impotence, of shattering collective security, and of bringing the country to the brink of war. By its actions the government had placed Germany in a position to

4 Women Drown As Auto Skids In Canal

MONTREAL, Oct. 29 — (CP) — Police today probed deaths of four women who were drowned in Lachine canal last night when the automobile in which they were riding plunged over the canal bank and dropped 10 feet to the water.

J. Morris Hunter, driver of the car and a resident of Huntingdon, Que., was the only occupant of the vehicle to escape. Night watchman Albert Dumouchel pulled him from the water after he had managed to crawl through a window as the car sank.

The dead: Mrs. Morris Hunter, 26, Mrs. Greta Hunter, 53, Hunter's mother, Mrs. Louise Kelly, 18, and Mrs. H. G. Gessner, 63, his aunts. Mrs. Gessner was from New York City, the others from Huntingdon.

Bodies of the four women were found huddled in the car when it was raised from the canal bottom.

Hunter could throw little light on the accident. He remembered trying to open a car door as the vehicle sank, and of crawling through an open window when the door remained jammed.

Col. Miller Civil War Veteran Dead

Served At Gettysburg Answered Call To Fight Fenians

Death came Friday night to an old soldier. He was Colonel J. W. Miller, one of the few Canadian survivors of Gettysburg, who returned to this city to establish himself as one of Peterborough's most distinguished military men, and who lived to be 93 years of age.

This grand old man suffered no lingering illness; he had few of the infirmities that go with such extreme age. Long after he was eighty years of age his erect figure, a soldier written into every line of it, was a familiar sight on Peterborough streets, and one that caused many a young man to stare in admiration. Friday night, like a soldier who has completed a campaign, he laid down his arms and went to rest.

It was a colorful life this veteran among veterans lived for so long. At the time of his death he was almost the only survivor from among the 30,000 Canadians who fought with the American Federal Army at Gettysburg. Early this July he attended the 75th anniversary celebration of the battle, one of 500 from the United States and Canada—virtually all that remained of the vast number of soldiers who fought there.

Fenian Raid Veteran

He was the only survivor of the 220 stout-hearted young militia men who marched out of this city 67 years ago with the Peterborough Rifle Company to fight the Fenian Raiders at Ridgeway.

In 1867 the Peterborough Rifle Company became the 57th Regiment and Private Miller soon won his commission. Promotion followed gradually until in 1893 he became the fifth man to be Colonel of the Regiment. He continued as officer commanding the regiment until 1914 when most of his men went overseas.

His military career started when he was 15 years old and enlisted in the 6th Regiment of the regular United States Cavalry in 1861. He fought with the Union army under McClelland, Hooker and Mead. He was with General Mead at Gettysburg and during the engagement had his horse shot from under him. He was carried down with the animal, which rolled on him and fractured all his ribs on the left side. After laying there for several hours, he was found by the Rebels, who pulled him clear of the horse and took him prisoner. For two months he was in custody at Richmond, Virginia. Later, in an exchange of prisoners, he was freed and returned to his regiment. He continued in the front rank of the fighting until the end of the war.

He was one of the first men in Canada to volunteer for service when the Great War broke out. He depended on his good friend, General Sam Hughes, to get him into service again and wrote an urgent letter to the minister of militia, explaining that his health was extremely good. He was sadly disappointed when General Hughes wrote to him, telling him "the trouble with you and me is that we were both born twenty years too soon."

In civil life Mr. Miller was a shoe merchant for a good many years, retiring in 1923. He was clerk of the Division Court for a number of years, retiring from that post at about the same time.

He had been a member of the city council and of the board of education, an honorary member of the Kiwanis Club, the I.O.O.F., and the Loyal Orange Lodge. A member of George Street United Church, he had taught Sunday school there for a great many years.

Would Exclude All Japanese

VICTORIA, Oct. 29—(CP)—George M. Murray (Lib. Lillooet) told the British Columbia legislature yesterday during the debate on the speech from the throne that a law should be passed excluding all Japanese from the Dominion.

He said people in Canada did not appreciate the Japanese problem that faced the Pacific coast province.

"The Japanese problem is similar to the Sudeten problem in Czechoslovakia," Mr. Murray said. "We should follow the example of Australia and pass a total exclusion law."

He said Vancouver city showed "fine leadership" in its endeavors to curtail the extent of oriental activity in various lines of business. (The city council in Vancouver recently considered the possibility of refusing trade licenses to Orientals who wished to operate confectionery stores, majority of which are already operated by Japanese.)

"We must curtail Japonese penetration as far as possible to protect our own people. Canadians can not be shopkeepers in Japan. Why extend the privilege here to such an extent that it will throttle our own business men? The Japanese menace will soon force eastern financiers to wake up."

Fate Of Czechs For France Herriot Warns

MARSEILLE, France, Oct. 29 (C. P.-Havas). — The French Republic will go the way of Austria, Czechoslovakia, Spain, and China unless it firmly defends the democratic liberties of the press, of speech, and of religion, Edouard Herriot, President of the Chamber of Deputies, said in a speech at the Radical-Socialist Party Congress here today.

Herriot indirectly warned Premier Edouard Deladier not to drive a wedge between the workers and other classes in France, declaring the united forces of the nation were needed if France was to stand firm as the protector of democracy in Europe.

After Herriot's impassioned speech the Congress adopted a motion of confidence in the foreign policy of the Daladier Government. Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet earlier had re-affirmed the validity of the Franco-Russian mutual assistance pact.

"Do you not remember the fate of the Austrian Republic, the Czechoslovak Republic, the Spanish Republic, the Chinese Republic?" Herriot asked the Congress. "How many examples do you require to make you think?

Is Liberty to Go?

"Are you going to abandon liberty and the regime based upon it?" the former Premier asked.

"You have to defend all forms of liberty, especially the freedom of the press. You have also to defend religious liberty, the freedom of conscience, the right to be born Jew or Christian.

"We have to struggle against the racial ideas which reduce us to the level of animals.

"We have to defend the human person, human rights, the right of a man to stand alone against all which might oppress him. It is we who have to defend the human equality proclaimed by the revolution, the rights of men of color which may perhaps to-morrow be brought into question when the colonial issue is raised.

"All Frenchmen have to defend France, but we Radicals also have to defend the democratic ideal. It is on this basis that we shall establish the unanimity of my party, faithful to its traditions and conscious of its destinies."

Canada Should Arm Now States Hepburn Switching His Policy

Urges Scale Big Enough to Face Aggression Without Aid, or Hiding Behind British Lion or American Eagle

WIARTON, Ont., Oct. 29—(CP)—Premier Hepburn of Ontario has changed his opinions on Canada's defence policy, "through force of necessity." He now believes the Dominion should undertake immediately a national rearmament program to "preserve that freedom we hold so dear."

Such a program should be on a scale large enough to meet aggression without assistance, he told the Bruce Peninsula Resort Association here last night. "We can't hide under the paw of the British lion or the wings of the American Eagle," he said. "This is something we must face ourselves."

As a member of the House of Commons, the Premier "was one of those who strenuously opposed any major armament policy in Canada," today, "through force of necessity, I have changed my mind," he added. "There is no need to blind ourselves to the dangers that confront us if we are not prepared.

"There is a considered drive on the part of three great nations now to conquer and divide the world. We had better wake up before it is too late and we find ourselves in the same position as Ethiopia, Manchoukuo and those other conquered nations."

Turning to domestic questions, Mr. Hepburn said it was "unfortunate" that talk of disunity should arise at the present time. The people of western Canada should pay more attention to the problems of Ontario. Some other method of raising revenue besides tariffs should be evolved. Tariff's "work hardships on the Western farmers."

Suspect Hunter Guide Drowned

BLIND RIVER, Ont., Oct. 29 (C. P.). — James Scott, 42-year-old Grand Rapids, Mich., hunter, and his guide, Daniel Sheean, 18, of Blind River are believed to have drowned in the North Channel of Lake Huron near here.

The men left Blind River early on Thursday and nothing was heard of them until their canoe was found yesterday floating upside down in the North Channel two and a half miles away. The discovery was made by J. Glanville, crossing the channel in his fish tug.

No trace of the bodies has been found, and a search party is dragging the channel. Scott's automobile was found on the Mississauga Road, three miles west of Blind River.

Warplanes Sent To Spain From Canada

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—The Canadian Government and United States Federal agents are investigating the illegal shipping of about 40 American airplanes to Loyalist Spain.

The United States Department of State disclosed last night the shipments had been made despite the neutrality law which forbids sending war materials to Spain. It said this was accomplished by use of what it now appeared were forged documents.

The aircraft were among fifty Grumman planes which were ordered from a Canadian company by a Paris agent of the Spanish Government, the Department said, explaining that the agent presented with the order documents to show Turkey was the destination of the shipments.

Export licences for the planes were revoked when the Department learned their true destination was Spain, but most of the order already had been sent. The planes were sent from the United States to Canada in assembled and unassembled form.

Canadian law requires a licence to ship certain war materials and equipment from Canada.

Greece Spoils One Plot.

The State Department also disclosed that attempts had been made to obtain export licences for 22 Bellanca planes on the representation that they were destined for Greece, but that licences had not been issued because the Greek Government informed the Department the ships wre not intended for use there.

A shipment of military airplanes, purportedly to Turkey, was made from Canada about six months ago, it was reported in Ottawa last night.

The Department said it first issued export licences to ship the Grumman airplane engines and parts to Canada for assembly on assurance that the planes would remain in that country.

Then the Department was informed that the parts were merely passing through Canada. At that point the Turkish Government told the United States Government it had not purchased the planes and that they had not arrived in Turkey.

The Turkish Government declared the Spanish agents' documents to be "forgeries," the State Department said.

British, Americans Unite In China To Save Jap-Threatened Trade

Shanghai, Oct. 29.—(AP).—The British and American Chambers of Commerce in Shanghai met jointly to-day to discuss a united front against Japanese efforts to monopolize Chinese trade.

The move came as the Chinese press reported Japanese firms rapidly were establishing sales offices in all conquered cities and towns to handle all kinds of goods while foreign trade is blocked by the Japanese military.

Representatives of American commercial and cultural interests in China expressed hope yesterday that the United States would get a "satisfactory" reply to the Oct. 26th protest to Japan.

A statement issued by the Shanghai American Association in conjunction with the Shanghai American Chamber of Commerce said that

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (CP) — Manhattan's glamor girls last night picked a Canadian, Arthur William Brown, as the most popular artist in the metropolis.

Mixing a cocktail of glitter and goofiness, 100 or more of the girls whose faces gaze intriguingly from the covers and ads of the continent's magazines, congregated at the Stork Club and cast ballots for their favorites.

Brown, who set out from Hamilton, Ont., two decades ago and attained distinction as an illustrator, won in a walk as the most popular.

Bradshaw Crandall, another illustrator known to millions, was chosen the "most beautiful," and Peter Arno, the sophisticated cartoonist, was voted the most sartorially perfect.

Small, wearing horn-rimmed spectacles and a grey plaid suit, "Brownie," as he is addressed by his colleagues, stood on a platform and received his prize—a frightened little pig.

For the benefit of a newsreel camera, a statuesque brunette made the presentation after which "Brownie" declared for the sound track: "I wonder how I'll explain this to my wife."

Cut Tory Deficit Of 160 Million To 17, Rogers Tells West

BRANDON, Man., Oct. 29—(CP)—Hon. Norman Rogers, Dominion Minister of Labor, told a political meeting here last night as he reviewed the Liberal Government's record that the administration had reduced the former Conservative government's deficit of $160,000,000 to $17,000,000.

Mr. Rogers, who spoke in behalf of J. E. Matthews, Liberal candidate in the November 14 Federal by-election in Brandon riding, said that apart from the two per cent sales tax, changes made in taxation had been downward.

The trade agreement with the United States, now under discussion, was described by Mr. Rogers as a "beacon light of economic sanity" and a possible cornerstone of freer trade between Great Britain, United States, Canada and Australia.

In a reference to talk of unrest in the Dominion, he said that only by compromise between the various sections could unity be achieved. The prosperity of industrial sections depended more than all else on the prosperity of Western Canada and agriculture in particular.

Efforts of the Dominion Government to fight unemployment were recited by the minister, who told his listeners of the administration's Home Improvement Plan, Dominion Housing Loan, the Municipal Assistance Act, and assistance to the mining industry. The Government also had eliminated the sales tax on building materials. Unemployed numbers were reduced from 206,000 to 115,000 on September 1 last.

Gardiner Denies Idea West Gets More From Federal Treasury Than East

SASKATOON, Oct. 29 (CP)—Hon. James G. Gardiner, Federal Minister of Agriculture, last night decided the idea expressed in some quarters that western agriculture benefitted more by contributions from the national treasury than eastern agriculture during the last 10 years.

Speaking before a joint meeting of the Board of Trade and the Canadian Club, Mr. Gardiner said in the last decade the amount of money spent by the Federal government for maintenance of the wheat industry had been "trivial" compared to that expended on the livestock industry of Canada.

He said of the $36,800,000 spent to maintain the livestock industry during the decade, $27,500,000 had gone to eastern Canada.

Mr. Gardiner said 93 6 per cent of all Canadian wheat was grown west of Winnipeg; that all but 20,000,000 bushels of wheat was grown in the prairie provinces during a normal wheat year, and that all export wheat was grown in the prairie provinces.

He explained further that 64 per cent of the oats, 79 per cent of the barley, 87 per cent of the rye and 95 per cent of flax grown in Canada came normally from western Canada.

On the other hand, 54 per cent of all Canadian cattle were raised in eastern Canada. Similarly, 62 per cent of all hogs, 55 per cent of sheep, 58 per cent of the eggs, 64 per cent of the butter, 95 per cent of cheese and 72 per cent of all milk produced normally in Canada, was produced east of Winnipeg.

"From these figures, it is evident that Canada specializes in grains in the west and in livestock in the east," the minister asserted.

King George To Open Momentous Parliament Session Nov. 8

By J. F. Sanderson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Oct. 29 (CP Cable)—One of the most momentous peace time sessions of parliament in Great Britain's modern history will be opened Nov. 8 by the King with all the time-honored pageantry.

Parliament actually will meet Nov. 1 to wind up the business of the present session, sitting two or three days before proroguing. In both the short and long sessions, two topics will overshadow all others—defence and foreign affairs.

The Munich agreement will be discussed in the light of the final delineation of Czechoslovakia's boundaries and Germany's economic drive down the Danube.

The government is expected to set a date sometime between the middle and end of November on which the Anglo-Italian treaty will come into operation, and then invite discussion on it. The agreement has lain dormant since April pending withdrawal of a sufficient number of Italian troops from Spain to be regarded as a "settlement" in Spain as far as Anglo-Italian relations are affected.

Another topic of debate—it may overshadow many others—will be Germany's demand for the return of war-lost colonies. On this subject, complicated because Australia, New Zealand and South Africa as well as Great Britain hold mandates over former German colonies, there are two sharply divided opinions.

Some German Support

Some members of parliament, cutting across political lines, believe Germany has the moral right to the return of colonies essential to an expanding European nation as sources of supply.

Others oppose the return of African and Pacific Ocean colonies for economic as well as military reasons. They fear Germany might develop naval stations which would endanger empire commercial communications.

New defence measures on a voluntary basis are expected to be announced by the government at the short session. They will be designed to fill the gaps revealed when the country went on a modified war footing during the Czechoslovak-German crisis of September.

It was considered a strong possibility that Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, will present Britain's first £1,000,000,000 budget next April when he tables the annual financial statement.

Pressure Back Ways

The Chancellor is being pressed from two sides—to provide money for the rearmament program of vast magnitude and to cut down expenditures. Obviously, he cannot please everyone.

Britain's rearmament program is being financed by taxation and partly by loans. If the Chancellor adds £50,000,000 to taxation revenue, his budget will approach £1,000,000,000, a figure never before reached. On the other hand, he may decide to finance more by loans than by additional taxes, and in that event the

Mission Bombing Probed By States

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29—(AP).—The United States department of state sought additional details today about the reported bombing of a flag-marked mission in China which killed a three-year-old American girl and wounded her mother and eight-year-old sister.

A dispatch from ambassador Johnson at Chungking, China, did not report the nature of the bombing, but press dispatches from Hankow said Japanese planes were reported to have destroyed the mission. Pending receipt if further information, there was no comment from the state department.

Phoebe Nyhus, Lutheran Brethren Arthur Nyhus, Lutheran Brethren missionary at Tungpeh, was the girl reported killed. Ruth was the name of the daughter reported wounded.

The newly accredited Chinese ambassador told reporters an early peace between Japan and China was unlikely. The ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, presented his credentials to President Roosevelt yesterday and told him that China was encouraged by the United States' "constructive international idealism."

unless such a reply was forthcoming soon they hoped the United States would "promptly bring pressure on Japan to insure cessation of Japanese discrimination against American trade and cultual efforts in China."

MORE ABOUT—

Bowmanville on October 4, 1845. His parents came from Donegal, Ireland, to this country. His mother was of Dutch descent, and his father's family was originally Scottish. During the reign of William of Orange his ancestors, officers in the British army, were granted lands in Donegal, and moved there.

Surviving are six sons, Captain William W. of Toronto, Norman Sinclair of Toronto, Frederick Charles, John Hepburn, Gordon Campbell, and Burton, all of Peterborough; and four daughters, Mrs. Homer O. Fisk of Peterborough, Mrs. Lillian Schneider Miss Ada Miller and Miss Ethel Miller, at home.

A semi-military funeral will be held on Monday at 2 p.m. from George Street United church, Rev. M. C. Parr officiating. Interment will be at Little Lake Cemetery.

Lt.-Col. Arthur Stevenson.

Notified of the death of Colonel Miller to-day, Colonel Stevenson said: "I feel his passing very keenly. I have known him for more than half a century, and succeeded him in command of the 57th Regiment, now the Prince of Wales Rangers. He was the most kindly and considerate man I have ever known, very honorable and straightforward, and a soldier from the ground up. He was always outspoken in his opinions and had the ability to express them with force and clarity. He had Irish wit and was generous to a degree. This city in my opinion has lost one of its finest citizens."

Lt.-Col. John Dewart, M.C.

"Colonel Wesley Miller was a source of inspiration to the Militia in this city for fifty years, and every soldier and Militiaman in the district will grieve over his death. His enthusiasm for military work was boundless and his kindly interest and vigor has been the mainstay of the local Rangers for many years. I am sorry indeed to hear of his passing."

Col. T. J. Johnston, who commanded the 83rd Battalion, speaking of the death of Col. Miller who was connected with the first organization of the militia in Peterborough, said: "I do not know of any officer who gave more service or was held in higher esteem by his brother officers and also the rank and file who have served under his command which gives the highest proof of his popularity and efficiency as a commanding officer.

Kinsmen Carnival Set For Monday Night

Young and old will join hands in a monster frolic at the Brock Street Summer Gardens on Monday night when the Kinsmen Club will hold their annual Hallowe'en Dance. Nothing has been overlooked to give this city's jitterbugs the time of their lives, and it is fully expected in view of the arrangements that the dance will reach a new high in popularity.

Cash prizes will be given to winners of the fancy and comic dress costumes, and several local girls have been lying awake at night recently planning novel costumes in strong bids for the prize money. For the benefit of the large crowd of spectators expected, several games have been set up, and will be manned by members of the club.

The Frolic has become an annual affair and each year grown in size and popularity. Don Scott is general convenor and is assisted by Alex. Sollitt. Other committee chairmen are Ken Smylie, publicity and advertising, J. A. MacDonald, dance floor; Howard Shimer, games; Ed. Riley, prizes and judging; Dave Hubbert, finance.

Shortage of water for irrigation during the drought has reduced Peru's rice crop to two-thirds that of last year.

Family Face Pile Of 100,000 Phone Books, Thumb 75,000 To Find Hidden $1,500

Boston, Oct. 29 (AP)

ACHING back muscles troubled an entire Brighton family today after a hunt through 75,000 discarded telephone books for $1,500 in $100 bills carelessly hidden in one of them—but they had the money to salve their pains.

The story goes back to last Saturday when Joseph Harkins came home with receipts from his jewelry store. He slipped the money into the telephone book for a hiding place.

On Monday a telephone employee delivered a new directory and carried off the old one—and the money.

Harkins, his sister, her husband and a couple of nephews took turns poring over a pile of 100,000 discarded phone books, one by one, night and day. Last night, after they had turned over three-quarters of the pile, the money fluttered out.

Toll In Marseille Fire Now 56 May Reach 100

MARSEILLE, Oct. 29 (A.P.). — The official death list from last night's fire mounted to 56 to-day and it was feared the toll might reach 100.

Besides those known to be dead, many others were missing, particularly in the Nouvelles Galleries de Paris department store, where the blaze started. Firemen said there were "heaps" of bodies at the bottom of a stairway which collapsed. Thirty-five persons were being treated in hospitals.

Some of the missing, ironically, were workmen constructing a fireproof cellar to protect employees against air-raid fires in the five-storey building. The floors of the department store collapsed less than 20 minutes after the fire was discovered.

Troops with fixed bayonets stood guard throughout the night around the smoking ruins to stop looting which started when thieves pillaged guest's rooms of three large hotels, ruined by fire and water.

Thousands of firemen from towns as far away as Lyons, 220 miles to the north, battled the flames which swept across wide boulevards under the force of winds of almost gale strength.

World Prestige Hit

Great Britain's standing in the world had been damaged gravely, the manifesto continued. Aggression by the military dictatorships went unchecked. British ships and seamen were bombed with impunity. British interests in Europe, the Mediterranean, and the Far East had been sacrificed without heed to the consequences. The result was a series of shattering defeats for British diplomacy and a loss of faith in democracy.

War was averted not by prime minister Chamberlain, the document asserted, but by Eduard Benes, who as Czechoslovakia's president "accepted under the pressure of brutal threats the cruel sacrifices demanded by Hitler."

After a series of diplomatic defeats, starting at the time of the invasion of Manchuria by Japan, it charged, Great Britain "abandoned her historic position of champion of freedom and of the rights of small nations and thereby threw away the respect and support of many nations and peoples." The world now was back where it was in 1914.

"If Spain now were to be sacrificed with the connivance of Mr. Chamberlai nto the predatory aggression of Hitler and Mussolini, not only would democracy once more have been betrayed but France would be encircled and the security of the British commonwealth exposed to new and grim perils."

The document dealt with the responsibility of the national government in the domain of armaments. "In October 1936," it said, "it (the Labor party) warned the government 'the armed strength of the powers loyal to the League of Nations must be conditioned by the armed strength of potential aggressors.'"

Emphasizing lack of anti-air guns and the "confusion" in the passive defence organization, the manifesto contended that British military aviation "has been outstripped in every respect by that of Germany."

Defences Neglected

"The defences of our country have been criminally neglected," the manifesto continued. "The recent crisis found us in a state of appalling unpreparedness. The shortage of anti-aircraft guns is a public scandal.

"The confusion and inadequacy of arrangements was notorious. The food supply, a vital element of national defence, has not been made secure either by increased home production nor by substantial food storage.

"Enormous sums have been voted by parliament for national defence. The nation has no value for its money. The industrial strength of our country is being allowed to decline because of the same indecision and ineptitude which the government displayed in foreign affairs.

"It will be further intensified by the loss of markets to Germany and Japan as these countries extend their economic penetration even beyond the large areas of Europe and Asia which successful aggression and democratic weakness have given them."

Sign Man Falls Tree And Costs Firm $50 to Quiet Owner

London, Ont., Oct. 29 (CP)

LLOYD COOK, of Warwick village, visited London today, richer by $50, a pocketful of cigars and a lot of "durn good" fire-wood because somebody cut down his old locust tree.

Cook awoke the other morning to find his 50-year-old shade tree cut down. Upon investigation he found a publicity man for a nationally-known tobacco company had dropped the tree in its tracks because its foliage partially hid from view the company's cigarette sign.

Cook wrote the firm and an official was despatched to make good the damage. Salved by a goodly number of the company's best cigars and a polite representative who promised a sapling and a $50 cheque, Mr. Cook agreed to the bargain.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 29 (C.P.). — Sharp let-up in Canadian wheat export demand, distress wheat shipments arriving at Liverpool unsold, and bearish Southern Hemisphere crop news sent sellers into the Winnipeg Grain Exchange this week to push wheat prices toward five years lows established several months ago.

Wheat futures closed six quiet sessions on Friday 3⅜-2½ cents lower than October 22. The relapse also was caused by minor profit-taking following two weeks of advancing quotations. October and November were at 58¾, December 58½-⅝, and May 62½ cents.

Canadian export sales, averaging around 2,000,000 bushels for several weeks dropped to small-lot shipments this week. Furthermore, exporters see little hope for revived demand in view of United States, Rumanian and French pressure at Liverpool. Canadian wheat also was reported arrived at Liverpool unsold.

Prospect of large Southern Hemisphere crops to swell the already top-heavy world wheat situation acted as another sellers' hammer to push Liverpol prices to four-year lows.

Rain in Australia brought drought relief and moisture conditions in the Argentine continued favorable. Early harvests in these countries are expected. Fear of frost in South America was expressed on Friday.

Havelock Is Centre For Mining School

M. E. Hurst, provincial geologist, will conduct a class in mining at Havelock, from November 28 to December 3. A. L. Elliott, M.P.P., said that Havelock had been chosen because it was the centre of mining activity in this part of the province. The studies and demonstration work will enable young men to gain a more definite knowledge about minerals, how to recognize them, and where generally to expect to find them. The Municipal Council of Havelock and H. B. Puffer, clerk, have been co-operating in estimating the number of men who would be interested in this class, and it is believed the attendance will be large. Further announcement will be made later.

SERVICES IN PETERBOROUGH CHURCHES TO-MORROW

Biblical Thoughts For the Shut-Ins

By Rev. E. R. James, Toronto

THE MASTER OF SOUL SICKNESS

Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick of the palsy: Son, they sins be forgiven thee.—St. Matt. 9-2.

County life in its simplicity and neighborliness. Four every-day men decide to bring their friend, who is shaking with palsy, to the great Healer. The house is full and no one intends to move or give up his place. So they carry their friend up the outside steps leading to the flat roof. It is an oriental house and easy to lift the tiles and let down the man into the Presence. Have you tried very hard to bring a close friend into the Presence, suggesting that you call for him next Sunday and take him to church? "Where two or three are gathered together there am I in the midst of them."

He is in the presence of the Prophet, who looks into the eyes of four expectant men who have overcome difficulties for the sake of their friends. They are sure He will heal. "Jesus, seeing their faith." What an inspiration for you to keep on praying for that friend, whose spiritual sight is clouded by sin and whose will is not under his control. "Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today and forever."

The Gospel means good news from God. So the Lord utters the encouraging word: "Son, be of good cheer." Do you go around with a long face and unhappy countenance? It was the outstanding characteristic of the Apostolic and primitive Christians that they were happy people.

The the Lord utters the most surprising word: "Son, thy sins be forgiven thee." Do you see the faces of the scribes and pharisees, the religious leaders, who are sitting close to the Master? Why did Our Lord say this? He looked into the man's eyes. The man is looking into the eyes of the pure One, the Holy One of God. He is no longer thinking of his physical pain. He can stand it, if only he can get rid of the spiritual pain. So he hears the great word of forgiveness. Have you never met someone of outstanding purity and holiness of life and in his presence you could not think of evil and only felt how far you were from him spiritually?

The first great fundamental truth of the Gospel lies in the words: "Son thy sins be forgiven thee." Christ's forgiveness means restoration into the family of the Father. But that is not enough. The proof of your forgiveness must be seen in your life. So the next word is spoken: "Arise and walk." This is the proof of the spiritual change in your life. You have spiritual power to overcome the sin that so easily besets you.

Are you a diligent student of holy Scripture? Read carefully these words: "But that ye may know that the Son of man hat power on earth to forgive sins, then saith He to the sick of the palsy, arise, take up thy bed and go into thine house." Compare it with St. Mark 2:10 and St. Luke 5:24. You will notice that they are practically the same. This means that the evangelists had before them some written account of such great authority that they copied it word for word. It is an extract from that diary kept by some Apostle in the days when he walked with the Master.

Again have you read these words with amazement: "The multitude glorified God, who had given such power unto men." You would like to read: "Unto Him," or "unto the Son of man." But the truthfulness of the narrative lies in the fact that the multitudes looked upon Him as one of themselves. "Is not this the carpenter?" You have here as internal evidence of the accuracy of the story.

Have you a palsied friend? Like the four do your best to bring him into the Presence even though he may think you are a nuisance.

A National Message

The pride of scholarship comes in regarding the resistance of modernists to the British-Israel movement. That also is understandable and measurable.

With toil and trouble the modernists have built for themselves a fabric of teaching. They are very proud of their work. They have been betrayed into thinking that they have spoken the last word on the subject. Naturally, they are annoyed and resist to the utmost of their power when they find their premises not only challenged, but shown to be fallacious.

Although the supposed facts on which they have founded their conclusions have been swept away wholesale, they still cling to their conclusions.

For instance, they assumed some years ago that the Phoenicians invented the art of writing late down in the B.C. years. They assumed that, therefore, Moses could not have written in the day represented as the time of their writings, for the very good reason—as they assumed—the art of writing was not known among the Israelites at that time. Since then they have learnt that the art of writing was old in Moses' day. Yet, while admitting the fact of written literature in those days, they still deny the Mosaic authorship. There is static resistance even to bringing their conclusions up to date with their own knowledge of facts.

Is it any wonder, then, that when the plain facts of British Israel come along and knock down their chimeras which they have called "the products of best scholarship" they should resist?

So we review the situation. We know that we are dealing with facts and truths. We know that they are vital to the well-being of the world. We shall meet the resistance from all quarters, for we know that it is as inevitable as the resistance of water to the progress of the ship, and we know that we shall overcome. God will enable us to turn that very resistance to account as the reformers did; as Bunyan did; as Wesley did; as Booth did; as modern astronomers and physicists have done.

ROMANS 6:15—"What then, shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid."

Picture Sermon Of David Livingstone

The world will never grow tired of its heroes, they give us inspiration and challenges us to noble endeavour.

The pictures will show scenes in Livingstone's life. The horrible slave trade which was such a devastating scourge in Africa in the middle of the 19th century. The discovery of the Victoria Falls. His interview with Queen Victoria when he returned to England. The meeting with Hon. Stanley who was sent out by the New York Herald to find him and bring him home again if possible. The broken down man, weak after repeated attacks of malaria being literally carried across the country when he was unable to walk. The slab put up in his memory in the heart of Africa where he died.

He remained a simple hearted Christian man to the end of his life. Stanley was impressed most of all by his unselfish character, and his intense love of the natives.

In these days when there is much talk about European colonies in Africa it is well to remember the man who opened up the Dark continent for Christianity and commerce. Some people say that the explorer in Livingstone crushed out the missionary. The biographers who have given the most faithful accounts of his work do not bear out this criticism. He prayed and read the Bible every day. When he was beset by a hostile tribe in Januar 1855 he wrote in his journal: "Thank God for His mercies thus far. On Thy word I lean. The cause is Thine". Speaking about the promises of Jesus he said "It is the word of gentleman of the most sacred and strictest honor and there is an end to it."

George Street Church Marks Anniversary

George Street United church will mark off another milestone in its history on Sunday. It surely means something to any community to have a church pass not only the century mark of service but continue to minister in a most effective way to the city and to the church at large.

The church during the last three years has undergone extensive repairs. The trustees have continued their program of beautifying the edifice. The Sunday School hall has been renovated throughout this year, as well as the first and second floors being sanded and polished and a silence mat furnished on the ground floor, adding a great deal to the appearance and also quietness during Sunday School sessions.

The church has had a most successful time during the ministry of its pastor, Rev. M. C. Parr, with increased attendance and all organizations of the church in a most flourishing condition.

The membership of the church has more than maintained its standard through the years, despite losses by death and removal. This has been due to a concerted effort of the minister and session to bring into the fellowship of the church not only those who are newcomers to the city but to encourage the young people to find their place of service within the Christian church.

The pulpit supply committee this year feel it has been fortunate in securing the services of Rev. L. J. Hunter, B.A., B.D., as the guest preacher. Mr. Hunter has been minister of Westmoreland United church, Toronto, for the last ten years and is beloved by his congregation for his energetic service and kindly administration.

The music of the anniversary services is under the able leadership of Mr. Charles Renaud and Mrs. Renaud, who is organist. Mrs. James Goldie, soloist of the church, will render in her capable manner, "The Lord's Prayer," by Malotte. Mrs. Goldie and Mr. Renaud will sing "Forever With the Lord" by Gounod. Anthems for the service include "I Am Apha and Omega" by Stainer with Mrs. Goldie taking the solo part; "Listen to the Lambs" by Dett; "How Lovely are the Messengers" by Mendelssohn; "The Lord Is My Light" by Fletcher, with solo part taken by Mr. G. D. Carlisle.

The general public is most cordially invited to attend the services.

MARMORA

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Dorie and and daughter Nita of Deloro returned home on Sunday after visiting relatives in Toronto, Hamilton and Niagara Falls during the previous week.

Mr. and Mrs. Clinton McGee of Port Hope spent Tuesday in the village.

Rev. Father G. F. Martin of Belleville and Rev. Father W. L. Terrion of Bedford, Ont., were in attendance at the Forty Hours Devotions for the closing exercises, the latter delivering the sermon.

With the united support of the juvenile organization of the village a successful dance was held in the Town Hall on Monday evening. The proceeds went as a nucleus for funds to purchase a new curtain for the stage of the Town Hall. Music was furnished by Jack Grant and his Aces.

Mrs. Pringle of Kingston is visiting relatives here.

Cathedral Musings

It has been demonstrated to the world at large that no nation or community can live to itself alone, how much more so is this true of the individual. We know that in the case of our individual bodies, all the myriads of cells that compose it, have to work in harmony and unison towards the common good, else disease and death follow as a result. So also, in humanity as a whole, each individual, each community, each nation that thinks and acts in terms of self and self-interest is as much a source of danger to the well-being of man, as a like group of cells acting similarly, would be to the human organism. Each is a potential cancer leading towards disintegration and death. The unthinking may say that the analogy is far-fetched, but this is not so. On the contrary, it is a most conservative way of putting it. Why else, in the history of man, have civilizations risen, flourished for a while and then, degenerated by material wealth and its accompanying selfishness and spiritual lassitude, hastened to decay? And what is true of civilizations is true of individuals, is true also of religions and religious institutions. The law of growth lies in the constant effort towards "not-self" in other words, without selfless effort we do not grow. If we take things easy, or if, by reason of material circumstance, things are made easy for us, we cease to struggle, we rest and so resting in self-complacency, we quickly degenerate in our moral and spiritual fibre. It is particularly in our various religions that this is most obvious. It is well said that the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church and there is no doubt but Christianity was most alive, most vitally compelling, when it was most persecuted and most poor in worldly goods. To be willing and eager to face the horrors of the arena necessitated sincerity. To defy the laws of the Roman Empire successfully, demanded, what we lack most today, a very real and practical brotherhood that embraced its members in a unity irrespective of race or social position. Does Christianity today imply such a brotherhood? If not, then wherein is it Christian?

Great Organist To Play In City

Gatty Sellars, the world's great descriptive organist - composer, whose films, records, compositions, have gone all over the world, comes in person to the organ at George Street United Church on Friday, November 11th, when his performance will prove a revelation in the handling of "The King of Instruments" from a descriptive standpoint. Those who have seen and heard the reproduction of such compositions on the screen, on the air, and on the records, will doubtless assemble in large numbers to hear the composer's actual performance. Such compositions have had their first hearing by such bands as the Royal Marines, before Royalty, also H.M. Grenadier and Coldstream Guards' Bands.

Mr. Sellars is the solo organist for the World's Greatest National Band Festival at the Crystal Palace, where he is heard by an audience of fifty thousand and is the composer of this year's "test piece" for one of the great English Band Contests. In over two thousand five hundred recitals in seven years in Europe, North and South America, he has appeared on more organs than any living organist, attracting the largest audiences in the history of most of the cities visited, for an organ recital.

In South America nine appearances were made in the St. John's Pro-Cathedral, Buenos Aires; even then hundreds were unable to gain admission, a remarkable achievement for a single artist.

"BRASS TACKS" ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for October 30 is Ecclesiastics 2: 1-3, 10, 11; Romans 6:17-23; 14-21, the Golden Text being Romans 6:15, "What then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid.")

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

THE FIRST PART of today's lesson is about an ancient philosopher who wanted to find out what would give man the greatest satisfaction in life. He had tried to get pleasure from wisdom, but had been disappointed. Then he tried fun. He denied himself nothing but that, too, he found was unsatisfactory. In fact, carried to excess, pleasure ended in "vanity and vexation of spirit, and there was no profit under the sun," he declared.

October 30 is International Temperance Sunday, and so we, like that philosopher of old, will look around us at people we know and things we can see, and try to find if temperance in all things will bring us the most happiness in life.

Temperance In All Things

We usually think of temperance only in connection with drinking strong liquors to excess. But we can be intemperate also in everything we do. We can work too hard, play too hard, eat and drink too much and make ourselves ill, or "lower our resistance," as the physicians say. We can laugh too much and cry immoderately; we can even love too much, and surely we can hate too much.

None of these things is good for us. "All is vanity and vexation of spirit," as the philosopher found. "To live by law, acting the law we live by without fear," as Tennyson, the English poet said, is the happiest thing for all of us. We cannot do just as we feel like doing. We cannot have all the things we want, without reference to whether they will hurt other people, and really gain happiness. Robinson Crusoe was wrecked on a desert island, you remember. He could do as he liked while he was alone. But after a while he found a companion, his man Friday. And then he had to consider him and set a good example.

For the things we do may not only hurt ourselves, but may be copied by those weaker than ourselves. If, in our homes, we are disobedient and bad-tempered, we not only make our parents suffer, but the other members of the family may feel they can break the laws of the home, too. And we are not even happy when we are bad. We suffer also.

In the world at large, in our own country, in our town or neighborhood, as well as in our families, there would be anarchy, which is a condition in which everyone does what he feels like doing, without following any rules. And who would be happy in that sort of a world?

Sometimes it is very hard for us to do what is right. We are afraid people will laugh at us or shame us before others when we say we cannot do something — like drinking strong liquor or disobeying the rules of our homes or schools. We need courage to stand for our principles.

"They are slaves who fear to speak
For the fallen or the weak:
They are slaves who dare not be
In the right with two or three."

So, not only for our own happiness, but to help others to obtain the "eternal life" the Bible speaks of, we must learn to be good citizens — temperate in our ways, clean of person and of soul. "Wisdom excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkness."

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND WHERE THEY END

Scripture—Ecclesiastes 2: 1-3, 10, 11; Romans 6:17-23; 14:21.

By Alfred J. Buescher

Laying wisdom aside the philosopher seeks pleasure in wine drinking. "Whatsoever mine eyes desired I kept not from them, I withheld not my heart from any joy."

He found "all was vanity and vexation of spirit, and there was no profit under the sun" in so living, "for the end of those things is death."

The apostle Paul advises that it is good to refuse drink, if not for your own sake, for someone who may be weak and suffer from your example.

Obeying the rules laid down for a good and temperate life you receive "the gift of God—eternal life," because you are "free from sin."

Working For Wages

Toronto has a proposal for taking care of single unemployed men. There is considerable harbor property which needs to be levelled and put in proper shape and the plan is that the young men shall go and work there and in return receive "their keep."

So far there has been no enthusiasm displayed. The men say they do not want to work that way and they call it a form of slavery. They do not want to remain in hostels and receive their meals and bed in return for work. Their claim is that such labor should be paid for. Of all the men who had anything to say there was none who would not work. Their suggestion is that if they were allowed to work with pick and shovel for even two days per week at 45 cents per hour they would be able to leave the hostels and be off the relief list. If they worked eight hours per day that would give them only $7.20 per week and yet they say then can live on that much in Toronto and ask no further help.

The time must come when we are going to get away from so much stress being put on relief and relief work and a start will have to be made soon. Just what it will cost to keep these young men in Toronto by providing them with board and room in return for work is something on which we have seen no figures presented but the men claim they can get by on two days per week at 45 cents per hour. Some place there should be a break made to get back to the normal plan of paying a man for the work he does.

Brantford Is Cautious

Brantford owns a municipal railway, but like nearly every other city has found it does not amount to much today, so it has considered buses. Apparently the folk who run affairs in Brantford are not plungers, for the decision has been made to experiment with the bus business for three months, and apparently some arrangement has been made for such experiment without making it necessary for the city to do any purchasing unless the experiment is to its liking.

We believe Brantford will find the bus system quite all right. In these days when there is much traffic it is preferable to have the bus pulling in to the curb at the corners rather than to have passengers walking out to the centre of the road to board a street car. Nor do the buses impede other traffic the same as street cars. Peterborough went out of the street car business about twelve years ago and we have adequate coverage with good bus service in its place. Brantford's idea of experimenting for three months is not bad. Perhaps if all our cities had been as cautious before spending their money financial conditions would be better today for the taxpayers.

Learning From Dictators

Instead of staying awake nights worrying about what Hitler had done and intends doing, the people of Britain have learned the lesson that it is better for them to start considering their own affairs with the idea of making their nation stronger and better and happier.

That is the gist of what Floyd S. Chalmers writes in the Financial Post on his return from Germany and England. In the hectic pre-Munich days Mr. Chalmers considered it advisable to leave Berlin for London, and one is hardly moved to question the wisdom of his choice. We quote:

"England is not too proud to learn even from dictatorships. Before I left England ten days ago I found men and women in all walks of life demanding to know how they could serve the State. They wanted to serve it voluntarily, not by compulsion. They wanted to implant in a democracy the spirit of individual self-sacrifice and the will to work that has restored Germany to a position of might among the nations."

Mr. Chalmers admits he does not like Nazism and he has not been able to come to the point where he is ready to question the articles of faith as enunciated by democracy. But he is not blind to the effect of Hitler's methods on the people of his own country. Referring to Germany he says:

"But it is not all compulsion in Germany. There is much that is just and fair and inspiring in Hitler's remarkable organization of the Reich. The German people are proud of their state, proud of their children's organizations, their youth corps, their labor battalions, their women's service fronts. They love to work and are happy that, as they work, they build a greater Germany."

Germany has nothing to match the dole as it is known in England, and it has nothing parallel to our relief system in Canada. They have no people wandering about the country sleeping where night finds them and looking to others to help them buy meals. And one need only be honest to admit they must have a method which is superior to ours.

But the big item is here: Britain has turned from worrying about Hitler to the more serious and pointed occupation of considering herself and actually that narrows the thing down to our own situation. We have a railway problem in Canada and we have had it for years and it has been allowed to grow into a political problem because our public men fear the size of the railway vote. We have a tremendous amount of machinery in this country built up to care for those who suffer from unemployment, but our schemes, separately or combined, do not put people at work. Out of these grows a financial problem and one of the chief occupations of municipal, provincial and federal governments has become the finding of new methods of taking more money from the same people whose capacity for paying has not increased.

We have no room for Hitler nor Hitlerism in this country; we have no patience for the miserable things which have been done at times under his auspices, but we are not so blind that we cannot see he has provided a species of leadership which has restored a broken nation to a position of power and where the people are all working.

When The Test Comes

Following a football game in Ottawa in an interscholastic league a concerted attack was made on the referee and umpire. These officials although not seriously injured were generously punched about the head.

Probably one team did not like the decisions, and it may be the decisions at times were faulty. But what of it? There is not a referee or umpire in existence who follows football, hockey or baseball and call the plays 100 per cent. It just can't be done that way. Those fellows who are right out on the field call the decisions as they see them at short range and for the most part they see more than the people who are in the bleachers. They are not bought up and it makes no difference to them which team wins.

We have seen the same thing happening in our own city and we are a fairly civilized lot of people here. It is easy enough to applaud when the breaks in the game seem to be coming to the home team; the ump or the referee is a great chap then; he knews his business. The real test of good sportmanship comes when the other team seems to get the breaks.

Saying The Right Thing

There are times when one is inclined to differ with Premier Hepburn; on other occasions it is not possible to disagree. The reason for the disagreement may be widely scattered, but the reason for the present agreement comes because Mr. Hepburn is not afraid to say what he thinks.

A delegation of strikers from Port Colborne made a request that Provincial Police be withdrawn. The answer was that the provincial police were sent there at the request of municipal officials and as long as there was fighting the police would remain right there.

The Premier had in his possession a circular which called upon strikers to "bring out your wives and children relatives and friends to join the picket line." His answer to that was plain:

"When you start pushing women and children into the picket lines it is not only illegal, but it brands the men as squaw men and cowards. If they want to start a fight with the police let them leave the women and children at home."

After which Mr. Hepburn said he would use every good office which the government could control to investigate and seek for an early settlement of the trouble. He seems to have said the right thing all the way through.

And There Was No Charge

There was an announcement in the papers the other day about the care of the feet, and no doubt a good many people would read it because the number of persons who have trouble with their feet is rather large. There was some advice on what to do with the feet, and also instruction on what to wear, and lastly something about the perfect insole and the perfect shoe. The combination gave what was called perfect foot comfort.

We recall having seen a gentleman working on something like that in a city in the Southern States. Apparently he did business with people who had money to spend in goodly quantities. The wayfaring person would be out of his element in his premises. He explained exactly what was done starting with the impression of the bare foot until finally there was produced what he called the perfect insole. And for that he would expect to collect $42 to $47. He said it was the maximum degree in foot comfort.

Wherein he was wrong. On the Tenth Concession the boys went in bare feet during the late spring, summer and even the early fall; went that way to school in June and again for the early part of September. Travelled so many weeks in bare feet that even a field of stubble hurt not in the least.

But it was in the evening after a hot day had passed that one came to experience the utmost in foot comfort. There was one chore to be attended to then to which it was not possible to raise objection and that was going down the road to the store and postoffice to see if there was any mail. Probably there would be none; possibly a bulletin from the government telling grandfather how to run the farm. But there would always be a crowd there and the steps outside the store was a pleasant place to sit while some person played the mouth organ and the hired man took the bones from his pocket. He clicked them well indeed.

In the hours of evening the hot earth had started to cool and the dust lay deep and heavy along the Tenth; it was the product of the wheels of buggies and wagons and the feet of horses. As bare feet touched it in the evening it was cooler than when the sun had beaten upon it at noon; it seemed to show a kindly tendency to squeeze up between the toes. It was much better walking there than along the side of the road where the gravel had been pushed. And it was soft and altogether delightful. We maintain that right there was the highest degree in foot comfort and there was no charge of $42 or $47 for it; in fact there was no charge at all.

Comparing Prices

L. E. Hubbard, London, writing in Pacific Affairs gives an interesting and significant comparison of prices in Soviet Russia and in England. He says:

The following prices are partly derived from the decrees fixing the prices of foodstuffs and partly from prices actually collected by independent observers in shops in Moscow and other towns.

	Russia	London
Wheat bread per quartern loaf	.52	.16 to .18
Butter per pound	1.68	.32
Sugar per pound	.28	.07
Tea per pound	8.16	.56
Beef (average cut) per pound	.78	.28
A man's ready-made suit of woollen cloth, poor quality	83.30	19.50
A pair of men's shoes, leather	29.40	4.90
A man's shirt, calico,	7.20	2.50

It is also instructive to consider these prices in relation to the average Soviet yearly wage converted into Canadian money. The equivalent of R 3,000 at the official rate of exchange is about $551.20. Imagine an English working man earning about $10.30 a week being asked to pay the above prices. It must also be remembered that the quality of the Russian goods is much inferior to that of English goods at the prices quoted. For instance the man's suit would in material and finish, correspond more to the $7.20 "reach-me-down" in a poor port of East London than to the $20.00 ready-made sold by the mass-production tailors."

NOTE AND COMMENT

October has been such a pleasant fellow around the house that we rather regret to see him depart.

Premier Chamberlain expects the resignation of any cabinet minister who is not prepared to agree with him on the Munich settlement. Is it possible that this rather mild-mannered Englishman has had a few private conversations with Chancellor Hitler on how to operate a government?

HUSBAND

¶ My nephew Lucas I admire, in business he will rise up higher, quite recently he wed; his bride was not the kitchen kind, that bothered not his peace of mind, he loved the girl he wed.

¶ He urged her gently here and there, he'd sit upon a kitchen chair, and tell her she could cook; at last she said that she would try, and went next day where she could buy, the latest kind of book.

¶ She picked on biscuits for that day, did everything the book might say, avoided each mistake; she cut them out and fixed a tin, at proper time she put them in, and then she watched them bake.

¶ When Lucas came that night for tea, he was as proud as man could be, he praised his little bride; no one could do a job like that, he said so while he hung his hat, and he was full of pride.

¶ When Lucas tried the biscuits though, they felt like little lumps of dough, but never did he stall; nor did he chant a hymn of hate, but said her baking was just great, and he devoured them all.

¶ But after he had had his tea, he felt as strange as man could be, he thought he had the chills; but no complaint had Lucas said, the drug store was his goal instead—and there he bought some pills.

• Being First Lord Quite A Job

THERE is an empty chair in Britain's Cabinet room. A new man has to be appointed to fill the position of First Lord of the Admiralty now that Mr. Duff Cooper has resigned.

He will get £5,000 a year (with luxurious house). The magnificent Admiralty yacht, the Enchantress, will be at his disposal.

The salary probably seems attractive to you, but a good First Lord earns and spends every penny of it. He is the representative of the Navy in Parliament, responsible for the direction and supervision of all naval matters, with power to promote and discharge, recommend honors and awards.

He is very much the Boss of the British Navy.

His responsibility is so great that he has a little Cabinet of his own, the Board of Admiralty, to advise and direct him. Though he is not compelled to take the Board's advice—he usually does. On the Board sit Britain's Sea Lords—first, second third, fourth, and the recently appointed fifth—the big executives of the Navy.

The house that goes with the job is a much finer place than either No. 10 or No. 11 Downing Street. It stands at the southeast corner of the Admiralty building in Whitehall. Its rooms are spacious and beautifully furnished. The drawing-room has unique furniture — chairs, tables, couches with legs and arms carved in the shape of dolphins. Lord Nelson's body once rested there.

A connecting door links the house with the Admiralty itself. The First Lord has access to every room in this, London's most exciting building. There is Room 40, for instance the eyes and ears of the world.

Here cipher wireless messages, intercepted from the enemy, were decoded during the war. Today the Admiralty's most trusted and talented men sit there, linked by radio with the ships and ports of the seven seas. Messages, secret and confidential, pass through their hands. They are just a few of the First Lord's 4,000 staff.

There is the superb Admiralty library, too, if the First Lord feels like reading. Not ordinary reading, though. A hundred thousand books and documents giving details of almost every naval engagement ever fought. Charts and maps and plans to bewilder you.

And if you want to get away from the stuffy air of Whitehall there is the yacht already mentioned. It is a long-standing tradition that the First Lord is free to use the yacht as he wishes in the performance of his duties. Mr. Duff Cooper drew fire for his Baltic cruise, you remember.

The Enchantress is finer than any rich man's ship. It is the Admiralty afloat, equipped, as the cinema posters say, "regardless of expense."

The first Lord has a busy job. There are dinners, banquets, luncheons to preside at, speeches to make, and naval manoeuvres to attend. There are admirals to interview and inventions to be considered. There is the all-important question of the £ s. d. of running the Navy. And, finally, there is the task of telling Parliament and, through Parliament, the people all about it.

UNPREPARED.

(Sunday Express, London)

THE MOST SERIOUS part of our unpreparedness was shown in our relations with the Dominions. It is well known that people were disappointed. They expected more encouragement and more support from the Dominions. They did not get it. And this is our work fault, and not the fault of our Dominions. It is due to the weakness of our foreign policy over the past years. For the foreign policy of Great Britain should involve at every step the cooperation and accord of the big partners who strengthen and uphold the whole Empire. No. We were not prepared. But if we learn the lesson; if we are resolute in repairing the gaps in our defences; if we labor to multiply the fruits of our oil; if we now and here decide to undertake no commitments and to make no pledges without the approval of the Dominions, then it can be said that out of evil will come good.

SAFETY FIRST.

(Detroit Free Press)

AMERICAN AIRLINES have taken a very sensible step to prevent accidents during the cold weather flying season.

They have agreed to stop competitive flying when weather conditions are dangerous.

All rival lines, that is to say, will cancel scheduled flights on a specified route if the dispatcher for any line using that route decides flying conditions are not safe.

Safety is what the airlines seek, safety for their property and for the lives and property of passengers and shippers, and they have discovered that most crashes that have hampered the growth of their business have occurred during periods of difficult flying weather.

The decision to pool their intereste in this connection, and not to gamble with death in an effort to beat the ther fellow, should have the effect of still further increasing public confidence in plane travel.

KEEPSAKE.

(The New Yorker)

A FRIEND OF OURS who is normal in every respect but his height (five feet one inch) went shopping, as circumstances have forced him to, in the boys' department of a large store the other day and was on his way out when a salesman caught him by the sleeve. "You forgot your balloon", he said, with a big, brotherly smile. "Goes with every purchase, you know." Before our friend realized what was happening, he was out on the street with a package in one hand and a large red balloon, with a cat's face painted on it, in the other. It had ears, too.

NOT "MILCH COW."

(Ottawa Journal)

ONTARIO, IN ANY event, is not a "milch cow". Nor Quebec. When Mr. Hepburn says that it is, and when Mr. Macaulay agrees with him, they are being misled by statistics they have not examined. There are, for example, income tax figures. As published from time to time they show most of income tax payments coming from Montreal and Toronto districts. If Mr. Hepburn and Mr. Macaulay would take the trouble to ask Mr. Fraser Elliott, of the Income Tax Branch of the Government, or Mr. R. S. Coats, Dominion Statistician, or Dr. Clark, Deputy Minister of Finance, the real explanation of this, they might use their "milch cow" argument less loosely.

FIRST PHONE CALL.

(Telephone News)

AN INQUIRING reporter recently interviewed five people chosen at random and asked if they could remember their first telephone call. The answers were amazing. Because the thrill of it was so great, all but one could recall the experience as if it happened yesterday. The fifth "took the telephone for granted, like street cars, radio, airplanes, motor cars—all are common-place now."

Of the others, one said, "I could hardly speak, and could not hear from excitement." Another stated, "When I heard a voice speak to me over it, I got a funny feeling which is hard to describe." A Hamilton subscriber when 12 years old answered the telephone for the first time to hear of the assassination of President McKinley. Can you remember your first telephone call?

OF LITTLE HELP.

(Stratford Beacon-Herald)

ONLY TOO TRUE, it seems to us, is this comment by the Edinburgh Scotsman: "The grasping character of the Nazi demands for territory in Czechoslovakia, coupled with the truculent speech and sneers at Great Britain made by Herr Hitler, have done much to dispel the popular belief that Mr. Chamberlain's intervention had brought about a more friendly feeling between Germany and this country. The methods of dictators are certainly not the ways of diplomacy and conciliation, and the later developments have had but one effect in Great Britain in hardening the resolve that this country must be in a position that alone can uphold British prestige."

IN ALBERTA, TOO!

(Calgary Albertan)

THE KING AND QUEEN, visiting Canada next year, will, of course be the guests of this province during their stay here. Specially their host will be their representative, the Lieutenant Governor.

Precisely at this point something of a problem arises in Alberta. For our provincial legislators at last session closed Government House in a magnificent outburst of what they represented to be public economy and left His Honor to make his own housing arrangements.

This is the situation George VI and Queen Elizabeth are likely to find awaiting them when they arrive in Edmonton. Where is Edmonton going to ask the royal guests to stay? At a hotel?

JOURNALISTIC BONE.

(Simcoe Reformer)

A CLASSIC EXAMPLE of prevailing ignorance on the part of certain United States newspapers regarding the Dominion of Canada was that perpetrated by the Buffalo Evening News when commenting on the influx of Canadians into that city on Thanksgiving Day. . . . Said the News: "The Canadian Thanksgiving day marks the anniversary of granting of dominion status to Canada in 1867" . . . We can forgive lack of knowledge on the part of Americans who live a long way south and who have read and heard little about Canada, but when an outstanding newspaper in a border city commits a "faux pas" of this nature, we can only look to it in amazement.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

Hear thou, my son, and be wise, and guide thine heart in the way. Be not among wine-bibbers; among riotous eaters of flesh; for the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty: and drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags....

Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babbling? who hath wounds without cause who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine: they that go to seek mixed wine....At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder. —Prov. xi, 5; xxiii, 19-21, 29, 30, 32.

To The Editor

DISAGREES

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—To me as to many more readers of the Examiner your editorials are very interesting and instructive, but I fail to see eye to eye with you in your editorial "Outside The Law" dealing with the scab worker. You claim neither is it right to call such a worker a "scab" owing to it being possible to take action with good chances of success for the use of the word.

My interpretation on this point of the law is, you must prove to the satisfaction of the court you have suffered loss when seeking employment branded as a scab. This is not likely to take place from the fact that the more they come the better the employer likes them.

Sweet Earth, be kind to him whom we bring thee,
Breezes blow gently above this dear grave.
Bowed in our sorrow our lives we surrender,
Only the joy for his spirit we crave.

Knowing the greatness of Love e'er he left us
Brings with each heart-beat new memories to hold.
Open ye gates to the glory of heaven,
Ne'er can the worth of a true man be told.

Bridle with beauty white horses of heaven,
Sing on ye Angels wherever ye roam.
Ride on in majesty, Thou King Eternal,
Ring bells of rapture; A Saint has gone home.

South Africa Prepared To Fight To Keep Colonies In Empire

WINDHOEK, South Africa, Oct. 28.—(C P -Reuters)— A wide section of the population of South west Africa, including both English and Afrikaans, is believed determined to resist any move that might be made to return the territory to Germany.

It is recalled that spokesmen of the Union of South Africa Government have made repeated statements that the future of the territory is inalienably bound with the Union. Oswald Pirow, South African Defence Minister, has declared the Union would fight for Southwest Africa if necessary.

Opponents of transfer of the territory of Germany feel that economically and strategically Southwest Africa is bound up with the Union of South Africa. It is realized that unlike Czechoslovakia, South Africa would not have to face demands from Germany, backed up by force of arms on its boundaries.

But the anti-German section is uneasy at the possibility of Germany applying pressure in the form South Africa to give up the territory.

Many Would Leave.

Inquiries indicate many South Africans would leave Southwest Africa if it actually was turned over to Germany. They believe Germany wants the territory merely as a stepping-stone towards Germanization of the whole Union.

It is estimated that 40 per cent of the German-speaking South Africans are opposed to transfer of Southwest Africa to the Reich. Most of them are naturalized British subjects, either automatically or by application.

The remaining 60 per cent of the Germans are mostly unnaturalized and comprise chiefly recent immigrants and the younger generation. They include some rather lukewarm supporters of National Socialism who derive satisfaction from Germanys growth into a first-class power again.

Germans Organize

BERLIN, Oct. 28 (CP-Reuters)— A pledge to strive for return of Germany's colonies was read at a meeting of the Berlin branch of the Reich colonial league while the entire audience remained standing.

"We promise the fuehrer to use the same energy as displayed by our historical forerunners to regain the colonial possessions which they acquired in order that our national humiliation may be removed."

Meanwhile Chancellor Hitler, it is learned here, looks to Great Britain to put forward proposals for settlement of the colonial question. No demand is expected from the German side as the fuehrer is regarded as having made his request when he told Prime Minister Chamberlain at Godesberg:

"There is one awkward question, the colonies, but that is not a matter for war. There will be no mobilization about that."

German circles declared grave difficulties are likely to be created if the subject is prejudiced, before negotiations have been started, by statements by South African ministers and others, which are circulated throughout the international press, that the return of Southwest Africa and Tanganyika cannot be entertained.

By MAX TRELL

All the toys in the playroom felt sorry for Mary-Jane, the rag doll.

"Just think!" Mr. Punch said to Hanid and Knarf, the two shadow-children, who happened to come into the playroom as all the toys were talking. "It's been more than six months since poor Mary-Jane has had any new clothes."

"She's been wearing that same red gingham dress ever since the beginning of spring," said Judy, who was Mr. Punch's wife.

"Poor, poor Mary-Jane!" everyone said. "She must be very unhappy."

She's Not Unhappy.

The two shadow-children hurried over to her. "Are you very unhappy?" they asked her.

"Oh, no!" Mary-Jane answered, trying hard to smile (she couldn't smile very well because most of the paint that gave her a face had worn away). "I'm not unhappy at all."

"But everyone says you must be unhappy," Knarf said.

"Yes, I know," said Mary-Jane. "But still, I'm not unhappy."

"But you ought to be!"

"Oh, no! If I had a new dress like the China Doll has—all frills and ribbons—I'd really be unhappy."

"Why?" the two shadows asked in surprise.

"Because then the children wouldn't play with me the way they do now. You see, they don't care what happens to my dress. So they take me with them wherever they go. They let me play in all their games. If I had a beautiful new dress they'd say: 'Oh, dear! We must let Mary-Jane stay home. We don't want her dress to get spoiled.' That's what they say about the China Doll."

"Oh, no! I'm not unhappy at all."

"That's right," Hanid and Knarf agred.

"I like to go with the children just as I am. I like them to pick me up and carry me, put me down when they're tired and pick me up again. I like to be near them. And that's just what they do. And even when they toss me in a corner, I know they'll be back again in the morning to look for me and to take me up and say: "Good-morning, Mary-Jane. We like you because you're so plain and comfortable. So, you see, I'm almost the happiest doll in the world."

And I guess she is, don't you?

Looking Back
On This Date

In the archives of the privy council of Canada there is an historical document, the role of privy councillors from the creation of the Dominion in 1867. Its orgin is interesting, Sir John Macdonald had evidently been in some dilemma as to the proper course to pursue, because Lord Monck, in a letter dated October 29, 1868, took the view that "My invitation to each member to come forward and take the oaths at the council table would be considered a sufficient 'summoning' to meet the requirements of the Act of Union. The book of the clerk of the council in which the members subscribe the oaths, would in itself constitute a roll of the council; yet if that is not considered sufficient I see now no difficulty in now making out a roll of the names of all persons sworn of the council since the Act of Union came into operation, and I could place my signature opposite each name. It might be in this form.

Roll of the P. C. of Canada

"I think it is better to make no allusion in the roll to the summons. The act prescribes no mode of performing this process and the fact that each man has been sworn by me seems to imply that the summons has been given in some manner."

Although this was in 1868 there must have been some prior roll, because the records of the privy council show that 13 were sworn of the council on July 1, 1867. Presumably these were copied into the roll of which Lord Monck wrote over a year later. The first two names of privy councillors of the Dominion of Canada were those of Sir John A. Macdonald, K. C. B. (knighted that day), and George E. Cartier, these two typifying the union of the two races, British-Canadian and French-Canadian, brought together by the Act of Union.

By HELEN WELSHIMER

CHAPTER 34

YOU CAN DO many things while your heart is breaking. You can eat, you can sleep, you can smile and gesture and talk. Sometimes you can do it so well that no one guesses that you are a marionette, performing on a lot of invisible strings.

Once more she was acclaimed. Those same reporters who had been so quick to seize her picture when she had been connected with the Danceland story, welcomed the opportunity to herald the design contest. They told the public that she would be as assistant to Cordelli. They discovered her hotel address, printed it, and telephone calls, notes, invitations, flowers from old friends who had not known where she was, came in.

Judy was too tired at night to think. Now and then a crooked smile and the flash of a pair of gray eyes would puncture a dream and she would waken, remembering.

Judy had a pile of clippings of her own venture. She paid no attention to her father's come-back, though the stories sometimes linked that event with her own success. He had pushed her away when she had needed him. She would not go home.

She did move, though. This time she chose an apartment in an old red brick house in the lower twenties, east of Fifth avenue. She had the top floor rooms—a great, beamed living room with a fireplace that was flanked by book shelves, dormer windows that opened on the street, a smaller bedroom, and a kitchenette. She had been given the bedroom suite, the chaise lounge, the desk and lounging chairs of her own room at the apartment, as a gift, so she sent for them with no twinge of conscience.

When everything was ready, Judy went down the street to a flower stand and bought lavishly—purple violets whose blooming was limited to a night; fragile yellow roses; an armful of old-fashioned flowers. She bought candles, too.

She had a home.

Not a place to stay until it was time to join her mother in some hotel abroad. Not a room in an American hotel where she could remain until her credit was exhausted. Not a bed in somebody's house for a span of days. A home.

A home, work, peace—these were the crying needs of the human heart and they were hers. She did not mention love, though she knew that the term waited, just out of reach. She must work, work, work—

The bell which announced visitors rang, and she pressed the button which released the great front door, four flights down. She leaned over the railing, looking into the dim well of the stairs, and said: "Who is it, please."

"The Press!" a cheerful voice answered.

"In battle formation. We want pictures."

"Editor's orders. The public wants to see how you're doing."

"The public doesn't care a hoot! You pack up those picture-taking boxes and right about face—" She laughed as she said it.

There were five young men in the group, two of them reporters, three of them cameramen.

They came in. They took pictures, and Judy entered the spirit of it.

There was one tall boy, with rust-brown hair and gray eyes oddly like Ronald's. He was the merriest of the group.

"You haven't had a house warming?" he asked. "That will never do! I move we undo that damage at once. Peter, there's a delicatessen over on Sixth avenue—get cold chicken and ham and potato salad—you know the menu, Jimmy. . . ."

He gave orders, and presently Judy and the five were facing a table filled with food.

It was all so gay, so comfortable, so informal that she relaxed. In that Park avenue world you dressed for every party. You wore one frock to a tea and rushed home to change to a dinner or dance ensemble.

Judy sat in a deep chair as the logs burned in the fireplace. One of the reporters had known a firewood station, at the edge of Greenwich Village, where a quarter would buy enough timber to keep the fire going for a couple of evenings.

Suddenly someone gave a whistle of complete surprise.

"It's nearly 10 o'clock!"

"Goodby, Judy, we'll see you often!"

"The same. Do you know him?"

They were putting on coats, adjusting cameras and papers.

"Very slightly. What has he done?"

"He's marrying a pretty widow this evening and sailing away on her yacht through the wintry waters to Bermuda."

"Mrs. Bedford?" asked Judy.

"Yeah! Where did you learn so much?"

"I heard something about it."

"There was an heiress but that plopped, and he and the widow Bedford seemed made for each other. The Boland child is making eyes at the attorney in the Griffith Steel jamboree." The boy who resembled Ronald said that. His name was Bob Cushing and he gripped Judy's hand as he left. He was a special assignment man.

"I want to see you soon—and often."

Later Judy wondered why he had come along that night. She did not know then that he had been at Toni's, one of the newspapers hangouts, when the four others came in, wondering where and why to find Judy Rogers before they went after the count. Through much telephoning around they obtained her address. With a loose evening on his hands, Bob Cushing decided to join the party.

He had seen Judy's pictures and liked the tilt of her nose, the upward slant of her laughing eyes. Here was a girl who could take what life dished out! He would like to know her.

However, he wanted to see Count Phillippe before he sailed so he could not remain with Judy when his confreres left. He held her hand a second in leaving and his amused eyes surveyed the remains of the feast.

"There's enough for breakfast and dinner tomorrow night. If you'll wait, I'll drop by and help with the dishes."

Judy did not think he would. She was amazed the next evening when his shining head appeared on the stairs, in answer to her release of the door catch.

"I came you see," he said. "I even brought some tea towels. I didn't think you had any."

"You wrote the kindest story about me that anyone ever did," she greeted him. "I'm so grateful I'll fry you two eggs and a rasher of bacon. You gave me credit for being a person, with a desire to earn my way, instead of somethat glitters in reflected light."

Bob Cushing was not writing a book. He had no wish to do a play. He might delve into biography some day. He took life as it came, laughed a great deal more than most people of his age or profession, and fell a little in love with Judy.

But he did not mention it, and she divined it in small things, only. He sent her a flower a day in a small red box—one morning a snow white camellia; another, when he had just been paid, a purple orchid; once a nosegay of sweet peas.

He introduced her to others of his own group who welcomed her eagerly. She was busy with her work. Cordelli was considerate and appreciative. Her home was real, rafter and wall and hearth. She was a person in her own right.

It was Bob who gave her the next news of Ronald.

SOURIS, Man., Oct. 28 (CP)— Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, national Conservative leader, journeyed to Winnipeg today after winding up his western tour with an attack on Liberal government policies in a federal by-election campaign address here. Dr. Manion speaks in Winnipeg today.

Before 200 persons in the community hall here last night he charged that "the present government has shown almost no recognition of the social problems' Youth was faced with lack of opportunity, able men had no employment and no security for the aged existed out still the present administration "just floated with the times."

Dr. Manion who spoke in behalf of George Beaubier, Conservative candidate in the by-election Nov. 14, maintained the government showed "no concern for our youth, the relief problem of our workless."

"I say here tonight that unless we correct these conditions—as I propose to do when I reach power—this system will be upset and some group of theorists or radicals will wreck the whole machine."

He attacked what he described as the government's policy of dumping wheat on the world market because "even gold will go down in price when it is dumped on the market." Other grains were slipping in price because of this policy.

Lots of Time Needed.

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, according to Dr. Manion, declared in a Souris speech Wednesday night, that a combine of manufacturers was responsible for the high cost of farm machinery. The minister promised the Government would act in this connection, but Dr. Manion said "they might get around to it" if they were in office another 10 years.

"Do you remember Mr. King telling you in 1935 of trusts, mergers and combines he was going to wipe out of existence? Here we have Mr. Gardiner complaining of them under Mr. King's government," the Conservative leader said.

DOROTHY DIX

Be sure you can attune your mind to fit perfectly into his life and domestic habits before you take the steps of marrying a widower especially if he has children.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a young woman in love with a widower who has two small sons. He can give me every luxury, but there are two things that make me doubt the wisdom of marrying him. One is that I shall expect my husband fully to return my affection, but as he has been married before, could he earnestly and sincerely do this? Also, the thought the he has belonged to another woman and is the father of her children maddens me. The other objection is that I am very independent and cannot bear to think of giving up my freedom. What shall I do? JANE.

Answer:

It does not seem to me that you are cut out for a widowers wife. To begin with, the woman who marries a widower should be big and broad-minded enough to accept the fact of his previous marriage without jealousy. As you are not able to do so, that is disqualification No. 1.

Of course, no man can have for his second wife the romantic love that he gave his first. That belongs to youth, and can be no more conjured up again than can any other boyish illusion, so the second wife has to reconcile herself to that. Experience takes the edge off any experience, and the man who has been married and who has learned to adjust himself to domesticity, and who has gone to housekeeping, comes into matrimony a second time as a professional and not as an amateur To him no second bride can be the awesome and wonderful creature that his girl bride was to him. Nor can setting up a new establishment give him the thrill that he got out of buying his first pots and pans chairs and tables.

Of course, it isn't in any woman who loves a man to feel a pang of regret that she shouldn't have been his first wife and share those first experiences with him, but there is gain as well as loss in being a No. 2 wife. For the mere fact that a man has been married once fits him better for it a second time. Like the hero of Mr. Kipling's story, who learned about women from every lady he loved, the widower has obtained a liberal education about the feminine sex and how to handle it from his first wife. He is housebroken, so to speak, and, particularly, he is bill-broken.

He doesn't think, as the youthful bridegroom does, that a wife must be a miracle worker who can run a home on air. Widowers are proverbially good providers. And having had experience of women's moods and tenses, they are able to distinguish between temper and nerves. They know enough not to argue when a woman wakes up with a jumping headache, and have the sense put on their hats and make a sneak of it when she ties up her head and starts in on a day's cleaning.

And not infrequently, although the widower may not give his second wife the romantic love which he gave his first wife, he gives her a deeper passion, for the first love may have been just a hobbledehoy affection that he outgrew, while his second love is the full abiding love of his manhood.

So don't marry a widower if you are going to be jealous of his first wife; and don't marry any man if your freedom looks better to you than he does Because a woman's personal liberty is the one offering that marriage invariably requires her to sacrifice. The wife must give up her time, her thoughts, her attention, her pleasures, her desires and tastes to her husband and children. There is no getting around that. It is the very essence of the marriage bond.

Furthermore, don't marry your widower unless you love children and determined to be a real mother to your husband's little boys. There is no crime greater than that of being a cruel or neglectful stepmother.

Dear Miss Dix—No one loves me. I haven't a friend in the world Every day is the same old thing—get up and eat and go to bed and start over again the next day. How can I find something worth while in life? LONLEY.

Answer:

If nobody loves you and you have no friends, it is your own fault and you have only yourself to blame. The world is full of people who are just sloshing over with affection that they are ready to bestow on any one who will let them.

But in order to be loved you have to be lovable. You have to be sweet and amiable and easy to get along with. And if you are to have friends you have to be friendly. You must be willing to do things for other people to give them pleasure. You must literally weep with those who weep and rejoice with those who rejoice.

So suppose you start out and cultivate people. Don't wait for them to make all the advances. Go to see them. Make yourself pleasant and entertaining. Listen to bores. Remember anniversaries. Send people flowers, especially when they are sick. Do the thousand little things for others that you would like to have them do for you, and watch them respond.

You say each day is like each preceding day—eating, sleeping, getting up in the morning and going to bed at night. Life is bound to be routine, but you can put in a lot of interesting things between the breakfast bell and the dinner gong. What you need is work. Get some absorbing occupation that will keep you so busy that the days will go by in a flash and never be half long enough to get done all that you want to do.

And don't forget this, that we take out of life only what we put into it. If you put love and friendship into it, you get love and friendship out of it. Also, your work will be a boresometa sk to you or a thrilling adventure in accordance with the spirit with which you go about it.

Mr. Brett, a former St. John's Sunday School teacher and now representing the Canadian Churchman, gave a short address to the group. It was decided to buy a picture of the delegates to the provincial conference and have it framed to hang in the Parish Hall.

After a few games the members enjoyed a short dance. Next Wednesday is the Hallowe'en party at which the Normal students will be entertained.

ST. LUKE'S BRANCH

Hope, Art Sayers, Ralph Mason and W. Hill. The branch will have as its guests the branches from Westwood and Lakefield. After the business was over Mrs. Curtis and her group took charge of the meeting which consisted of round table discussions on the recent conference. The opinions were many and different but all came to the conclusion that each and every member who had attended the sessions knew more about the A.Y.P.A. and its work.

Members are reminded of the Corporate Communion Sunday morning. Please make an effort to be present.

All attending the party Thursday night are to be in costume or will pay a fine.

Testifies at Trial

Mrs. Kate Moog Busch testified at the New York spy trial that she had been offered money and other inducements to open a lavish home in Washington, where she could entertain officers and politicians of the U.S. in an effort to obtain information from them for Germany. Mrs. Busch claimed that the offers had been made to her by officials of the German foreign office.

Doris Bagnall Is Bride Of Alvin Hargrove

Sacred Heart Church was the scene of a lovely wedding at nine o'clock this morning (Saturday), when Doris May Bagnall, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bagnall, became the bride of Alvin J. Hargrove, son of Mrs. Hargrove and the late Edward Hargrove. Father J. J. O'Brien performed the ceremony, wedding music was played by Mr. Armstrong and Mrs. D. Campanaro was soloist.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was gowned in white lace over satin cut on princess lines. The skirt was long and graceful, and the sleeves close-fitting. A stand-up collar finished the neckline, and tiny buttons fastened from neck to waist at the back. Her finger-tip veil fell softly from a coronet of seed pearls, and she carried a sheaf of white lilies tied with wide ribbons of white satin.

Mrs. William Lundy was bridesmaid, wearing a charming frock of turquoise marquisette fashioned with a very full skirt. Wine velvet bows trimmed the skirt and neckline, and a shoulder-length veil was held in place with a spray of blue velvet flowers. Her bouquet was of American Beauty roses.

Mr. Kenneth Downey was best man.

A wedding breakfast was held later at the Kawartha Club, where the bride's mother received the guests in a gown of black velvet, with black velvet hat and corsage of red roses.

For travelling the bride wore a green swagger coat with matching hat and tan accessories. On their return from a wedding trip to Toronto and other points, Mr. and Mrs. Hargrove will live in Peterborough.

Margaret Lynch Bride of To-day

Ferns and palms decorated St. Peter's Cathedral for the wedding this morning (Saturday), at eight o'clock, of Miss Margaret Lynch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lynch, 494 McDonnel street, who was united in marriage to Mr. Raphael (Ray) La Plante, son of Mr. and Mrs. Armand La Plante, 516 Romaine street. Rev. P. J. Kelly officiated. Wedding music was played by Miss Veronica Scollard, A.T.C.M., and Mr. Ted Bartley, uncle of the groom, sang. It is interesting to note that the wedding took place on the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of the groom's parents.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a princess-style gown of white Duchess satin made on long lines that flowed into a slight train at the back. Tiny satin-covered buttons reached from the Queen Anne collar to the hem of the gown, and trimmed the leg-of-mutton sleeves. Her circular veil of white silk net was caught with rosebuds, and she carried a bouquet of Premier supreme roses.

The wedding attendants were Miss Mary Lynch, sister of the bride, and Miss Margaret La Plante, sister of the groom. Miss Lynch was gowned in turquoise blue bengaline taffeta, its bouffant skirt appliqued in wine velvet. She wore a short matching bolero of velvet, a wine velvet doll hat, and carried a bouquet of Bettertime roses. Miss La Plante was frocked in shell pink taffeta, its full skirt and shirred bodice trimmed with small lover's knots of narrow blue velvet. She wore a pink velvet doll hat, and carried Talisman roses.

Mr. Dorion La Plante, brother of the groom, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. J. J. Ahern and Mr. Joseph Lynch, brother of the bride.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the bride's mother received in navy sheer with matching hat and corsage of roses. Mrs. La Plante, mother of the groom, received with her, and wore a gown of plum lace with matching velvet hat and corsage of roses.

After a wedding trip to Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. La Plante will live at 614 Stewart street.

Talk on "Color" Heard By Lyceum Art Club

Speaking at a meeting of the Lyceum Club Women's Art Association on Friday afternoon at the Y.W.C.A., Mrs. Bertha L. Stavert, Director of Field Work for the Community Welfare Council, Toronto, gave a delightful, thought-provoking talk on "Color."

Materials in lovely, blending shades were used to demonstrate her clever ideas on color harmony, drawn from many years of experience in handicraft work. "There is no better cure-all for every ill than color," remarked Mrs. Stavert, as she told her interested audience of the restful, nerve-healing effect a harmonious color scheme has in the home. To illustrate her words, she outlined a charming color scheme for the living room and bedroom of a young blonde bride, and a color scheme for the girl with dark hair, suggesting that the effect be accented by adding a complimentary color in pottery.

Color in the dining room as an aid to digestion, and as a cheery, zestful start for the day was also stressed. She spoke of the lovely things that can be done with chintz, which is always pleasant to live with, and a friend of the woman who has very little to spend on her home. Theatrical gauze, used very largely by interior decorators, is inexpensive as well as effective. It is washable because it is linen, it comes in a variety of colors, and it serves every room in the house equally well.

"It is the duty of us all," said Mrs. Stavert, in concluding her remarks, "to make our homes so gracious in color that our guests will feel the home atmosphere and jovousness of its color immediately. Dignity, gentility and refinement is perhaps no more quickly expressed anywhere than in the furnishings of a home."

The speaker was introduced by the president, Mrs. Fred E. Hooper.

Tea was poured by Mrs. W. B. Bletcher and Mrs. J. H. Seels. The tea table was attractively arranged with a Dresden comport of yellow and wine Malaga grapes, and ivory tapers in silver holders. Assistant tea hostesses were Mrs. S. I. Puttenham, Mrs. W. Ovens, Mrs. C. L. Upper, Mrs. W. R. Widdess, and Mrs. A. E. Barrie.

Eliminate Poisons
By keeping the kidney action regular

The human machine in the process of digestion forms poisons which are eliminated through the lungs, the kidneys, the bowels and by perspiration.

The kidneys are the natural filters of the blood and on them is thrown the work of eliminating the poisons from all we eat and drink, especially the latter. If the quantity of poisons is greater than the capacity of the kidneys can look after, we experience pain and serious disease.

The secret of avoiding trouble of this kind is found in the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills because they arouse the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels and promptly eliminate the poisons from the system. The kidneys are relieved of overwork and regain health and vigor. Pains, aches and tired feelings disappear and serious disease is prevented.

Damage Action Dismissed Against Board

An action by George Sorenson, florist, against the Board of Education for $1,500 damages to his property by surface freshet water on March 27, 1936, was dismissed with costs by Judge McGibbon of Lindsay in a judgment announced on Friday.

Judge McGibbon found that the exceptionally heavy rain fall which caused the flooding of the greenhouse premises was an act of God and was the sole cause of the damage to the plaintiff's property. The Sorenson greenhouses are alongside the C. N. R. near the Nicholls Hospital. The plaintiff alleged that the cause of the flooding was the overflowing of a tile drain on the property of the Board of Education which, he contended had not been kept clear for the flow of water. There is also a 30 inch tile drain on the Sorenson lot, connecting with the first drain on the Boards property.

There are three entrances to the drain, one on the property of the Board of Education, another at the junction of the Sorenson greenhouses and the C. N. R., and the third opening is entirely on his property.

During the fall and winter the plaintiff had covered this opening with large railway ties and other refuse which could not be freed on the date of the flood. His Lordship said that according to the evidence of A. O. Phillips, who provided a complete weather report, the fall of rain during that period was the heaviest in forty years.

"Evidence is given that the day prior to the 27th of March, city officials opened up and cleared the drain in question, so that there could be no evidence of negligence placed on the defendant Corporation for not having the tile drain in proper repair, but I must find negligence on the part of the plaintiff. Had he caused the opening of the tile drain on his property to have been opened water overflowing from the Board of Education's property on to the plaintiff's property could have been carried away without difficulty and without damage to his property.

There is no evidence which would lead me, or the Court, to believe that the defendant was guilty of negligence in any manner whatsoever. They had taken all precautions, and had cleared the drain on March 26, and I am of the opinion the cause of the damage in question was due, firstly, to the unusual amount of rainfall on March 27, 1936, together with the thawing due to mild weather which had occured during the course of the previousfew days, and for which the defendant is in no way responsible, in other words vis major, or act of God. Secondly, due to the negligence of the plaintiff himself in having the opening to the tile drain on his property blocked so that the water had to accumulate on his property; and as it rose it naturally flowed through the doors of his greenhouse, causing the damage in question."

"The plaintiff's solicitor has asked me to fix the damages for the purposes, I presume, in case of an appeal, and this I fix at the sum of $605.27, the sum of $500 damage to the stock in trade and $105.27 to the property of the plaintiff."

J. F. Strickland, K. C., was counsel for the Board of Education, and Smith, Rae, Greer and Cartwright of Toronto for the plaintiff.

FIGHTING BLOND

Members of the weaker sex do not indulge in fisticuffs very often but when they do it is usually with telling effect, and a junior attendant at one of the city service stations has a black eye to prove this statement. It is a common saying that gentlemen prefer blondes but this boy in future will revise this statement substituting brunettes for the golden-haired variety. Reliable sources reveal he got in the way of a straight right arm punch from a husky blonde girl at a local dance hall a few nights ago. The unfortunate part of it is that the punch was intended for another fellow but he ducked.—McG.

HAS GONE COLLEGIATE.

"Old Faithful," Peterborough's tame crow, is going more collegiate than ever. He has now acquired a girl friend.

The winged pupil, now a freshman at the Collegiate after graduation from most of the city's public schools, has been a regular attendant at football practises in front of the school, calling encouragement to members of the P.C.I. team. But it seems he has felt that he is not quite collegiate yet, and so he has done the same thing many a pupil before him has done when he reached the more advanced halls of learning—he has fallen in love.

Each noon hour "Old Faithful" flies after a young lady to her home on Carlisle avenue. He can't carry books, but he keeps up a consistent, if somewhat monotonous conversation. Some days he even stays for lunch, so he's not doing to badly in his first romance.—P.

Voluntary Recruiting Idea Leads Poll

LONDON, Oct. 29—(CP-Havas).—A slight margin in favor of voluntary recruiting of Britain's armed forces over conscription was shown in the results of a Daily Mail poll, published today. There were 102,644 votes—51,511 favoring the voluntary system and 51,133 favoring conscription, giving a majority of 378 to the voluntary method.

Recalling that the poll began during the European crisis over Czechoslovakia, Viscount Rothermere's newspaper explained the results as follows: "On the first day, while tension was at its height, voting in favor of compulsory service was almost six to one. As the war clouds grew lighter, so public opinion veered. And at the end votes in favor of compulsory service and voluntary service became almost equal."

Tory Delegates Are Named For Convention

Seeking to have delegates to the provincial convention in December instructed who to vote for as leader of the Ontario Conservative Party, anamendment was unanimously defeated at an open meeting of Peterborough Conservative Association last night.

When President Gordon K. Fraser threw open the meeting for nominations at the Legion Hall, George C. Scott rose to ask if delegates "are to be instructed." Answer to his question was deferred by the chair until selection of delegates was completed, when he again pursued the question.

Graeme Falkner who was named as a delegate, moved that delegates be empowered to use their own good judgment in regard to selection of a leader of the Conservative Party, and Herbert Bradburn believed that in view of the resolution he would like to see some discussion as "there might be some ideas the Association wishes to put forward."

At this point Mr. Scott moved his amendment that delegates be instructed.

Emmett F. Sheehy objected, "If we disclose too much of our opinions we are going to assist the opposition to some extent." He urged such tactics should not be adopted at an open meeting.

Changing Situation.

Summing up the general feeling of the meeting, T. P. Lancaster, former M.L.A., declared while he appreciated Scott's viewpoint he would like to see the amendment withdrawn. "I am informed to-night," he stated, "that Cecil Frost is out of the running along with MacAulay. The only definite candidate before the public to-day is Colonel Drew, but there is little doubt scores more will be mentioned between now and the convention."

He emphasized that the meeting had no real idea who would and who would not be in the field, and urged the matter should be left to the judgment of the delegates.

Declaring that one of the chief objections of younger members of the Association was that such matters were too often dealt with in committee, Mr. Scott flately refused to withdraw.

Greeted With Applause.

Greeted with enthusiastic applause as he rose from his seat on the platform, E. A. Peck, K.C., acknowledged, "you've not forgotten me" He thought it would be best to leave delegates to use their own judgment. "We have selected good men and women who are interested in the progress of the Conservative party and we should leave this matter to them."

In full accord, Fred Marshall asserted, "As an alternate delegate. I tell you I would not attend the convention if I were instructed what to do when I got there."

When it was suggested from another quarter ihe matter be discussed at a meeting of the executive and delegates a week prior to the December convention, Mrs. J. H. Cridland, vice-president of the Women's Conservative Association, objected to it as, "hole-in-the-wall politics."

At the ensuing vote Mr. Scott and his seconder were the only two who rose in support of the amendment. The chairman laughingly declared the mottion carried unanimously.

Name Delegates.

Delegates representative of the entire city and county were elected as follows:

Delegate Members—F. D. Hammond and Mrs. J. H. Cridland, city; E. J. Leeson, Havelock and Gordon K. Fraser, Burleigh Falls.

Delegates. — Mrs. Joseph Mills, Herbert Bradburn, Mrs. G. S. Cameron, W. R. Phil, Graeme Falkner, city; R. K. Tedford, Norwood; C. G. Spence, Apsley; Frank Erskine, Lakefield; Mrs. Birdsall, Asphodel; K. F. Kemp, Norwood.

Alternate Delegates—Emmett F. Sheehy, Fred Marshall, Mrs. Miller, Lieut.-Colonel D. J. Lawrie, John R. Corkery, city; Mrs. Newton, Belmont, Norman Lane, Apsley, Mrs. W. H. Andrews, Claraday, William Montgomery and James Baskin, Norwood.

Acknowledges Help.

Mr. Fraser tendered thanks to officers of the Association for their help in the past few months and briefly reviewed the progress made in this and other ridings. "If we stick together and organize the same as East Peterborough has been organized," he said, "there is no doubt we will be on top at the next election."

In connection with organization work in the neighboring constituency he paid tribute to R. A. Dean, president of the Hastings-Peterborough Conservative Association who was present on the platform. He described Mr. Dean "as one of the most enthusiastic workers I ever met," and predicted a big Conservative majority at the next election.

The chairman also extended thanks on behalf of the meeting to Mrs. J. F. Strickland and other ladies of the organization, who provided a dance and card party that followed the business of the meeting.

Another Chamberlain Conference

Joseph Meagher Is Laid To Rest

The funeral of Joseph Meagher, 260 Aylmer street, took place on Friday morning from the family residence at 8.45 o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral, where Requiem Mass was sung at 9 o'clock. In his 55th year Mr. Meagher died on Tuesday evening at St. Joseph's Hospital as a result of an accident.

The funera lservices were very widely attended by friends from many points in the province. Rev. J. B. Ferguson, parish priest at Warkworth and a close friend of both Mr. and Mrs. Meagher's families for a quarter of a century, sang Requiem Mass and also addressed the congregation. He spoke very feelingly of the loss of a father in the home and extended his sympathy to the sorrowing family and relatives.

Present in the sanctuary also were Rev. P. J. Kelly, rector of the cathedral, Rev. C. J. Begley, of the Immaculate Conception parish, and Rev. J. J. O'Brien of the Sacred heart parish.

A large delegation of railwaymen was present from the C.N.R. and the C.P.R. railways. Rev. J. C. McCarney of Lindsay recited the prayers at the graveside in St. Mary's Cemetery at Lindsay, assisted by Rev. J. B. Ferguson.

Pall bearers were his four brothers, James, John, Vincent and Basil Meagher, Stephen Coffey and Lorne Grozelle. Among the out-of-town friends who attended the funeral were:

Mr. and Mrs A. Twiddy, Trenton; Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Reynolds, Trenton; Mrs. P. McAuley, Trenton; George Hodgson, Dominic Farley, Mr. A. Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Blackburn, Mrs. Mulcahey, Mr. and Mrs. J. O'Leary, Mr. and Mrs. Forestall, Joe Frauers, Victor Rose and Robert Burns, Francis, Fred and James Cayley, Mr. and Mrs. John Murphy, Mrs. Ed. Roache, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Aggie O'Reilly, Miss Mary O'Reilly, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Cayley, Mr. and Mrs. H. Lockwood, Mrs. David Elliott, Lindsay.

Surviving besides his widow ,the former Mabel Burke ,are two daughters, Ella and Betty Meagher, both at home; also five brothers, James, John, Lawrence, Vincent and Basil Meagher; and two sisters, Mrs. Frank Burns of Valencia, and Miss Mary Meagher of North Tonawanda, New York.

One of the oldest, if not the very oldest of Bibles to be held in private ownership, is in the possession of C. Ernest Tatham, minister at the Gospel Hall at Lakefield.

While copies as early may be in large public collections, it is doubtful if a "Breeches" Bible is owned by another Canadian. The Bible was published in 1599, thirty years earlier than Peterborough's oldest Bible, that owned by Rev. G. J. Bousefield. It was published twelve years before the authorized English version, and takes its name from the following passage from the Book of Genesis: "Then the eyes of both of them were opened and they knew that they were naked and they sewed figge tree leaves together and made themselves breeches." In later versions the word "breeches" has been changed to read "aprons."

The ancient book is in excellent condition. It has been in Mr. Tatham's family for generations, came to Canada from England with his grandfather. He does not know at what time his family first possessed the book, but there is a possibility it may have been since its date of publication.

Reunion Dinner Is Held By Trinity Club

Youth is the fulcrum upon which we place the lever to push the world into the arms of God, Rev. David Wren, of Picton, and former minister of Trinity United Church said as he addressed 160 members of the Trinity Club attending the first reunion banquet in the history of the church.

"I did not know when I was your minister there was being developed such splendid latent talent, and I am both proud and happy tonight to see so many of the young people taking their place in the world and their share of the responsibility."

"The responsibility of tomorrow belongs to youth, if the world loses its way, it is up to you to bring it back. Disraeli, in one of his novels was wrong in his definition of youth, manhood and old age. Youth is an opportunity; Manhood is an accomplishment, and Old Age is a happy memory."

Must Build Anew

"In a recent high school valedictory address I heard a boy say the parents of yesterday and the leaders of yesteryear have left an awful mess from which youth must build a new world. Into this arena youth must build again from the ruin and wreckage. The 20th century is the dawn of a new age, it stands for an awakened interest in youth. I have devoted most of my life to young people, it is their day of opportunity," he said.

Rev. Wren said that in Canada today there are one and one-half millions of young people between the age of 8 and 18. In financial worth these people represent $4,500,000,000 dollars. From this group must come the leaders of tomorrow

It is sound business practice to protect civic property by insurance and other means, so that if it is destroyed a new and better structure may be built. What of youth who goes wrong, instead of being reclaimed he becomes a permanent liability.. Little or no provision is made to reclaim youth. If a life goes wrong it invariably stays wrong. Y.M.C.A. and churches reach one out of every four, but in the main almost 80 per cent of the country's youth are untouched by the Christian Church.

"Kingdoms and Empires have ridden on the shoulders of dauntless youths, and I do say it will be a great day for the church when youth is enlisted in its ranks."

George Nicholls introduced the speaker, and the vote of thanks was voiced by Harold Rehill.

Happy Gathering.

It was a happy gathering and a gay note dominated the entire program. Charles Huffman, Jr., the president of Trinity Club, was toastmaster, and voiced a warm welcome to members, former members and guests. He traced the growth of the club since its beginning in 1935, and paid fine tribute to the organizing genius of Bill Derry, the club's first president, who was unable to be present last night.

Mr. Huffman said there were more than 200 former members scattered all over the continent and he read several communications from members expressing regrets at unable to be on hand and extending good wishes for continued success.

The toast to the Church was ably proposed by Osborne Smith and the Rev. Geo. S. Easton in responding outlined how certain modern trends had taken many functions from the Church, but the Church he said still stands as the one thing by which people steer their course through the world, and is the guiding influence that keeps them out of storms and troubled waters.

Bill Fanjoy, a veteran member of the Club proposed the toast to the Presidents and in the course of his remarks described the work done by each during his term of office. His speech all through was a masterpiece of humor. The six presidents in turn with the exception of Bill Derry, all spoke briefly Malcolm Latimer, Bill Holgate of Toronto, George Nicholls, Harold Rehill and Charles Huffman.

Miss Alma Blanchard sang two solos during the evening which delighted the audience and her lovely voice was heard to its best advantage in the second number. "Mary of Argyle." Mr. and Mrs. George Nicholls played a piano duet, and Mrs. Charles Huffman recited in a manner and style that marked her a veteran performer.

Malcolm Latimer, a former president voiced the appreciation of the Club to the ladies for the fine banquet.

Posture Not Clothes Count In Appearance

DETROIT, Oct. 29—(CP).—Girls need not worry about that stunning $75 black model direct from Paris, for you can look just as smart in a $5 frock, said Dr. Russell Wright, lecturing here at the Michigan convention of the American association of osteopathic surgeons.

"If a girl has a fine posture, she can wear inexpensive clothes and look just as well in them as she would in a French import," said Wright. "It is the shape on which you hang the frock that is important.

"Even excessive weight is not serious if a woman has a right posture. About five out of every 100 men have good posture and the percentage of women who carry themselves well is even less. The matter of inexpensive clothes goes with men as well as with women."

Lost Woodville Man Found on Road At Myrtle Village

Lindsay, Ont., Oct. 29 (CP). HECTOR GRANT, 73, missing from his home in Woodville for three weeks, returned last night. He was picked up on the highway near Myrtle by Samuel Newman of Lorneville, with whom Mr. Grant was acquainted. A widespread search of the district for several days following the disappearance of the elderly man was without success.

Grant said he had been wandering about the Whitby-Oshawa district since he left home.

Northern Camps Remain Idle Youths Discover

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Oct. 28.—Jack Hennessy, Arthur Gundill, Denys Ward and Albert Nelson, all husky young men left here about two weeks ago for the lumber camps in the north. They hitch-hiked and rode the rods some 1,200 miles through Northern Ontario visiting lumber camps and mills.

Early Wednesday morning Gundill and Ward arrived back at the home of their former employers on farms. Henessy went to visit friends in Toronto and, of the four. Albert Nelson secured a job. Gundill said it was practically impossible to secure work due to the lumber mills being overstocked with lumber from last year. There were three million feet in one yard, he said.

One outfit which had nine camps last winter near Port Loring will have two camps this year. Wages paid last year in that district averaged $45 per month and board. This year they are paying from $26 to $30. The north is experiencing severe hardship at present from unemployment. "We in southern Ontario are very fortunate," he declared.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Johnston and son Bert of Stouffville were visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Oliver.

Poisoned Youth Remains In State Of Coma

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 29.—Five-year-old Eugene Akey, critically ill from an unknown poison since 10 o'clock Thursday morning was said by attending doctors today to be "showing slight signs of recovery" at noon Saturday but was still in a coma, from which he has only awakened for a half hour period when nourishment was given him. His three-year-old playmate, Ronald Martin, who was also stricken for a time has fully recovered.

The latter amazed his parents last night with the startling statement that he had "been on a drunk", which despite the child's tender years was interpreted to mean that he and his chum had partaken of the contents of a partially empty can of canned heat, which is wood alcohol, and it is believed they developed the idea from hearing older boys in the neighborhood talk about it. One point seems clear and that is some persons have gone to the town dump in recent years and puttered around among the debris and garbage searching for bits of food which they consumed, and two years ago a resident of Campbellford almost died from eating food which allegedly came from the town dump.

Search Through Dump.

David Bowen, who has the contract to collect the town garbage related to an Examiner reporter today that he has frequently seen a man from the high Street section of the town, prowling around the dump, and raking over the debris. There are no signs warning persons not to trespass on the property, and Bowen says it is not uncommon to see children and adults search through the garbage for treasures.

Clayton Akey, father of the boy now at death's door, has been unemployed during most of the summer, and this fact led many to believe the child may have eaten something because he was not getting all the food he required. The father maintains the child had plenty to eat, and he added yesterday was the first time it had been necessary for him to seek assistance from the Relief Board.

Neighbors in the district have shown every sympathy for the family since the mishap and many have brought food and delicacies to the house in the belief they may have been needed.

French motion pictures are finding favor in Uruguay, although American films are still far in the lead.

Football Famine For McGill Appears To Be At An End

By GUS GARBER
Central Press Canadian Correspondent)

MONTREAL, Oct. 29.—After 10 long years of waiting and hoping, it looks as if McGill gridders are finally going to bring home the bacon this year and the college lads and lassies are going ahead with plans for a monster victory shindig.

It was back in 1928 that the Royal Institution for the Advancement of Learning—McGill University's corporate name—last won a senior college football title. That was the year McGill was coached by a graduate board consisting of such grid luminaries as Dr. Cyril "Flin" Flannagan, Dr L. C. "Monty" Montgomery, Tommy Hall and Don Bailey. Montgomery was chairman of the board and "Flin" Flannagan was head coach.

Since that time McGill gridders have been coached by a score or more of mentors, including such notable names as Frank "Shag" Shaughnessy, Art Burridge, George Draper, Joe O'Brien, Hoddy Foster, Freddy Wigle and Major D. Stuart Forbes director of athletics at the college. Experienced as they were, these men had indifferent success with McGill football machines.

Enter "Pop" Kerr

Then, in 1935, Douglas "Pop" Kerr came to McGill from Westward A A A, where he had a string of successes. Three disappointing seasons rolled by and this fall things didn't look any too bright. Then suddenly the McGill stock zoomed sky-high as announcement was made that Herbie Westman, absent for two years, was returning to college.

Came the start of the current season on Oct. 8 and McGill fans stood up and took notice as the Redmen defeated the highly-touted University of Western Ontario squad. On the crest of Herbie Westman's educated toe they got by Varsity in Toronto the following week and made it three in a row by upsetting Queen's at Montreal. Westman's hefty hoofing played an important part in all these victories, but it wasn't a one-man team—definitely not. There were 11 other red-clad college boys on the field and they weren't statues. Each one executed his chores in extremely workmanlike manner.

If McGill should cop top honors this year, and the betting is 2-1 that they do, it won't be mere chance. It will be the result of a four-year plan carefully mapped out by "Pop" Kerr when he assumed the role of freshman coach in 1935.

Looking Ahead

He didn't have to employ charts or graphs. Kerr figure things out and came to the conclusion that by starting out with the freshman team he could build up a strong senior squad in four years and the current McGill team is the result of this planning. With the exception of those boys who have been coming up from the freshman ranks each year the present senior squad has been personally trained by Kerr for four years.

Today he is ready to reap the reward of his long campaign. With McGill scheduled to meet each team in the union once more, starting with Queen's in Kingston on Saturday, then followed by Varsity and Western, the chips are on the red team to come through. And they're doing it for "Pop" Kerr.

"POP" KERR

...he's even beginning to smile after seeing the 1938 edition of his McGill team in action so far this season.

Two Rival Fishermen Skippers Hurl At Each Other Challenges

BOSTON, Oct. 29.—(CP).— Two rival fishermen skippers stood figuratively toe-to-toe to-day and hurled in each other's weather-scarred faces challenges for a race to end all races for the sailing championship of the North Atlantic.

Captain Cecil Moulton, who skippered the Gloucesterman Gertrude L. Thebaud in a losing best-of-five series of races with Captain Angus Walters' salt-banker Bluenose a few days ago, started the challenging when he proposed a series off Massachusetts with each skipper putting up $500.

No more of this merry-go-round stuff over a triangular course for Captain Angus of Lunenburg, N.S. This time he wants to high-tail it down to Bermuda from Boston and back to Halifax. And he is willing to wager $5,000 the fleet Bluenose will race home first.

Adds a Little Zest.

The Gloucester skipper added zest to his challenge for a race off Massachusetts over a course of Captain Walters' choosing with the words "put up or shut up."

Peppery Captain Walters is hardly a man to let such words go unchallenged. He held his counsel for 48 hours. And then he let Captain Moulton have it, terming the proposed $500 stakes nothing but "poker money."

"Five hundred dollars, bah!" snapped Cap'n Angus as he hurled his counter-challenge. "That's only poker money those Gloucester people are talking about.

"Let's get this thing settled once and for all. Let's race for $5,000 from Boston to Bermuda, around the island and back to Halifax, winner take all. Let them think that over instead of spouting about chicken feed."

Saved by Her Legs

NEW YORK, Oct. 29—(AP)—A fireman swinging precariously at the end of a rope to-day held Marie Clemens, 35-year-old patient at the Regent Nursing Home by the legs for 20 minutes while other firemen cut through a fourth floor casement window to pull her to safety.

Somehow the woman had become wedged in the window, and was slowly slipping out of the narrow aperature when rescued.

Inside Sportin' Dope

BY A. WISE CRACKER

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, the only thing they seems to tolk about this week is football and altho this is Fri. already the folks aint got through discussing that amazing event of last Sat. when our devastating Orfuns up and smacked down the Sarnia Imperials which has won the O. R. F. U. championship so often they oughta be able by now to do it from memory—and they was times last Sat. when it looked like that was what they was trying to do. I aint going to come along and say I had the least idea in advance the lads would toss the Imps for a fall; as a matter of fact I expected them to lick the duray pants off the local talent and I mighta as well admit it.

They Surprised Them

But boy did I enjoy that ball game! Right off the reel the Irwin athletes went at the big shots from Sarnia as if they was just a bunch of punks from the other side of the railway tracks and the Oilers never seemed to get untracked after that. You see they had been reading the stuff in the Toronto sheet about the game being just a workout for them that they naturally looked upon the Petes as a bunch of green kids who wouldn't know what it was all about. The result was that when the rumored rookies started to knock them back on their heels and to kid them at the same time the all-stars kinda blew up. Even the great Mister Stirling—and he is great, don't let no one fool you about that—was hustled so much that he only averaged 44 yards on his punts all day and when Mister Sterling aint booting them at better than a 50 yard clip all along he aint booting them at all.

They Earned It

The Petes without uncovering anything much in the line of an attack had so much umph and fight and pep and put so much power in their defense that they earned a victory over one of the great football machines of modern times.

And right here and now I wanta to say that the downfield tackling done by our lads in the Hallowe'en costumes was about as sharp and sure as anything in that dept. seen in a long time. The figgers show the Sarnia backs only run back kicks for a total of 40 yards all afternoon which means the average runback was less than 2 yards. In other words they never got started carrying the ball before they was smeared. And this here now Miss Hedgewick has a reputation as a ball toter of parts and this Mister Geary aint what you'd call slow.

Works With Mirrors

So much for the Orfuns which if they never gain another yard has made the season a success already. Now a word for the nursery of football players—The P.C.I. senior outfit which has already clinched the championship of their section and after this Sat. will be looking for other fields to conquer. The Confederation Sq. knowledge factory lost most of last year's seniors but Mister Bamforth who must do it with mirrors has bobbed up with a new array of talent and they're licking into a pretty fair football machine at the present writing with a few new Bamforth dinsie-doole plays thrown in to mystify the opposition.

That is the works for the moment. You may take it away Algernon.

Sportfully Yours,
A. Wise Cracker.

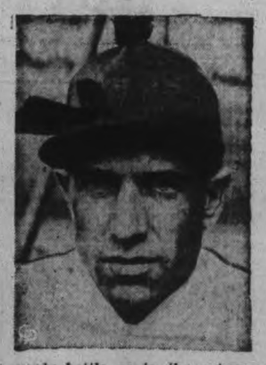
Two Jockey Rivals



The "race of the century," the meeting between Sam Riddle's War Admiral and Charles S. Howard's Seabiscuit, has dwindled down to something less than that since originally scheduled for last May. But followers of the participants are indulging in many a wordy battle as to the outcome now that the race is set for Pimlico, Nov. 1. Next to the horses, the two most important characters are presented ABOVE. Charlie Kurtsinger (left), who will pilot War Admiral, and Georgie Woolf (right) on the Biscuit.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

THEY'VE BUILT a fine new artificial ice arena in Owen Sound and the Sun-Times of that town celebrates with a special edition. Lot of good dope on hockey in its pages, including mention of Shrimp McDougall of Peterborough. Small but mighty, McDougall left here to play for the Greys and he spark-plugged that oand to a Dominion title in '27 in junior ranks, later turning pro. Was re-instated a few years ago and has been playing since with the Petes. Shrimp starred for the locals down in Niagara Falls last winter when they lost by a goal in O.H.A. senior "B" semi-finals, the little ex-pro fairly flying all night and proving too tricky for the tough Cataracts to smack squarely. He is no chicken and it takes him a time to get going in the winter but he still has a lot of hockey ability. Recently, Shrimp told us he'd be out there again this winter when tryouts began.

* * * * * * *

WORD from up Belleville way would indicate that they're making definite plans now at the Airport and the Redmen's stamping grounds for the winter sport. Rumor hath it that Frank Lowery, star centre with the Fliers when they copped intermediate "A" honors two years ago, would turn out with Belleville. You can lay all the vodka in the Soviet that Skipper Eddie Thomas is lining up some good material for his Redmen right now. He stated last winter he would not ice a team at all this year unless he had the same rating as the Petes and Fliers. No word on hockey out of Kingston as yet.

We'll Miss Those Fliers

SAYS the Quinte scribe: "Ernie McNeeley, who was transferred by the R.C.A.F. to Ottawa, is working out with Ottawa Senators of the Quebec Senior Hockey League, which includes Springfield, Mass., and a Boston team sponsored by the Bruins this year. Favorable reports come on his work. We also understand that twin brother Eric McNeeley has applied for a transfer in the Air Force, while Johnny Lalonde may request one, too, if he fails to clickwith the Canadiens, where little mention of his efforts have been heard. However, reports from the Airport hockey citadel are not too black. Three of the better puckists from the crack Camp Borden team of last year are reported to be in the Trenton R.C.A.F. camp and will lineup with the Fliers this winter. Flying Officer Carling-Kelly will head the team when they take the ice next month."

* * * * * * *

GRID GAME seems to have slipped a lot in Belleville, but a lot of young lads are getting a chance to play and they may build up gradually. Last week at home, the Quinte rugbyists absorbed a 35-1 drubbing at the hands of Cobourg, with Meikle only playing a few minutes. Prince Gordon of the Cobourg World — and what a dilly monicker for a sports scribe!—puts it thusly, and you can almost see the picture: "The drab scene at Belleville, the almost obliterated yard markers, the goal post at the east end sagging in the cold breeze, the complete lack of supervision in keeping the crowd back off the lines, the absence of our overcoat, the absence of Joe Dufton's voice calling the plays as he does in Cobourg—all these and others made the Belleville gridiron a dull colorless place. The only bright spots were the Ghosts crashing plays and open field running." Brrrr, but it's cold!

Carload of Confidence

ALONG with quite a few grid followers, ye Orfuns pulled out by train this a.m. for Toronto to do or die 'gainst Balmy Beaches at Maple Leaf Stadium. A full contingent was carried and the gang, from Coach Bill Irwin down to the water-bucket toter, felt they could take the Ponton squad and climb closer to a group playoff in senior O. R.F.U. competition. We sure hope so, but took the train to Toronto fearing a Beach victory—while hoping like everything the Orfuns would cross us up and get a win. Shortly after this sheet hits the pavements, the scores will be trickling back by wire, the count by quarters in the contest.

* * * * * * *

IN CASE the Orfuns should win—which we doubt—we trust the Balmies and Toronto writers and fans don't feel insulted if it is learned that some of the star regulars with the locals were used sparingly while the greener subs were sent in most of the melee to gain experience 'gainst the Beaches. Like the old story of Knute Rockne having an exhibition game with a small southern school. He announced that most of the Notre Dame second squad would see action and doggoned if the coach of the little southern school—which had barely two dozen players—didn't take offence and announce that he, too, intended to use most of his second-stringers! The Beaches ere coming here the first time, planned to use their greener hands, but found they needed Box and the rest before the finish. Incidentally, a local firm received a letter from a lady in Waterloo, a business letter with this postscript: "Bes of luck to your rugby team."

* * * * * * *

In the Mitt Department

NORM BOWLER of the Riverview A.C., which stages a boxing show in the Brock St. rink next Friday eve, writes: "We have really lined up three of the most crowd-pleasing boxers in the province. We are not saying they are the best boxers in Ontario but they will put up a whale of a show from the fan's standpoint. Kenny Roy is appearing for the first time on a Peterborough fightcard, opposing Eddy Curtain, another newcomer with ability. Roy has fought several times around Kirkland Lake and really has the stuff to take him places." Norm refers to Scotty McDonald, Bill Amato and Harry Kiel of Toronto when he speaks of the three crowd-pleasing pugs. And we know he means in the Kirkland Lake district when he says Ken Roy has fought several times around Kirkland Lake—as the scrapper would be mighty tired on his last lap if he boxed all around that lake three times! But it shapes up as a real mitt card, anyway.

* * * * * * *

GLEANING a bit of sports news from the Barrie Examiner. Last time we were in Barrie, the Peterborough party was downright unpopular with the puck populace—but that was two years ago last spring. The sports scribe says Gordie Meeking, coach of the Barrie Colts who beat our Colts at that time, will manage the club again. And he mentions that Bill Hancock is coaching the Penetang juniors. Hancock, who used to be with Oshawa—after handling Newmarket Reds—has among his puck prospects Lloyd Tamblyn of Lindsay. The writer adds: "It doesn't matter to Barrie C.I. seniors this year, but Peterborough Collegiate, for the third straight season, have won the eastern section of the C.O.S.S.A. rugby series, and will take part in playdowns at Toronto. Only four of last year's champion team which beat Barrie in finals are back. One of the Petes is Allan Harle, who played for Orillia juniors two years ago at flying wing and last year was with the Peterborough intermediate O.R.F.U. team." P.C.I. has to beat Bowmanville and Belleville before heading toward Toronto.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 29. — Motoring to the country home of their president, Mrs. J. R. Thompson, the Ladies' Aid of Grace Presbyterian Church, Millbrook, held a business meeting and supper on Wednesday afternoon. For a time following the minutes read by Mrs. M. Kinsman, discussion centered on an old account of $6.00 recently handed in for repairs to the manse, and the treasurer was instructed to pay the same, on motion of Mrs. E. L. Armstrong and Mrs. J. N. McGill.

Miss M. Eagleson was asked to be responsible for the church flowers for the last Sunday in October, when new ladies will be appointed for next month.

The treasurer's report showed a balance of $258.77 at the beginning of October. Expenditures for the month were: Managers $100.00, taxes $65.00, Insurance $10.18, S. E. Eakins account $17.56, rent for Fair dinner $10.00, making a total of $202.74 and a balance on hand of $56.03.

Detailed arrangements for the coming fowl supper were planned. A suggestion of the Board of Managers to take up the platform and lengthen the three tables was accepted by the society. It was decided that the waiters eat at 4.45 to be ready for the crowd expected at 5 p.m. The committee, Mrs. J. R. Thompson and Mrs. S. E. Eakins, were authorized to purchase 35 geese. Mesdames T. Ingram and R. J. McKnight were made responsible for cooking the geese, which will be stuffed the day before at the church. The same ladies will also be in charge of sending out suppers to the sick and shut-ins.

Following the benediction, a flower puzzle was enjoyed by the ladies until supper was served by the group convened by Miss Mina Gibson. The tables were attractively arranged with Hallowe'en decorations, centered by orange marigolds. Many men of the congregation arrived at the supper hour and the group realized a splendid sum.

Born in Asphodel, the late Mrs. McDonnell was one of a family of nine, the daughter of the late Richard Walsh and his wife, the late Mary Ryan, and had spent her entire life in this district. In 1878 she married Charles McDonnell and lived for several years at Westwood, moving 53 years ago to Norwood where she has since resided.

Her husband, the late Charles McDonnell, predeceased her little more than fourteen years ago and of a family of nine children only three survive. They are namely: Rev. Mother Helena M. Eight Teams Must Win Rugby Games

TORONTO, Oct. 29.—(CP)—As each week passes the East's football games become more critical until such a weekend as this when no less than eight of the 12 teams can't afford to lose.

The possibilities of today's program are plentiful. These are some of the things that may happen:

If Queen's tricolor lose to the highly-favored McGill Redmen, the Intercollegiate Union will be assured of a new champion. For Queen's have lost three straight, including a 17-5 setback by McGill last Saturday, and they would have no chance at all with another defeat.

University of Toronto Blues, who have won three championships and been in three playoffs in the past six years, will be all but through if they lose to Western's Wild Mustangs, who beat them 3-2 at London. Yet no matter who wins, one of them will have to beat McGill later on if there is to be a playoff in the college circuit at all.

Over in the Ontario Union even the one-time mighty Sarnia Imperials are on the spot. If they lose in Montreal to Hoddy Foster's Nationals and Toronto Balmy Beach defeat Peterborough Orfuns, the seventime champions of the Union will be in third place. And only two play off in the O.R.F.U.

Ottawa Rough Riders and Toronto Argonauts feature the Interprovincial Union schedule and they've about clinched the "money" spots from Montreal's winless Cubs and Hamilton Tigers, who have won once—from the Cubs—and are favored to eliminate them in Montreal this afternoon.

That's the way it is in Eastern football. It's a short run for the weak—four weeks after the season opens only Riders, Argos, McGill and Nationals can afford to finish on the wrong side.

MUSSING UP THE MAPLES

Standing of the A.Y.P.A. bowling loop up till Oct. 15th—they did not bowl last week—is: Apaches 11, Chippewas 9, Mohawks 9, Algonquins 8, Sioux 8, Crees 7, Senecas 7, Iroquois 6, Mic Macs 6, Ojibways 6, Blackfeet 4, Hurons 2, Wyandottes 2, Cherokees 1. Ladies high single was 275 and high three 546, both taken by Florence Tice; while Ralph Mason had men's high single with 307, and Tim Watson high three with 717. Blind score winners were Miss A. Pruner, Miss B. Curtis, Messrs. R. Mason and T. Maudsley.

Placement Poison

As Ottawa Rough Riders go all out in an attempt to wrest the Big Four crown from Toronto Argonauts, one of their chief scoring threats is Tiny Herman, ABOVE, inside wing and placement kicker de luxe. Tiny is sure fire on a convert and almost that on any field goal attempt. He had the toughest kind of luck last Saturday in missing a 40-yard try against Argos.

SPORT SPICE

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(AP)—Grapevine says Pitts is "going" all out for Fordham this afternoon as it hasn't for years... Goldberg & Co. are r'arin' to scramble those goose-eggs once and for all...Sammy Baugh, farmed to Sacramento in the Cardinal's baseball chain for 1939, isn't too sure yet whether he'll make the trip to the Coast...Figures if it's a good football year (with money in the bank) he may give up baseball...

Japan has decided to send only a small team to the '40 Olympics, mostly swimmers...Can't afford a full squad, and doesn't want to make too big a splurge after cancelling the games in Tokyo...Fred Hill, the old six-day bike racer, held a $75,000 ticket on Dubonnet in this week's sweepstakes...

There's plenty of "foot" in the Michigan-Illinois football series... In the last five years, it's taken a field goal or extra point to decide every game. They don't come any more regular than the fans in Huntington, W.Va....Even though Marshall's footballers dropped an upset decision to Toledo last week, thousands of home folks lined the streets for blocks to welcome the boys home with cheers...

They can rave all they want to about Ceferino Garcia's right-hand bolo punch, but it's the Filipino's left that Hennery Armstrong is really watching out for in their fight Wednesday...That sonthpaw is a lullaby for the other guy any time it connects.

Lewis Retains Crown Against Gainer

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 26—(AP).—John Henry Lewis today is "the winner and still champion" of the world's light heavyweights—but he doesn't know what to do with the title.

The Phoenix, Ariz. negro, weak from making 174 pounds, successfully withstood the serious challenge of Al Gainer, New Haven black panther, four pounds lighter, in a 15-round title bout here last night. He unleased a vicious attack in the final five rounds to win the unanimous decision of the two judges and referee Dave Fitzgerald.

The bout attracted a crowd of only 2,278 that paid a net gate of $7,085.

In the dressing room after the battle, Lewis said it was a "good scientific fight" but "I don't know what to do with the title. There doesn't seem to be any money in it and hasn't been any since I've had it. I had some trouble making the weight and what I got for risking the title tonight and going through a good tough fight certainly wasn't worth it."

Hastings Club Elects Officers

HASTINGS, Oct. 29.—Miss Mary Collins was elected president of the Hastings Badminton Club at a general meeting in the town hall Wednesday night. Miss Collins was one of the first active members since the club was inaugurated three years ago. The club is expected to have twenty-five members this year. Maurice Tape was elected vice-president and Edward Budd, secretary-treasurer.

A dance was planned for next month, but no definite date was set. Following form the dance committee: Dorothy Kerr, Jessie Whitred, Mrs. Aubrey Clapper, Paul Bailey and Fred Crate.

Remember When—

(By The Canadian Press.)

Henry Armstrong, Los Angeles negro, won the world featherweight boxing title at New York one year ago to-night with a six-round knockout over Petey Sarron. The challenger — later a triple-crown holder—lost four of the five rounds before he uncorked a terrific bombardment that gave him the title.

Nova Next

Still confident that he's a pretty good heavyweight fighter, Tommy Farr, ABOVE, the wordy Welshman, has a fight on tap for December with Lou Nova, up-and-coming battler from the Pacific coast. It's a case of win this one or go back to the mountains for Thomas and the lure of the lucre, the finest possible incentive for him, may lead him to a bigger and better performance than in his previous appearance on these shores.

Marmora Hammers Tweed By 36-0

MARMORA, Oct. 29. — Marmora High School rugby team won their second victory over Tweed High School team this season in their home game played at Deloro on Frida yafternoon with the heavy score of 36-0.

W. Reynolds scored the opening touchdown early in the first quarter which was not converted, shortly afterwards E. Reynolds obtained another touchdown which was converted. In the next quarter, Marmora obtained one point making the score 12-0. After G. Leonard had secured a touchdown at the opening of the third quarter to be converted, he made a spectacular run down the length of the gridiron and made a touch which was also converted. In the final quarter Marmora got two more touchdowns. McInroy secured the first, Harris bucking it over and Gale obtained the other, both being converted.

Marmora and Madoc teams having lost but one game each will battle for honors in the final game next week.

Blues Defeat Whites Of Toronto Leafs

TORONTO, Oct. 29 (C.P.). — Montreal Canadiens will send a group of veterans and promising youngsters to their International-American League farm club at New Haven, but the relegated hockeyists aim to make it tough for the National League regulars to hold their places. It all adds up to a favorable situation for Manager Cecil Hart, who can call up an eager Int.-Am. player any time someone starts to slip.

Canadiens took on New Haven last night in an exhibition at Cornwall, Ont., and just managed to scrape out with a 2-1 victory over the scrappy Eagles. Defenceman Walter Buswell snapped in the winning goal half-way through the final period after two sessions in which the minor leaguers held their own in both scoring and roughing.

Red Doran of Eagles and Toe Blake of the Habitants swung fists in the rousing third period and players of both teams joined in. Johnny Gagnon nicked Canadiens' first goal in the first few minutes, but Don Wilson, who was with the big team last winter and aims to get there again, tied the count in twenty seconds.

Detroit Red Wings tried out a new officiating idea in their 8-3 win over Cleveland Barons of the Int.-Am. at Windsor, Ont. Instead of placing a single linesman on the ice, the officials put two in the seats in line with the blue line, like linesmen in tennis. The referee handled the game from the ice and the linesmen called offsides.

Bert (Butch) Foote, a Michigan-Ontario League referee who acted as linesman, said afterward he thought the plan should be adopted generally, for "there is no way we could make a mistake about an offside play." Referee Rabbit McVeigh echoed his approval, with the reservation that the linesman in the stands might have trouble exerting his authority in a hotly contested game.

Red Wings had to struggle for two periods to hold Bill Cook's Barons level at 2-2. After that Defenceman Ebbie Goodfellow and the line of Eddie Wares, Carl Liscombe, and Alex. Motter turned on enough heat to score five straight goals.

Toronto Maple Leafs and their Syracuse farmhands formed two teams for an exhibition in the new Owen Sound, Ont., Arena. Bill Thoms' goal, with 58 seconds to play and with Jack Fox of the opposition in the penalty box, gave the Blues a 3-2 decision over the Whites.

Red Horner, also of the Blues, scored once and he and Thoms got an assist apiece. The White line of Murph Chamberlain and the Metz brothers, Nick and Don, was flying again and contributed a goal through Chamberlain.

The Leafs go back to Galt, Ont., where they trained, for an exhibition to-night, while Chicago Black Hawks will move over to Cleveland for a game with the Barons. New York Rangers will seek a fifth straight victory over New York Americans at Edmonton. To-morrow night Canadiens will battle New Haven again at Shawinigan Falls, Que., and the Leafs will stage an exhibition at Syracuse, N.Y.

Playfair Brown Plans To Promote Fights In Peterborough And Five Other Cities

TORONTO, Oct. 29—(CP).—For the first time in 17 years, promoter Playfair Brown will not seek a permit this year to stage boxing bouts in Toronto. But he's not through with the fight game.

"I'm just backing up to a fresh start, but not here," Brown said. "I'm going into the province—if I can get a license from provincial authorities—and I'm going to promote fights and the fight game.

"Right now I'm planning to run shows in six different cities in Ontario—Hamilton, St. Catharines, Brantford, St. Thomas, London and Peterborough. My purpose is not only to promote shows but to find and foster Canadian talent to supply the rapidly increasing wants of the fight game in Toronto."

Brown said he was dropping out of the fight game in Toronto because he had no place to stage shows. He noted that one arena had roller skating as a consistent attraction and the other arena was tied up with other boxing shows, wrestling and hockey and that no other building in Toronto is worth while at the moment."

Plays the Hero

TORONTO, Oct. 29—(CP)—Chesley Morris is in hospital with injuries suffered today when he swerved his automobile into the path of a tramcar to avoid hitting a pedestrian. He was cut about the head and face when the car pinned him and his sister, Ruth, in the front seat.

Morris' mother said he was driving his sister to school when an unidentified woman stepped in front of the machine. Morris saw the oncoming tram and steered his car directly in front of it.

Japs, British Seek New Agreement

TOKYO, Oct. 29—(CP-Havas).—Anglo-Japanese talks were resumed here today in what well-informed sources termed a "supreme effort" to lay the basis for an understanding between the two countries.

Sir Robert Craigie, the British ambassador, conferred for an hour with Renzo Sawada, the new vice foreign minister. Their talk was described as a resumption of the parley's begun by Sir Robert and General Kazushige Ugaki, former foreign minister.

Great stakes are on the table in the Anglo-Japanese talks. The departure of General Ugaki from the foreign ministry was generally interpreted as the triumph of anti-British elements in Japanases government circles. But now, if sources close to the government are to be credited, a final attempt is being made to see if Great Britain and Japan can come to terms about the future of their respective positions in Asia.

Should these talks break down again, it was said, Premier Fumimaro Konoye would in all probability abandon the foreign affairs portfolio he temporarily holds. A complete reorientation of Japanese foreign policy might then ensue.

Halifax, Oct. 29 (CP)

DARK-EYED Mildred Butler, to whom fiery Captain Angus Walters said he is engaged, gets "sea-sick every time I step off land—that's the reason I have only made one trip on the Bluenose since I met Angus."

Captain Walters, skipper of the North Atlantic racing queen Bluenose, announced he was engaged to Miss Butler while speaking at a Chamber of Commerce dinner given in his honor at Boston.

Miss Butler said they have been engaged for the past four months, but it was supposed to have been kept a "dark secret" until Captain Walters returned from the schooner races. Miss Butler said they plan to marry this fall, but the day hasn't been set yet.

They will make their home in Lunenburg — home of the Bluenose—which she thinks is "a very pretty place."

Horizon Clearing Says Mussolini

ROME, Oct. 29—(AP).—Premier Mussolini told Fascists celebrating the 16th anniversary of the march of Rome today that "The political horizon is clearing," with promise of further improvement.

"The clearing of the political horizon is becoming accentuated and is continually becoming more vast and promising," Il Duce said before crowds massed under his balcony in the Piazza Di Venezia. "But we Fascists continue and will continue to march with the same inflexible energy with which we marched on the eve of that never-to-be-forgotten October."

Foreign hearers regarded the premier's few words as his interpretation of the European situation since the four-power Munich accord, followed by French recognition of Italian domination of Ethiopia, the withdrawal of 10,000 Italian troops from the Spanish civil war and the reported British decision to re-establish normal relations with Italy.

The kaiser always presents one paper himself, the results of his own researches between meetings. This year he spoke on "the origin and use of the Baldachin," an ecclesiastical canopy.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

PRECARIOUS TACTICS

IT IS DANGEROUS business to ruff with the long trump hand, when the defenders have any appreciable number of trumps. If you shorten your own string too much, you may meet a shock upon finding one foe with all or nearly all of the missing trumps, possibly left with one more than yourself or a higher one than your last one.

The bidding on this deal began with North calling 1-Club, which East over-called with 1-Spade. South put in a 2-Diamond bid, North 3-Clubs, South 3-Diamonds and North 5-Diamonds.

West laid down the spade A and, seeing the singleton in dummy, switched to the club 6. The 2 was played from dummy, East played the 7 and South ruffed. The spade 10 was then ruffed in dummy and a club ruffed in the South hand. Then a diamond was led to the A and to return to his hand declarer ruffed another club. When he played the diamonds K and Q he discovered that West was left with the high trump. As a result, South lost four more tricks.

Declarer lost the timing of the hand by ruffing the spade. He should have won the second trick with the diamond 4 and led to the diamond A. Then a second club ruff would have brought him to his hand to lead out the remaining trumps. With the club suit now set up after two leads of the suit, a heart to dummy's A would have allowed him to claim the remainder of the tricks.

Daladier Splits Party Leadership By Attack On Communists

MARSEILLE, Oct. 28.—(AP).—Political observers said today the leadership of Premier Daladier's Radical Socialist party had split over his violent attack against Communists in his keynote speech before the party's national convention.

These observers said although the convention shouted and cheered for the premier, a strong group of party leaders—including members of his cabinet—were alarmed by the bitterness with which Daladier changed the direction of the party's political front.

Among this group were mentioned such cabinet ministers as naval minister Cesar Campinchi; education minister Jean Zay and interior minister Albert Sarraut, besides Edourd Herriot, president of the chamber of deputies.

One observer said Herriot, meeting Daladier outside the convention hall after the speech yesterday, demanded, in effect: "Have you any idea of what you have done?"

Two reasons were cited for the fears aroused by Baladier's attack. One was political.

While the 8,000 convention delegates undoubtedly gave Daladier a warm welcome, radical socialist deputies were faced with the political fact that 66 per cent of them owe their seats in the chamber to hundreds of thousands of Communist and socialist votes under the peoples' front single - candidate agreement.

There was little in the premier's speech to cause rejoicing among Socialists because his attack was directed at Marxism as well as Communism. And while Daladier studiously avoided a reference to Socialists, they, too, are Marxist.

The second reason was diplomatic.

Many observers interpreted the attack on Communism as an attack on Russia which might foreshadow a definite rupture with France's Soviet ally. That alliance has been a favorite project of former Premier Herriot.

In a speech made two weeks ago Herriot recalled proudly how he had worked to separate Russia from Germany and swing her to friendship with France.

"The political attitude of the chiefs of the Communist party has resulted not in support but in sabotage of the government's firmness," Daladier said in defending the four-power Munich peace against Communist criticism.

Jury Blames

"Did you asked him if he had been drinking?" "No."

P. C. Pennock, to whom P.C. Linton had handed over Dr. Snyder, testified: "He smelt of liquor. He was unsteady on his feet and could not walk any distance without staggering."

"Did you see him walk?"

"Yes; Snyder didn't want to sit in the police car. I asked him why, and he said he did not like it. He got out and staggered."

"Did you ask him anything about liquor?" "No."

"Did he volunteer anything?"

"No, not then, but at the station. I asked him if he had been drinking. He said he had had two cocktails about 7 p.m. that night in Cooksville."

Sergeant Gunnell corroborated other police testimony that Dr. Snyder stated he had not seen the man on the bicycle.

Sergeant Robert Gunnell testified the doctor's condition was "all right" as far as he could determine. He knew nothing about a bottle being thrown out of the car. He heard a bottle had been thrown out of the car and asked Dr. Snyder. He said he had thrown a ginger ale bottle out of the car.

"Did you ask him if a liquor bottle had been thrown out of the car?" asked Crown Attorney McFadden.

The sergeant replied: "No, I did not." Sergeant Gunnell had asked him why he threw the bottle out and his only reply was that it was "just a ginger ale bottle." The sergeant said he appeared normal, in contradiction to the two other police witnesses.

Dr. E. R. Frankish, medico-legal expert, testified that a blood test revealed 3.75 parts of alcohol to 1,000 parts of blood, he testified.

"Would a man with that much alcohol in his blood be intoxicated?"

"In England," said Mr. McFadden, "experts appear to have decided that a man is drunk when he has two parts of alcohol to 1,000."

"In regard to these figures," said Dr. Frankish, "they do not mean a great deal up to a certain point. Figures do not enter into it when they are 1.5 or 1.6 parts alcohol. Much depends on the individual. My own experience is that with 1.6 parts alcohol in the system a man cannot react to an emergency and should not be driving a car. It would be absolutely impossible to have three parts alcohol in the system and drive a car with any degree of safety."

"We further recommend that better lighting arrangements be provided at this point and strongly urge that our recommendations be forwarded to the Railway Board, the Peterborough City Council and the Utilities Commission.

"We would also recommend that the city council consider the feasibility of a city-owned ambulance to be operated by the city police or fire department, providing a 24-hour service to the public for accident and emergency cases, to be instantly available."

M. J. Maher was foreman of the jury and other members were C. E. Maniece, L. L. Maguire, E. R. Armstrong, M. J. O'Brien, John Gibson, C. H. Ireson Nicholas O'Toole, Patrick Coursey, J. M. O'Dette, Daniel O'Donaghue and Harry Campbell.

Altogether 18 witnesses testified and were examined by Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C. A watching brief in the interest of Alfred Hudson was held by T. J. Carley, K.C. while G. E. Elliott of Toronto, C.N.R. claims agent, was also present.

Lawrence Meagher, brother of the victim of the accident, gave identification evidence and John F. Peterson, staff photographer of The Examiner, identified photographs he had taken of the engine and truck involved in the accident which were entered as exhibits.

Equiment Explained

Alex Saunders of Belleville, divisional master mechanic of the Canadian National gave technical evidence as to the lights and bell and other equipment of the engine and tender which figured in the accident. He explained that there was a light at the back of the tender strong enough so that a man of normal vision under normal conditions could see an object 300 feet away. It was a 60 watt 32 volt bulb, similar to the headlight at the front of the engine. The bell, the witness said, was operated by compressed air and gave a continuous ring. Locomotive whistles, Mr. Sanders stated, could not be blown within the city limits, by reason of a city bylaw which also set forth that the bell must not be sounded until a train was not more than 75 feet away from a crossing. The light threw a wide beam, the witness declared.

As to the bell, Mr. Saunders declared that he had heard the same bell on the same engine three blocks away earlier that evening.

James DeFinney, brakeman on the yard engine testified that he was at the north end of the train which consisted of 17 cars, some of them loaded. He had seen Meagher just a short time before and he had a lighted lantern with him then. From witness' position he could not see the two men on the footboards at the front of the train. He said that the train was travelling at 6 or 7 miles an hour as it crossed the Auburn bridge and approached Water street and he could hear the bell ringing. The accident happened at 5.55 o'clock and witness said it was "good and dark" at that time.

Had Lighted Lanterns

Ross Burtt, yard helper, swore that he was riding on the footboard on the south side of the train as it approached the crossing from the bride while Meagher was on the footboard at the north side. Both of them had lighted lanterns.

Burtt testified that as the train crossed the bridge and got closer to the crossing he could see the lights of an automobile through the windows of the Lillico building as the machine was coming up Water street. Then after the train got closer he could see the approaching vehicle was a truck and it was some 125 feet away from the crossing, travelling at 20 to 25 miles an hour. Burtt said that when the truck kept coming on and he felt that an accident was imminent he had jumped off the footboard.

"Did you shout?" asked Mr. McElderry.

"No, sir."

"Did it not occur to you to shout a warning to Meagher?"

"No," replied the witness. "I thought he would see the truck the same as I did."

Burtt told of hearing the crash when the truck collided with the front of the tender and of seeing Meagher badly hurt, on the road some fifteen feet away from the tracks.

Engineer Testifies

Andrew Clegg, engineer of the yard engine, swore that he started ringing his bell as the train crossed the bridge and that he had kept on ringing it. He put the speed of the train as it approached Water street at 7 miles an hour and stated that he thought that a safe speed for operations within the city limits. Witness declared that he had seen the truck coming when it was about 200 feet away and travelling at 25 miles an hour and that when he realized the motor vehicle was not going to stop he had slammed on his brakes and the train was stopped in some 25 feet before the tender had got over the crossing. The truck, he said, seemed to swerve a little to the west as it reached the crossing. The train was still moving when the impact came.

The witness told of telephoning for a doctor and ambulance after the accident and of the first aid treatment given Meagher.

Mr. Clegg was examined at some length by Crown Attorney McElderry as to the use of the locomotive whistle. Clegg stated that he had not blown it and added that there was a city bylaw against the use of train whistles within the city limits.

"If you saw an accident about to happen wouldn't you blow your whistle?" asked the Crown Attorney.

Clegg said there was a $50 fine for blowing engine whistles in the city.

"The whistle was working all right?"

"Yes, it was working."

"And you could have blown it? All you needed was to have pulled a lever?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you think of that at the time?"

"No, sir."

Wig Wag Would Help

Coroner Smith asked the witness for his opinion as to the value of a wig-wag at that crossing and Mr. Clegg stated that it would be helpful.

"What is your opinion of a law that would compel motorists to come to a stop before passing over a level crossing?" asked Mr. McElderry.

W. H. Strickland, fireman of the yard engine, testified that he was riding on the north side of the engine, place the speed of the train as it neared the crossing at 6 or 7 miles an hour. He said that he was looking to the north and after the impact saw the front of the truck coming around the tender and saw a body fly through the air and light on the road. He found afterward that it was Meagher he had seen. When he arrived on the scene the yard foreman was lying 12 or 15 feet north of the tracks.

Dr. Herbert Young told of arriving at the scene of the accident and assisting Dr. Moir in giving first aid to the victim. He said Meagher's right leg had been terribly lacerated and his left leg and left arm had been fractured. There were a number of cuts on the head as well. The victim was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital arriving there about 6.35 o'clock and died in a short time. Death was due to shock and hemorrhage as the result of injuries.

Dr. Young said that the ambulance did not arrive at the scene of the accident until five minutes after he got there. Dr. T. W. H. Young who performed the autopsy corroborated his son's evidence that death was due to shock and hemorrhage.

Ambulance Late

Constable William Piercey told of arriving at the scene of the accident just before 6 o'clock and of assisting in placing a tourniquet on Meagher's leg. The ambulance did not come until 20 minutes after the police were on the scene, the witness stated. Constable Piercey gave details of measurements he had taken. He said that the truck had travelled 287 feet after the impact. Meagher was 22 feet north of the tracks while the tender of the train was 9 feet away from the south curb of Water street. The witness said he had made a test and that from a point 138 feet south of the crossing it was possible to see a similar distance along the track toward the bridge.

Constable W. A. Clark who accompanied Piercey to the accident and assisted in the measurements corroborated his evidence. He too said the ambulance was at least 20 minutes after the police in arriving and that he had phoned for a second ambulance. The one first called however arrived soon after.

Evidence as to developments after the accident was given by twelve-year-old Duncan Harvie and his mother, Mrs. Mary Harvie, both of whom for religious reasons, refused to take the oath and by Mr. and Mrs. James Beatty, all residents of the neighborhood who helped Meagher after the crash. Mr. Beatty testified that Engineer Clegg had ran to his house after the accident to telephone for a doctor and ambulance.

Archie Breault, storekeeper, swore that the crossing was a dangerous one and there had been many narrow escapes there. "It is a daily thrill," he said, "to we folk who live nearby."

Joseph R. Hill of Lakefield gave similar evidence as to the dangerous nature of the crossing, due he said to poor visibility. He agreed that a wig-wag would help to avert accidents there and that a law to compel motorists to stop would also help. Mr. Hill said that he was going up Water street some distance behind the truck involved in the accident but saw or heard nothing of the crash. As to the bell he said that he passed the point twice a day every day in the week and could not remember hearing the train bell ring.

Heard, Saw Nothing

Cyril Hill of Lakefield who was in the cab of the truck with Alfred Hudson, the driver, swore that the lights and brakes on the machine were good. As to the speed he said that he had looked at the speedometer a short time before the accident and the truck was travelling 15 miles an hour.

In regard to the accident he was unable to offer an explanation. "I saw nothing or heard nothing before the impact," he declared. "All I can remember there was a kind of blurr before my eyes just before the crash."

Hill said the impact was not particularly violent but he could not throw any light on why the truck had travelled nearly 300 feet after the accident. He said that after the crash the lights went out and the engine stopped for a short period but both lights and engine returned to normal again. The impact, so far as the truck was concerned was back of the cab, he said.

This concluded the list of witnesses but Ken Mackenzie, principal of the Lakefield Preparatory School, in reply to an invitation from the coroner, added his testimony to the evidence already given as to the dangerous nature of the crossing. He was strongly of the opinion that it should be protected with a wig-wag.

During the short session, next Tuesday will be devoted to the consequences of the Munich conference, Wednesday to Spain, Thursday to defence and Friday to prorogation.

The Labor party laid down the basis upon which it will attack the government in a manifesto issued last night.

It declared the Chamberlain Government had failed to achieve a strong peace, failed to provide a sound defensive system and failed to make Britain a happy and prosperous nation. For rthese reasons the government had forfeited the confidence of the country and must be replaced.

The Labor Party, through its national executive, called for Ministries of Defence and Supply; for heavier taxation on large incomes and great fortunes; for national control and ownship of key industries, finance, investment, foreign exchange, food production, foreign trade, coal, power and arms manufacture; for intensified production of food in the United Kingdom, and for extension of trade with the British Commonwealth, the United States and other democratic, friendly countries.

It accused the Government of reducing the League of Nations to impotence, of shattering collective security and of bringing the country to the brink of war. It said President Benes of Czechoslovakia, and not Prime Minister Chamberlain, staved off war in the September crisis.

Meanwhile unofficial reports were heard that the Government had not yet fully made up its mind as to how the rearmament program is to be organized. There are still two vacancies in the cabinet to be filled and the question of a Ministry of Supply to attempt smoother movement of materials to the three defence services has not been settled.

Held As "Witch" Slayers

Wilfred Pichette and his wife Laura, are being held at Houghton, Mich., for the murder of their 19-year-old housemaid, Marion Doyle, who was beaten to death with a flat-iron and poker. According to police, Pichette is a self-proclaimed Messiah who claims he purchased the "power of Christ" for $2,000 from a band of gipsies. He and his wife are alleged to have confessed the slaying because they believed the Doyle girl was the "devil" and had the power to offset his mystic gipsy charm.

Fraserville W.M.S. Rally Hears Interesting Talk On Japan

(Examiner Correspondence.)

FRASERVILLE, Oct. 29.—A very successful rally was held in Fraserville Church, delegates being present from Cavan, Millbrook, Springville, Fairmount, and Fraserville Auxilliaries. Mrs. McIndoo of Fairmount was chairman for the afternoon session. Mrs. McIndoo spoke a few words of welcome and introduced the president of the Presbyterial, Mrs. Thompson of Peterborough. On motion Miss E. Johnson of Springville was appointed secretary. A hearty welcome was tendered the visiting delegates by Mrs. R. Finlay. Music was supplied by Millbrook Auxiliary in the absence of the Bethany friends. The roll was taken, each auxiliary secretary responding to the roll-call with a report of the year's work. A very successful season was reported by all, Millbrook being very fortunate in having received a bequest of $400.

Mrs. Morton, president of the Presbyterial, spoke words of cheer and encouragement, giving many helpful ideas, also bringing reports from the conference branch meeting in April. In the absence of Miss Corona Hanbidge, Mrs. Rehill gave the report of the Whitby School for Missionary Leaders. Mrs. Hanbidge of Fairmount introduced the guest missionary, Miss Rorke of Japan, who is home on furlough. Her father was pastor of Cavan Church just about the time Miss Rorke first started her mission work in Japan.

Collegiate Notes

Football

Football is still the main subject of interest in P.C.I. with the regular schedule practically completed and the senior squad remaining undefeated and the juniors without a win, the corridor quarterbacks are sizing up the schools' chances of keeping the old mug for another year. The junior team suffered their third successive loss last Saturday when Oshawa defeated them 17-6. Hamilton and Bullock were again the outstanding defensive men with Don McPherson, captain and quarterback starring on the offensive. 'Deed' Ackford has punted the pigskin well this year and with a little more experience will prove a valuable asset to his team.

The Seniors however, were much more in evidence in the Motor City. Ignoring the threats of death at the hands of the O.C.I. team, the light, but shifty men of Bamforth went into action there and emerged on the right end of a 12-0 score thus thwarting the murderous plans of Oshawa.

It was a hard fought game. That is about all this column dares to say on the subject of hard fighting.

Al Moldaver, a newcomer to the team, donned that sweater which brought Don Duncan to grief, number 12 and scored P.C.I.'s first touchdown. He recovered an Oshawa fumble and raced for a touch. In the dying minutes Ward picked up a blocked Oshawa kick and accounted for the second try. These two touches along with two rouges from Sriver's kicks gave P.C.I. the game, 12-0.

Backfielder Bill Harle was injured Saturday. A cut on his nose required three stitches while a dentist will have to replace the lower portion of a front tooth. Harle fought hard, as did the rest of the team, and is to be congratulated on his fine game.

When does the third team play its next game. That 30-0 lacing by St. Peter's H.S. should be avenged.

Morning Entertainment

P.C.I.'s swing band, the Garnet and Grey Blue Notes has added another member to its group. The three originals, Miss Merrill Smith, pianist; Bob and David Graham, saxaphone and trumpet; realized the need of a string instrument so they called on Jim Lillico to bring in his violin. Jimmy has been with the band now for several sessions and is helping a great deal to drag a little vocal noise from those present in the assembly.

When does the morning entertainment on the stage begin?

Social Committee.

The social committee for this year has now been chosen. It consists of teachers, Mr. H. H. Graham and Miss M. Brown, as well as students, Miss Joan Ottwell, president of the G.A.A., Don Duncan, president of the B.A.A. and two representatives of the student body, Miss Merrill Smith and Bob Graham.

The first official function of the newly chosen committee is to superintend the entertainment for the visiting Lindsay Rugby teams tonight.

Supper will be given to the home teams and the visitors, to be followed by a dance in the gymnasium. School costume must be worn.

Motion Pictures.

An entirely new series of educational motion pictures was shown to a comparatively small crowd of spectators this week. The admission was only 5 cents and was well spent in seeing these films. The show was sponsored by the student's council and was under the direction of Mr. V. R. Henry, honorary president of the camera club. The features included a newsreel; songs of yesteryear; a very interesting reel entitled "An Evening with Edgar Guest," and a comical little ditty called "Cowboys 'n Indians." The feature players in the latter were a band of cleverly trained monkeys who kept the audience's attention.

Campus Flashes

Ab Leether was in the game Saturday for about two minutes, replacing a penalized man. The two games today finish the regular schedule and now the senior squad, again group winners, will make ready for the playdowns. A winner in the Lakeshore group must be declared not later than Saturday, November 19. . . . The school gymnasium was the scene of a banquet held by the A.Y.P.A. here during the recent conference . . . As yet we have not caught the thieves who broke into the school last week . . . P.C.I.'s cheering section was fairly large at Oshawa. It should be much bigger here today . . . We'll see you on the 25-yard line . . . Snap Ralph Johnston was acting captain in Oshawa in Ab Leether's place. Russ Scriver did the kicking. So did the rest of the Garnet and Grey representatives . . . The much needed lockers arrived this week. They number upwards from one thousand and will take care of the lack of a place for students to store their books from 4 p.m. until they think of an acceptable and logical excuse for not doing home work on the following day.

Mr. A. S. Zavitz, superintendent of the locker department will have his hands full issuing keys for these lockers in the near future. Bill "Poc" Hamilton and Don MacPherson of the Junior Rugby team are expected to be brought up to the Seniors after today, which will mark the close of the junior schedule this year.

Congratulations to Mr. David and Jim Hall who entered an unsuccessful, but scrappy team in the C.O.S.S.A. league. Although they did not win the group championship they tried hard and were a real credit to the school as well as of valuable assistance to the senior squad. The date for the annual At Home, the big social function of the year, has been set for December 28.

This week Dr. Kenner has been enquiring as to the whereabouts of some of last year's students who have left the school. If you are one, please inform the secretary, Miss Jean Cowling what you are now doing. It is important that this information be had.

Written Report

Owing to the fact that the Assembly Hall is not large enough to accommodate all the first formers in the morning the announcements are read to them in their classes. Two girls from Special Commercial are in the Assembly Hall during the morning exercises and take down all important announcements in short hand. This provides practice for the 'stenogs.' and allows the first formers to keep in touch with school activities. P.H.T.

JAPS LOSE REVENUE

To conserve paper Japan will not issue special holiday stamps for use on New Year greeting cards as in former years, and the restriction will cause a revenue loss to the government of nearly $3,000,000.

Washington, Oct. 29

A six-mile-a-minute war plane is the United States Army's answer to European rivalry for speed supremacy in the air.

A 360-mile flight in 61 minutes from Dayton, Ohio, to Buffalo, N.Y., yesterday by Lieut. Benjamin S. Kelsey lifted the wraps from a pursuit ship about which the air corps previously had little to say.

The plane, the Curtiss P-37, already has passed the experimental stage. An initial squadron of 13 ordered last December soon will be delivered, officials said.

Without halting to gloat over the P-37, the army intends to announce in a few days another and presumably even faster plane. Designated the P-40, it is an experimental job, and most details will not be disclosed for the present.

Both Germany and Great Britain have combat planes which have even greater speed than that attained by the P-37. But the air corps has a ready answer.

Lieutenant Kelsey's flight and earlier trials, which were kept secret, were made with full military equipment. Germany claimed some 380 miles an hour for its Messerschmitt. Although Britain's Spitfire exceeded 400 miles an hour, it was aided by a tailwind.

New Cabinet Shuffle Is Begun

LONDON, Oct. 31—(AP).—Sir John Anderson today was appointed Lord Privy Seal in a cabinet shake-up believed to be preparatory to a widespread organization of the nation for defence.

Malcolm Macdonald, already secretary for colonies, was given the additional post of Dominions secretary.

The post of Lord Privy Seal became vacant last week when Earl De La Warr was shifted to the ministry of education. Lord Runciman succeeds Viscount Hailsham, who resigned. The Dominions post had been vacant since the death of Lord Stanley Oct. 16.

Prime Minister Chamberlain had summoned the cabinet to a special meeting today as reports gained there were differences among the ministers as to how to apply the whip to rearmament.

Three ministers — Sir Samuel Hoare, Leslie Hore-Belisha, and Sir Kingsley Wood—were represented as urging creation of a ministry of supply with compulsory powers, but Mr. Chamberlain was said to be opposed to the plan on the ground it would dislocate industry and prejudice export trade.

During the morning the Prime Minister presided at a meeting of the "inner cabinet" prior to the full cabinet meeting this afternoon.

The session of parliament opening tomorrow is expected to be a "grand inquest" on the Munich accord as well as the proposal for putting the Easter Anglo-Italian agreement into effect. But the biggest issue is the defence problem. Conservatives as well as the opposition are aroused.

Thomas Sproat Hurt In Crash

Thomas Sproat, 264 Stewart street, had a narrow escape from death when the car he was driving collided with the rear of a heavy vehicle east of Newcastle shortly after four o'clock this morning. The truck was owned by the Metropolitan Transport, Toronto, and both vehicles were proceeding east on Highway No. 2.

Front of the Sproat car was completely demolished, the engine being pushed back to the floor boards.

Mr. Sprout, who was en route from London to Peterborough, clambered from the wreckage with a deep gash in his forehead caused by broken glass.

He was attended at scene of the smash by Dr. Butler of Newcastle and afterwards proceeded home in a passing car. Provincial Traffic Officer McKellar of Port Hope, investigated.

Taxes are soaring in Germany.

North Bay, Ont., Oct. 31 (CP)

TIMES IS CHANGIN', folks. Early Saturday Lorney Cole was driving a heavy transport truck toward here from Temiskaming, Que. At about the same time a fat red fox was ambling along the road, with nothing more exciting in mind than a fat chicken au sang.

The fox was fast, but he wasn't as fast as the truck. When Cole brought the fox in to the game and fisheries authorities, they brought in a verdict of accidental death.

The fox season here opens Nov. 1, but Cole did not say whether he would try his gasoline hunter over a cross-country run.

British Troops Seize Jaffa To Set Up Order

JERUSALEM, Oct. 31 (A.P.). — A battalion of British troops to-day was sent into Jaffa, largest purely Arab town in Palestine, in the continuing intensive drive to quell Arab insurrection.

With the ancient port under a pall of smoke from a lumber yard blaze believed to have been caused by incendiaries, officials had imposed a 24-hour curfew before the troops' arrival.

Troops began systematic searches as the curfew came into force and all traffic in and out of the city ceased.

Jaffa, with a population of about 50,000, has been in turmoil for more than two months and at least 500 Arab insurgents are believed to have made it their headquarters.

Banks, port officers, the railroad station and freight depot have been robbed. Shops on the border between Jaffa and Tel-Aviv have been set afire.

Officials expected this drive would restore order as in the case of the old City of Jerusalem, Gaza, Bethlehem, and other towns which have been occupied by troops.

Jewish national institutions called out all Jews on a solidarity strike to last until nightfall to-night when special canvassers will collect money for a "Redemption Fund" to be used to support Jewish defence of their claims in Palestine.

Extra Patrols Out For Hallowe'en

TORONTO, Oct. 31.—(CP).—Toronto youngsters, like their companions in other cities across Canada, are all set for the celebration of Hallowe'en to-night.

Parties, either at home or at school, will begin shortly after sundown, featured by apple-ducking or impromptu performances by youthful masked amateurs seeking some sort of reward from their audience.

More aggressive celebrants, like children who hang up gates on poles, will be under the watchful eye of an augmented force of good-natured policemen. Extra patrols will be on duty to-night, particularly in the suburban and residental sections of the city where there is no lack of gates.

Radio Horror Scares Thousands

Broadcast of Attack By Men of Mars Is Taken as Real

By Charles Grumich
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—(AP).—A horrible broadcast fantasy of war waged on the United States by fearsome, space-conquering men from Mars brought panic to thousands of radio listeners last night.

In the double-quick tempo of the news broadcasters, the fiction of a Columbia program became so realistic that hysteria prevailed among listeners throughout the United States and Canada.

Demands for investigation and correction came apace to-day with the belated reports of almost fantastic panic.

Senator Clyde Herring (Dem.-Iowa) said he planned to introduce in the United States Congress a bill "controlling just such abuses as was heard over the radio last night. Radio has no more right to present programs like that than someone has in knocking on your door and screaming," he added.

City Manager Paul Morton, of Trenton, N.J., near the locale of the fictional invasion, said he would demand an investigation by the Federal Communications Commission "with the view of preventing recurrence of what happened."

Some apartment houses in New York were emptied hurriedly by frantic listeners to the program—and by second and third hand accounts that multiplied the impending peril.

One Tries to Suicide

At a high point in the program the electric power failed at Concrete, Wash., a town of 1,000, and the lights went out in most of the homes. Many thought the invasion had reached the west coast. Women fainted and men prepared to take their families to the mountains.

Switchboards in newspaper offices and police stations everywhere were swamped with calls from terrified people, many of them weeping.

Some reported they could smell the gas and see the flames started by the attackers.

People gathered in groups to pray for salvation.

All over the metropolitan area, panicky persons jumped into their automobiles and headed for the open spaces to escape the hypothetical bombing of New York.

Church services here and elsewhere were broken up by intruders who screamed the world was coming to an end.

Car Crash In Fog Burns 2 To Death

KITCHENER, Ont., Oct. 31—(CP)—Two Tavistock district farm hands died last night when a car smashed into a tree near New Hamburg and burst into flames.

Burned in the ruins of the car was 18-year-old Leonard Clarence while 18-year-old Jerome Mertz died early today in hospital. Stanley Helmuth, 24, also of the Tavistock district is in hospital, and his condition is described as "very poor."

Helmuth's car left the highway in thick fog last night and ploughed into a tree. Three passers by, Mac Wilson, R. R. 1, Tavistock, Philip Austin, a teacher at the Hamilton Technical school, and Douglas Piggott, Stratford, hauled Helmuth and Mertz from the burning car. They told police they did not see Clarence who was seated on the right side of the convertible coupe.

An inquest will be held, Coroner Dr. T. B. Feick said after preliminary investigation today.

LARGEST CROP

HALIFAX—(CP). — Nova Scotia Department of Agriculture officials estimate this years apple crop is the largest commercial crop on record. Total crop is estimated at 2,400,000 and more than 90 per cent of this will come within market grades.

Dean and Bishop Withdraw Support Of Armistice Day Appeal

London, Oct. 31 (AP)

THE Dean of Chichester withdrew his name last night from an Armistice Day appeal issued by leading churchmen, including the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, because "the message has political implications which I should not accept."

The message, headed "Lest we forget 1914 and 1938" was drawn up by "the Conference of Christian Churches in England" at Lambeth Palace Oct. 21 at a meeting attended by the Dean and Bishop of Chichester and other churchmen. But when it reached the press tonight the names of the bishop and dean were crossed out with ink.

In addition to the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, five bishops, six other Church of England leaders and 11 representatives of the Federal Council of Evangelical Free Churches signed the appeal.

It appealed for prayer on Armistice Day "to make my Christian faith more active" and indicated three ways to fulfill the task.

The outline appeared to political observers to be parallel to the program outlined by Prime Minister Chamberlain after the Munich four-power accord.

Judge Orders Miner Popped In Jail For Marrying 10-Year Girl But Raid Finds Lovenest Empty

PRESTONBURG, Ky., Oct. 31 — (AP)—Judge Edwin Hill today signed warrants for Fleming Tackett, 34, his childbride, Rose, and Tacketts mother-in-law, Mrs. Grace Columbus.

The warrant against Tackett charged the miner with rape. Rosie, who was reported as "under 14" in a second warrant was charged with being a delinquent child growing up in "idleness and crime." Medical records of Johnson county show Rosie is 10 years old.

Mrs. Columbus was charged in the third warrant with conspiracy in connection with the alleged crime.

Judge Hill said officers went to the Tackett cabin in the hills near here early today but found no one there.

County Attorney Forrest Short said today a guardian would be sought for 10-year-old Rosie Columbus, bride of a week.

"And if a guardian can be found to adopt Rosie," Short said, "annument proceedings will be filed in his name."

Rosie was married last Monday to Fleming Tackett, 34-year-old miner. Rosie's mother, Mrs. Grace Columbus, said Rosie and "Flem" had been "sneakin' around and courtin' for a long time."

The County Attorney said after he went to the windowless mountain cabin where "Flem" and his bride and three other relatives live in two rooms, that "I'm absolutely amazed —I hardly know what course to take."

Short said Tackett had told him "I love her, better than I love myself."

Tame Bear Almost Scalps Boy Of 2

LARDER LAKE, Ont., Oct. 31.—(CP)—A tame bear, which went berserk and almost scalped a two-year-old boy, was shot today along with its companion. The bears were chained outside a service station as an attraction for tourists.

Yesterday afternoon Sonny White, one of a family of six children, left his home with a piece of bread to feed the bears. As he approached within reaching distance, one of the bears struck out and knocked him to the ground and began biting at the boy's head.

The child's screams brought the service station employees on the scene and it took three men to beat the brute into submission before the boy could be rescued. He lost so much blood from the mauling a transfusion was necessary and at the hospital today his condition is considered serious.

A third bear, a companion of those destroyed today, escaped recently and is still at large.

Armour Road Resident Rushes From Home On Hearing Broadcast

CITIZENS of New Jersey and other American centres who went haywire Sunday night when a war scare story was broadcast in the form of a play were not alone in their terror. A resident of Armour Road in Ashburnham fled from the house in tears and rushed to the home of her brother where she told him an army from Mars had landed and were killing the people in New Jersey. He consoled her, sent her home and then spent most of the night trying to verify the story.

Youth's Arrest Clears Marmora Theft

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Oct. 31—(CP) — Culminating an extensive police probe, Elmer Partridge, 20-year-old farm hand of Percy township, was arrested during the week-end and today in police court was remanded in custody without plea for a week on a charge of breaking, entering and theft from a Marmora store. Other charges will be preferred when he again appears, provincial police stated. The youth was taken when police surrounded his home and considerable stolen property was recovered.

Shoots 2 Wolves On His Doorstep

NORTH BAY, Ont., Oct 31—(CP) —The wolf was at the door today of the Corbeil home of Elias Gauthier, North Bay hotel employee, but he didn't mind.

When he stepped out of his home to come to work, Gauthier almost bumped into two big timber wolves "sitting" on his doorstep. He grabbed his gun from a rack in the house, killed one of the wolves and wounded the other. It escaped into the woods but he trailed it and finished the job.

An hour or so later he was applying for the $30 government bounty on the two pelts. He figured the skins would bring him an additional $8.

"There is one thing about having the wolf at my door," he smiled. "I can shoot him and use the bounty to keep the hard time wolf away."

Franco's Brother Killed In Plane

BURGOS, Spain, Oct. 31 (AP)—Death in an air crash of a brother of the Insurgent leader, General Francisco Franco, became known yesterday.

Lieut.-Col. Ramon Franco, 42, was killed Friday off Palma, Mallorca, while piloting a seaplane through a storm. Three others died with him. One person was missing.

Franco flew the South Atlantic Jan. 31, 1926, the first trip from Europe to South America. He was lost for 15 days during another flight, in 1929, when he was forced down in Portugal.

Hungary Sees Hitler Next Ruler

Dictatorship Hinted Only Escape From Nazi Control

By Dewitt Mackenzie
(Associated Press Foreign Staff.)

BUDAPEST, Oct. 31 (AP)—The Hungarian government headed by Regent Horthy is experiencing probably its most difficult moment since it was re-established in 1919 after the overthrow of the Bolshevist regime of Bela Kun.

Directly or indirectly this situation in the main relates to German Nazidom.

The greatest burden is fear that Hungary may, in effect, lose her independence in Chancellor Hitler's quick thrust for domination of central Europe and the Balkans since his triumph over Czechoslovakia. This country is doubly fearful because it lies against the Reich and is, so to speak, right under the big guns of the Nazis.

The regent and his ministers are burning midnight oil studying ways and means to protect the sovereignty of their state should it be menaced.

Of more immediate concern is the protracted argument between Hungary and Czechoslovakia over the former's claim to territories taken from her at the end of the Great War. The Hungarian public and army have been demanding that the government quit negotiating and occupy lands in question by force.

Don't Wish Force.

Admiral Horthy and his cabinet are said to be straining every nerve to avoid such a contingency. The Regent doesn't want to employ force against Czechoslovakia, but desires peaceful settlement through negotiation. So he has been working hard to quiet the clamor at home. The public is said to like and trust the Admiral, and he is reported to have made progress in his campaign. Meanwhile Italy and Germany will arbitrate the minorities problem this week.

The government's position is aggravated by the fact that there is a considerable Nazi party in Hungary.

Another phase of the situation is anti-Jewish feeling. Jews form about six per cent. of the population and about 20 per cent. of the population of Budapest. According to statistics, they control some 85 per cent. of industry.

All these elements unite to form a situation of such difficulty that responsible observers say it is possible, though perhaps not likely, that the government may feel compelled to resort to dictatorship. This would represent the last hope of remaining independent of Nazidom.

Such a dictatorship could not be anti-German, however. Hungary must play along with the Fatherland. There is no way out.

Five Years Given To Extortionist

GALT, Ont., Oct. 31—(CP)—Cecil W. Rhodes, 25, pleaded guilty today to 11 extortion charges, described by Magistrate J. B. Blake as "contemtible," and was sentenced to five years in Kingston Penitentiary.

Magistrate Blake said he hoped the "sentence is sufficient to let the people know this crime is not a joke." The extortion attempts were made in letters to Mrs. Eleanor Dolph of Preston, Miss K. L. Wilkes of Blair, Mrs. J. A. Wilkie and Miss Peggy Briscoe of Galt.

Crown Counsel Clement said the crime was "both cruel and cowardly." A provincial psychiatrist's report said Rhodes was able to appreciate the nature and quality of his act.

Fear of Nazi Planes Is Credited For Munich Pact

Essen, Germany, Oct. 31 (AP)

JOSEF TERBOVEN, governor of the Rhineland, declared yesterday that Prime Minister Chamberlain brought about the Munich agreement not because he desided justice for the Sudeten Germans, but because he feared the German air force.

He also said Premier Daladier of France was not actuated by peaceful motives but took part in the Munich accord because he knew Germany's western front was invincible.

Farmer's Wife Vanishes With $600

CALGARY, Oct. 31.—(CP)—Confronted with what appeared to be a major mystery Calgary police today sought Mrs. Fred Steiner, 38, who came to Calgary with $600 a week ago and has apparently vanished.

Her husband, Fred Steiner, farmer, arrived here yesterday. His wife told him before she left their home at Retlaw that she would go to a Calgary hospital where she trained as a nurse 18 years ago. Retlaw is 150 miles southeast of here.

A telegram received by Steiner Tuesday further puzzled police. It said: "Your wife gave birth to twins last Monday. Boy stillborn. Girl survives. Wife's condition grave."

The telegram was signed "Nurse McNab." Steiner does not know anyone by that name in Calgary. At a telegraph office police learned the address of the person sending the telegram was not obtained.

A foreign-speaking woman of about 50 years sent the message, saying she was sending it for "Nurse McNab." She could not give the nurse's address.

U.S. To Probe Radio Mars Raid Scare

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31 (A.P.). — The United States Communications Commission began an investigation to-day of a dramatic radio broadcast which led some persons to believe last night that men from Mars had attacked the United States.

Chairman Frank McNinch asked the Columbia Broadcasting System to furnish the Commission with an electrical transcription of the broadcast, a dramatized version of H. G. Wells' imaginative story "War of the Worlds." McNinch said:

"Any broadcast that creates such general panic and fear as this one is reported to have done, is, to say the least, regrettable."

McNinch told reporters that he had received many telephone calls last night about the broadcast, but that the Commission had received only 10 telegrams, all protesting it, this forenoon.

Man Wounds Girl Of 19 Then Suicides

Emily Township Girl Wounded While Talking to Family

Death followed in the wake of a shattered romance Sunday night as 24-year-old Leonard Bacon of Lindsay, brooding over the loss of his sweetheart, Myrtle Irwin, 19, is alleged to have driven to her farm home, two miles north of Fowler's Corners in Emily Township, and shot through the window with a .22 rifle wounding the girl in the neck. Then he drove to Lindsay and shot himself dead.

The girl dropped to the floor and her family feared she was killed. Dr. M. D. Earle of Omemee was called and it was learned her condition was not serious. She was taken to Nicholls Hospital this afternoon for an X-ray examination, and it was found impossible to remove the bullet.

That Bacon had intended to make it a double fatality was brought to light when a letter was found. It was intended as a post-mortem message and was scribbled on the back of an envelope and left in his pocket. It was addressed to the girl's mother, Mrs. Irwin, and read as follows:

"Mrs. Irwin,—This is what happens when everybody turns me down just over a darn lie....So I will say good-bye. We will meet in heaven, I hope I will be with the one I love, Mr. Irwin."

Dr. G. C. Collison, Lindsay coroner, said there would be no inquest.

Bullet Shatters Window

At eight o'clock Sunday night the Irwin family were grouped together in the kitchen, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Irwin, and six young children, Laureen and Laverne, twins age 6; Ruby, 14; Jane, 12; Eileen, 10; Ione, 8. The bullet struck Myrtle in the neck after shattering the glass in the window. A few minutes before the shooting Mabel Irwin and her friend Dennis Ackerman left the Irwin home after having supper with the family and were unaware of the near tragedy. Two miles down the road they were stopped by Bacon.

"I've shot Myrtle," Bacon told Mabel. He warned Ackerman "You better take Mabel home or I'll shoot her, too." Neither Mabel nor Ackerman saw any weapon in Bacon's possession but returning home they learned of the shooting.

Bacon apparently then proceeded almost immediately to the home of a sister, Mrs. Maguire in Lindsay,

Britain, France Left Out Of Parley On Hungary's Slice Of Czechs

BERLIN, Oct. 31.—(AP).— Not the four powers of Munich, but Italy and Germany are going to arbitrate the Czechoslovak-Hungarian territorial dispute, it became apparent today.

Czechoslovakia and Hungary, unable by themselves to resolve Hungarian claims to Czechoslovak territory because of predominant Hungarian population, accepted invitations to meet with representatives of the Fascist powers in Vienna on Wednesday.

The two disputants asked the arbitration last week.

The Hungarian claims grew from circumstances of the Munich accord of Oct. 1, by which Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany agreed that Czechoslovakia should give to Germany Czechoslovak Sudeten areas.

The Munich Accord provided also that, if Hungary did not reach an agreement with Czechoslovakia on similar claims to territory within three months, the four powers should confer again.

An offcial announcement here Sunday, however, said only the foreign ministers of Germany and Italy would meet with the foreign ministers of Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

The chief issue appeared to be who should possess Bratislava, Munkacs, Kassa and Nitra, border cities on the Czecoslovak side of the line.

Mounting Problems May Summon King Home For Weekend

OTTAWA, Oct. 31.—(CP).—With governmental problems accumulating, Prime Minister Mackenzie King likely will return to Ottawa at the end of the week following his Caribbean cruise.

Decisions concerning calling the next session of parliament, various diplomatic and Senate appointments, possible Cabinet changes and the Czechoslovakia refugee settlement problem will not be made until Mr. Mackenzie King is back in the capital.

When he left for his holiday three weeks ago, it was indicated that he might return by way of Washington in connection with the proposed revision of the Canada-United States trade pact. However, it is understood that the Prime Minister will

Five Dogs Poisoned Over Week-end At Weston Corner

Weston, Oct. 31.

OVER the week-end, no fewer than five dogs were found dead from what is believed to be strychnine poisoning at the intersection of Jane and Dufferin streets, on the outskirts of Weston. The five were owned by residents of that vicinity, and, in the case of two, their owners stated they had been out less than twenty minutes before their bodies were found. Chief J. E. Holley, who is investigating, has warned all dog-owners in that area to keep the animals indoors for the time being.

Woman Swings Tomahawk To Save Home But Gan't Beat 13 Officers Using Gas

But the bars seemed to offer cold proof that the woman who had twice wed the late Jackson Barnett, reputed world's wealthiest Indian, had made her last stand against federal officials in her fight to hold a share of his oil fortune.

Marshal Bob Clark and a dozen deputies, two of them women, met her hatchet threats with a tear gas attack yesterday and led Mrs. Barnett and her daughter, Maxine Sturges, from the Wilshire Boulevard home. Blinded by the gas, her throw of the hatchet was wild, but Marshal Clark took it as evidence.

"I'll come back to my house and take possession of it again the minute you turn me loose," Mrs. Barnett cried.

Clark booked her and her daughter on suspicion of resisting a federal officer, but said contempt of court charges may be filed later.

After she had lived with the aged Barnett 14 years, federal courts annulled Anna Laura's marriage to him in 1934, three weeks before he died. The home was the last thing she possessed of his fortune and she clung to that defiantly.

When the eviction order was issued she was allowed 10 days in which to move. Clark waited 10 days more before ousting her.

Utah Murderer Dies Before Firing Squad With Machine Recording Heart Action

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 31 (A.P.)—A firing squad executed John Deering at dawn today in state prison while an electro-cardiograph recorded probably for the first time the action of the human heart pierced by bullets.

Deering, who had sought in every way to speed his death and who participated willingly in the scientific experiment to determine how long his heart would beat after being struck, was calm to the end.

The five man firing squad was given the order to fire at 6:45 a.m. MST (8.46 a.m. EST) and at 6:48½ a.m. Deering was pronounced dead in expiation for the May 9 holdup murder of Oliver Meredith, Salt Lake City businessman.

Deering was led from his cell and strapped in his chair against a prison wall. Electric wires were attached to his wrists and carried to a delicate machine his last heart beats.

Scientists began an immediate study of the record but said it would be a number of hours before they could announce any findings.

Utah is the only state in the union using a firing squad. Convicted men are given the alternative of this or hanging. One of the five rifles used is loaded with a blank.

Deering sought to make restitution by giving his body to the University of Utah. He willed his eyes to the state that any blind person might obtain the corneas for transplanting to restore sight. Only one had asked for them.

"I didn't mean to kill Meredith, but any rat that would shoot a harmless old fellow deserves to die," he said. "It's the least I can do. I'm ready. I hope they make it fast."

Tragedies Claim Nine Lives Over Weekend

TORONTO, Oct. 31 (C.P.). — Ontario's week-end fatalities stood at nine to-day—all male. Four men died in motor fatalities, two were shot accidentally, another shot himself after wounding a 19-year-old girl, a doctor was fatally burned, and a 10-year-old boy drowned in a pond.

A youth named Mertz, said to be from North Easthope, Perth County, was burned beyond recognition last night when an automobile left the highway near New Hamburg, crashed into a tree, and took fire.

Two other occupants of the car, believed to be Stanley Helmuth and Leonard Curtis of the same district, suffered serious burns and were taken to hospital. Identification of the victims was difficult because of the multiple burns they received.

At Madsen, in the Red Lake district of Northern Ontario, Dr. Dennis Smith, 30, native of Burlington and resident physician of the Madsen Mine, died yesterday of burns received when a masquerade costume he was wearing took fire. The accident occurred on Saturday night, and details were lacking.

Ten-year-old Raymond Nardini drowned near Cobalt on Saturday when he slipped from a raft and plunged into icy waters of a small pond on Nipissing Mine property. The boy was recovered in five feet of water.

Second Raft Upsets

William McKnight, 12, on another raft, also fell in the water when his raft was tipped over as the Nardini boy grabbed at it as he went down. McKnight reached shore and ran more than half a mile to Cobalt to summon aid.

Leonard Bacon, 24, shot himself to death last night less than two hours after wounding Myrtle Irwin at the farm home of her parents near Fowler's Corners, midway between Lindsay and Peterborough.

Gordon Blaylock, 24, Hamilton, died in hospital Saturday night a few hours after the car he was driving went out of control three miles west of Grimsby, rolled over four times and somersaulted once. Three Hamilton companions, including two girls, suffered injuries and were treated at their homes.

James Thorpe, 26, York township, suburban Toronto, was killed and five Toronto companions injured when Torpe's auto went out of control and overturned in a ditch a few miles east of Toronto. The party was returning from a celebration at

Fire On Deutschland Laid To Gas In Hold

NEW YORK, Oct. 31—(AP).—An explosion and fire aboard the Hamburg-American liner Deutschland which sent three freighters racing to her rescue was blamed to-day by her master, Captain Karl Steincke, on an accumulation of gases in the ship's hold.

As the ship docked last night, its 591 passengers—laughing and joking—told anew of Tuesday's heroic 9-hour struggle by the 369 crew members to control the blaze.

Scouting the possibility of sabotage, Captain Steincke said no estimate of damage could be made until insurance surveyors inspected the burned cargo to-day. There was no visible damage to the ship's exterior.

The captain was fervent in praise of his crew, 22 of whom were overcome by intense heat before the fire was smothered by pumping live steam and 50 tanks of carbon dioxide into the smouldering hold.

The commander declared the passengers could see the smoke pouring from the bulkheads, but behaved with remarkable calmness.

LaGuardia Lauds Murphy Regime

DETROIT, Oct. 31.—(AP).—Mayor Laguardia of New York City told 6,000 persons yesterday that "good government is contagious, and that the Murphy kind of government is bound to spread to other States."

Seated on the platform with Laguardia were Governor Frank Murphy, Democratic candidate for re-election, Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers, a committee for Industrial Organization affiliate, and Frank X. Martel, president of the Detroit and Wayne County Federation of Labor, (American Federation of Labor).

"I hope the example set by the working people of Detroit to-day in coming out here to indorse the cause of good government will be followed throughout the country," Laguardia said.

"I see the dawn of peace in the labor movement right here. We should have a united front in the ranks, and I think there could be no better place to begin than in Detroit right now. Frank Murphy and New York's Senator Wagner are real friends of labor. They will help bring peace in the family."

Class Observes 25th Anniversary

Marking the 25th anniversary of the "Others" class of Murray St. Baptist Sunday school, the Sunday morning service was under class auspices, with members occupying centre aisle front seats. Miss Clara Doughty, teacher of the class, and Miss Marjorie Stenton, president, participated in the service. The speaker for the occasion was Rev. M. C. Johnson, secertar yof the Religious Education Committee of Montreal.

Twenty-five years ago, said Mr. Johnson, the world war was in the making, and were certain then that if Germany were crushed and thoroughly subdued through force there would be peace in the world, but it was found since that peace does not come through force. Unless action is motivated by love then there can be no peace between nations, individuals or elsewhere. The speaker also stressed the difference between essentials and non-essentials in Christian life. There was a tendency at times to place much stres son saying who should and should not be considered eligible to observe the Lord's Supper, while the essential thing was that people should observe and feel the spirit which was in the sacrament. Unless there is love behind our actions Mr. Johnson was certain the results would eventually be futile.

Music by the choir under the direction of Arthur Collison and a well-rendered solo by Mrs. G. M. Stenton constituted the musical program for the morning.

Quebec Ridings Fight Communism

MONTREAL, Oct. 31.— (CP).—Communism's part in the St. Louis provincial by-election held the spotlight to-day as voting neared in the Nov. 2 contest to fill Legislative Assembly seats in the Montreal riding and in Stanstead county.

In both constituencies, the Communist party's activities in St. Louis drew the attention of Union Nationale and Liberal leaders over the week-end. Premier Maurice Duplessis and Liberal Leader Adelard Godbout, both of the hustings in Stanstead, brought Communism into their speeches.

The Premier, speaking at Coaticook for candidate Henri Guertin, advised Liberals to "tell Godbout that they don't want to ally themselves with Communism." He added that he never, as Premier, would let it "gain a foothold in Quebec."

Godbout, the Premier whom Duplessis dethroned in 1936, accused the government of being more Communistic in policy than were some of the policies of labor unions which the government claimed had a red tinge. He spoke at Magog.

The heav yunderlining given the subject by the political chieftains was brought about by the fact that Montreal election committee of the Communist party has announced it is concentrating on defeating Louis Fitch, K.C., Union Nationale president in St. Louis. Fitch is opposing Raoul Trepanier, president of the Montreal District Trades and Labor Council who is running as a "Liberal-Democrat."

The two candidates, only ones in the St. Louis fight, squared off on the Communistic issue last night. The Labor leader denied he is a Communist; Fitch claimed he was getting open support from official Communist newspapers.

Offers Praises To Goat's Milk

NEW YORK, October 31. — (C. P.).—Contrary to popular supposition, says a dietitian writer, there is no pronounced flavor to goat's milk. It cannot in most instances be distinguished from cow's milk by flavor, but only through its whiteness and greater richness.

The milk is alomst twice as rich in fat as cow's milk and the fat globules are infinitely smaller and more completely diffused, so fine the cream never rises, says this authority. The curd separates into clots which are soft and so soluble that it digests in about half the time required for cow's milk. Goat's milk gives an alkaline reacation and the various salts and phosphates make it a definitely superior quality milk, it is declared.

Walton, N.Y., Oct. 31 (AP)

THE PLATE was "passed in reverse" yesterday at the First Methodist Church here and Rev. Grant Robinson, who inaugurated the plan, termed it a "great success."

Mr. Robinson, who has been pastor for 11 years, explained it this way:—

"Each person will invest the dollar in any way he believes may be profitable and will, after six weeks, return the dollar and the profit to the church."

Women plan to embroider or make candy and popcorn and sell the products at a profit. The men will use the money in their business or on their farms.

"All were pleased with the idea," the pastor reported.

Colborne Strike Settled On Year Pact

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., Oct. 21—(CP).—A one-year agreement approved by a majority of the striking employees of the Humberstone Shoe Company today paved the way for gradual return to work of the 200 strikers.

The agreement, drafted by company and employee representatives meeting with Hon. Norman O. Hipel, Ontario Labor Minister, was ratified last night by a meeting of strikers on a split vote but failed to be accepted by the Canadian Shoe Workers' Union. That union was not cited in the contract.

The strike arose when the plant was reopened recently and the workers protested a proposed reduction in wages and demanded improved working conditions.

Under the agreement approved last night the basic rate of pay will be maintained and there will be no union discrimination. A seniority list will be established and from that list employees will be recalled to work as production increases.

In case of future disagreement between the company and the shop committee of its employees, the Ontario Department of Labor will act as arbiter.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 31 — (CP). — Winnipeg wheat futures showed little change to-day, mainly because outside markets were firm. Operations virtually ceased in the last hour and final quotations were unchanged to ¼ cent lower, October 60, November 59½, December 59b, and May 62⅜ to ½.

Continued absence of Canadian wheat export demand accounted for listlessness. Prices eased fractionally on early Chicago weakness, but firmed later as Chicago appeared to ignore forecast of rains in southwest dry areas.

Cash wheat turnover was small with prices firm. Coarse grains attracted little attention and prices for the most part were at the same levels as Saturday.

We Noticed

With great-grandmother's hoops promising to all but dominate evening fashions, suitable slippers —the 1939 version of the tiny low-heeled pumps that peeped so enchantingly from beneath her voluminous ruffled petticoats—dance on the fashion scene.

◇ ◇ ◇

A friend who has just returned from New York tells us that exclusive shops show several slippers of this type, both in suede and patent, some strapped, some plain, and one with open toe and heel. Grosgrain bows trim the toes and grosgrain insets tapering from the arch and widening around the heel give a becoming illusion of height. Great-grandma would have said they are "simply divine!"

Whibbs - O'Neill

DOURO, Oct. 31.—A pretty wedding of interest locally took place at St. Anthony's church, Toronto, on Monday morning when Viola O'Neill, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Neill of Downeyville, was united in marriage to Thomas Whibbs, son of the late Thomas Whibbs and Mrs. Whibbs of Douro.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Emmett. The ceremony, which took place in the sanctuary, was performed by Monseignor McGrand. The bride was gowned in wine velvet dress, street length, wine velvet hat with shoulder length veil and black accessories. She wore a corsage bouquet of cream colored roses and maidenhair fern. The bridesmaid, Miss Loretta O'Neill, sister of the bride, was gowned in navy blue velvet dress, navy velvet hat and blue accessories. Her corsage was of red roses. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Roman Whibbs of Peterborough.

The groom's gift to the bride was a chain and locket; to the bridesmaid a large dress ornament and to the best man a tie clip.

Mrs. Thomas Whibbs of Douro and son Roman of Peterborough and Mrs. Michael O'Neill and sons, Emmett and Stanley of Downeyville, were in Toronto for the wedding.

Kay Coughlin Weds Leo John Collins

Sacred Heart Church was the setting for a lovely wedding on Saturday, when Kay Coughlin, daughter of Martin Coughlin and the late Ada Harrigan of Douro, became the bride of Mr. Leo John Collins, son of Mrs. Collins and the late John Collins. Rev. Dr. Grant performed the ceremony, and organ music was played by Mr. Armstrong.

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Clarence Coughlin, the bride was charmingly gowned in white Duchess satin made on slenderizing princess lines. A row of tiny covered buttons reached to the dress hem, and the collar and yoke were fashioned of suede lace. Her veil of white silk net fell gracefully to her finger-tips from a headdress of orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of Bettertime roses.

Mr. Joseph P. Joree was best man.

After a reception at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. F. Collins, Lake street, the young couple left for a trip to Niagara Falls and Buffalo, the bride wearing a frock of wine wool with matching hat, a black fur coat, and black accessories. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Collins will live at 39 George street.

If You Want to Have Friends You Must Work Overtime Cultivating Them, Then You Must Never Presume Too Much in Your Dealings With Them.

A YOUNG girl asks me if I will tell her how to make and keep friends. Well, the first rule for making friends is to be friendly yourself. We just naturally like those who like us and are drawn to those who show that they admire us and enjoy our society. Go more than halfway to meet people, and they will come the balance of the distance to you.

Develop what salesmen call a good approach. Be easy to know. Don't expect strangers to make all the advances and work like coal-heavers for the privilege of getting acquainted with you. The world is too full of affable folks for us to bother with the standoffish. You might have every charm and virtue, and nobody would ever find it out if you shut yourself up in your shell and waited to be pried out.

If you want to keep friendship alive you must cultivate it. Otherwise it will die of neglect. Show those you wish for friends little attentions. Give them unceasing proof that they are in your affections by sending them a newspaper clipping or a magazine or a box of some special candy that they like, and that will make them feel that you are thinking about them and remembering their tastes and habits. never neglect writing letters of condolence and sending telegrams of congratulation. Many a friendship has been made by a 3-cent stamp and many a friendship lost for lack of one.

Don't be possessive in friendship. Because a girl gives you a place in her heart don't think that you own her body and soul and have a right to monopolize her. Don't be jealous of her other friends. Don't resent her going places and doing things without you. Don't make her afraid to give a dinner to which you are not invited or do anything which doesn't include you. Make your friendship something that adds to her pleasure instead of being a burden if you want it to last. And this goes double for a girl's friendship with a boy.

Don't be bossy. Friendship gives one many privileges, but not the right to be a dictator and to deprive others of their personal liberty. So don't try to pick out your friends' hats and dresses or tell them what color nail enamel to wear or how to have their hair cut. And, above all don't be one of those pestiferous friends who are always urging you to leave your own doctor and dressmaker for theirs, and join all the clubs to which they belong.

Don't make a graft of friendship. Don't think that because people are fond of you it gives you the right to use their cars as if they were your own, borrow their books without returning them, visit them uninvited and ask favors of them. There is no meaner racket than using your friends for your own advantage, because you are taking advantage of the fact that they are in a position where they cannot defend themselves.

Don't get too intimate with your friends. There is no such preservative of friendship as a decent amount of formality and reserve, so don't be a back-door friend. Come in the front way. So shall you see just so much of her life as your friend wants you to see. And never tell even your most intimate friend all the secrets of your heart, for if you do the time will surely come when you will hate her for knowing too much and becausce of your own indiscretion. A wise man once said: "Treat every man as if he might some time be your enemy."

Put honey on your tongue if you want friends to swarm around you. No friendship can stand plain talking, so never be one of those who feel it their duty as a friend to tell a friend that she is getting fat, or that her little Johnny needs a spanking, or that her husband was seen out with his blonde stenographer.

And, above all, in friendship give more than you expect to receive. Don't count what you give in the way of loyalty or service or consideration for affection, and in the end the bread you cast upon the waters will come back to you as angel's food.

It takes a lot of hard work and sacrifice and patience to make and keep friends, but they are worth it because they are the pleasure and solace of life.

Mission Band Holds Hallowe'en Tea

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Oct. 31.—The Mission Band of Knox Presbyterian Church held a Hallowe'en Tea on Saturday afternoon in the church basement which was very appropriately decorated for the occasion.

The guests were welcomed at the door by two "ghosts" in the persons of Misses Dora Ketchen and Iva Newell. The members of the Mission Band arrayed in typical Hallowe'en costumes served tea at four prettily decorated tea tables under the supervision of their leader, Miss Madeline Armstrong. Mrs. William Copp assisted by pouring tea. During the afternoon several piano selections were contributed by Miss Lois Wilson.

Do You Know?

The scent of gasoline may be removed from clothes that have been cleaned if the cloth used in pressing is wet with a mixture of about one part vinegar and two parts water?

◇ ◇ ◇

One-half teaspoon of vinegar added to the water when mixing pie dough will make the crust flaky?

◇ ◇ ◇

Glue, dissolved in hot vinegar, will keep soft if the bottle is tightly corked, except during the very coldest weather, and even then dissolves as soon as warmed?

◇ ◇ ◇

That vinegar works like a charm when it comes to cleaning dirt and smoke from the walls and woodwork? Wet a flannel cloth with it and rub.

DINNERS OF THE WEEK

Sunday

Veal Chops with Mushrooms
(See Note)
Brussels Sprouts with Lemon Butter
Baked Potatoes
Celery Hearts Coffee
Old Homestead Pudding (see note)

NOTE—If the veal chops are cut at least 1 inch thick or a little more, one will do for each serving when you serve a whole sauteed mushroom cap (as large as you can choose) with them. Paper frills on the trimmed back bone of the chop gives a Sunday appearance.

The Old Homestead Pudding is easy — and the ingredients are almost always on hand. Cream together ¼ cup shortening with ½ cup sugar, beat one egg until light and add. Sift one cup flour with 2 teaspoons baking powder and ¼ teaspoon salt. Sift this into mixture alternately with ½ cup milk. Then add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Bake in buttered muffin tins at 375 deg. F. for 15 minutes. These puddings must be served very hot with very cold sauce made thus: Beat until light, thick and lemony 2 eggs, then add 1 cup granulated sugar and beat hard. When sugar is dissolved fold in 1 cup cream beaten very stiff. If you approve this may be flavored with a tablespoon rum (especially if it is used near Christmas) or cooking sherry. This is an excellent dessert you should get into the habit of making for it is good when the main course has been light or cold.

Young People Hold Hallowe'en Party

HASTINGS, Oct. 31.—The annual Hallowe'en "At Home" Friday night, sponsored by the Catholic Young People's Club of Mount Carmel parish, was a huge success when 225 attended the affair in Lynch's Hall. Jack Grant and his Aces orchestra furnished music for the event. Lunch was served about midnight but it was found impossible to furnish seating accommodation for the large attendance. Miss Madaline Convey won the lucky spot dance.

An unusual feature of the affair was the large area represented by young people. Following were among the centres represented: Lindsay, Peterborough, Douro, Norwood, Havelock, Campbellford, Codrington, Grafton, Stirling, Brighton, Cobourg, Roseneath and visitors in the village from Toronto and New York state.

Messrs. Lyle Jex and W. J. Boyle of Toronto were weekend visitors in the village.

The Bylaw Is Wrong

Joseph Meagher, section foreman with the C. N. R. in this city was almost instantly killed in an accident at the C. N. R. intersection of Water street. The yard engine, on the platform of which Mr. Meagher was riding, collided with a truck, and the unfortunate man was at the point of impact. At the inquest which followed the evidence of the engineer was interesting and also informative. He was asked if the whistle had been blown and if the bell was ringing as he approached the street. The reply was that the whistle could not be blown at that point because there is in existence a civic by-law which forbids the blowing of train whistles within the city limits, and the bell of the train cannot be operated until within 75 feet of the crossing.

It is enacted that there shall be a penalty as high as $50 for a breach of that city by-law. The train was not going fast at the time; the speed was about six or seven miles an hour; it was at a time of evening shortly before six o'clock when at this time of year it is quite dark; the truck was seen coming along the highway—and yet our civic by-law says that the whistle must not be blown.

That is one time when a by-law is put to the acid test. It is all very well to pass such things, and this one was passed probably because there had been an excess of whistle blowing which had annoyed a number of people. But to forbid it under a penalty is another matter, and it would seem that by passing such by-laws with no reservations the city is taking a responsibility which it has no business to assume. If an engineer at any time sees a situation where he considers it necessary in the interests of safety or warning to sound the whistle who is there with sufficient wisdom to tell him he must not do so? The sooner our City Council puts hands on such a by-law for the purpose of amendment and common sense the better will it be.

The World's Fences

The world is fenced so that people can go only here and there. It also means that produce of one land cannot enter readily into another, and for such a condition of affairs it is possible to give at times fairly good explanations.

But at best all the explaining does not line up with the law of common sense and human need. Travellers who have been in Germany this summer report that much of the material which passes for butter is quite different to butter as we know it in our country. A substitute is being used.

In the Examiner recently there was information which we believe reliable showing that butter is being sold in Moscow for $1.68 per pound, and that means of course that few people would be able to use it.

In Canada at the moment we have 62,000,000 pounds of good creamery butter, but it is surplus stock. And that amount is 12,000,000 more pounds than we had at this time last year. We want to sell it but our market is largely in London. The people in Germany need it and so do the people in Russia. Yes, it's a fact that this old world is pretty well fenced off.

How Was It Done?

Forty airplanes which were assembled in Canada and shipped to Turkey came into possession of the government forces in Spain. In order to complete the construction of the planes it was necessary to bring the engines from United States, and the shipments were all in order. There is a certain procedure which has to be followed and nothing in it was overlooked.

It is also reported that when the planes were shipped from this country there was compliance with all the rules of regular business. There would have to be. And yet it is now reported that instead of the planes going to the government of Turkey they have finally turned up as the property of the government of Spain and are being used in a war in which Canada is in no way interested.

Whether the case is as unusual as it seems we are not prepared to say for the moment, and undoubtedly our government will act quickly to gain full information of all the transactions as they were enacted in this country.

We have always been more or less suspicious regarding that sort of traffic. Nations which are in the market for war material are never inclined to be too particular about the manner in which they get it. If Spain could have an agent in Europe who would represent that the order placed for planes was for the government of Turkey then we have not the least doubt that the agent would put through the business on such a basis and make certain that the person receiving the business would have no occasion to believe otherwise. It is also a fact that there are people in the munitions business who are quite aware of the tricks which are being played in order to get goods through to countries which have no business receiving them. Our government is fairly well occupied at the moment probing this, that and several other things, but there should be no time lost is giving to the people of Canada a detailed explanation of just how 40 planes assembled in this country found their way to the Spanish government.

The Same Old Story

It may be readers grow weary because they repeatedly see references in these columns to thugs who are running loose in our province with guns in their pockets which they have no business to possess. We see no other way but to keep on pointing at the sore.

Here is a typical case: H. W. Lints was in a gasoline station at Pottersburg, which is just on the eastern edge of the city of London. He was attending to his business; he was not doing anything which he should not have been doing; he was working and earning a living, and for those reasons alone he was entitled to all the help and protection which the state can give him.

Two armed men came in and used guns for robbery. Mr. Lints was helpless, and that took place on No. 2 highway at a place where there are plenty of brilliant lights.

There was not one bit of protection for this law-abiding man. Those who carried guns had been able to make use of every facility we provide to reach their victim, and they went about with guns in their pockets secure in the knowledge that no one was going to stop or question them, and they would also know that if they wanted to buy more shells for their weapon it would be an easy matter to do so. So why should we not keep on drawing attention to it?

Not An Easy Matter

Premier Aberhart desires the Dominion Government to join him in a movement to cancel debts of $4,510,590, which sum was made up of advances to farmers in Alberta between 1917 and 1922. This is a joint liability and Mr. Aberhart is waiting to find if Ottawa will join in cancelling its share.

The word "cancellation" when applied to debt is something which is not easy to understand especially when dealing with public funds. One can understood how a provate individual can cancel a debt, and there is a good deal of that done either from preference or the knowledge that collection is a hopeless matter. The individual has to account to no other party; he can just be out the amount and forget about it.

A collective body is different. The money which was advanced in Alberta represented an expenditure which would be paid out of the consolidated revenue fund and it would be paid out on the assumption that at a certain time it would be recovered. The machinery for outright cancellation is not in evidence. The amount might have been secured along with other money through a loan and people throughout the Dominion might possibly have taken up portions of it and they hold bonds showing that the government owes them money. Cancellation of a public money debt is not as simple as when the same thing is done by an individual.

What Will Washington Do?

Well over three weeks ago United States forwarded to Japan an official note protesting against interference with any existing trade arrangements which the republic possessed in China. It is possible to say a great deal in 3,000 words of protest, and Washington had plenty to say.

And the only reply which has been made is through a Japanese newspaper!

There is no record that the note from United States was ever made public in any way. The newspaper Asahi in its comment, is recorded as speaking with the sanction of what the Japanese are pleased to call "informed quarters." It probably means that the newspaper is expressing in a general way the view of its government.

The newspaper message says that conditions have been changing rapidly in China since Japan went in there, and a new situation entirely has arisen in the Far East which makes it necessary that United States "should acquire a thorough understanding of Japan's real intentions." Also "that the basis of the former status in the Far East is unsuitable in the present situation."

As a rule the method of communication between one government and another is very definitely marked, and official documents are handled by diplomats and receive reply in the same method. In the ordinary course of routine that is the way in which Japan would have answered the document of 3,000 words from United States. But the first thing which can look like a reply appears in a Japanese newspaper purporting to speak for informed quarters—the government.

Washington can make what it thinks best of the situation, but it is no exaggeration to state it is peculiar beyond the means of ordinary explanation. Call it an affront or a snub and you would not be wide of the mark.

And why? Because Japan is bent on a conquest of blood and greed. It is mauling China and killing its people and it is building for itself a greater place in the world where millions of new people will be forced to purchase goods from Japan.

The next reason is that Japan knows it has nothing to fear because United States writes a note of three thousand or thirty thousand words. Japan's method of speech is with guns, planes and battleships, and it is the one language which that country understands. Her whole government is dominated by the militia and pen and ink or typewriters are materials in which she takes little stock when talking to other nations.

United States prefers to remain in a position of freedom from what she calls foreign entanglements. She wants to be left alone, and so did China. And when her interests are being interfered with by the Japanese penetration of China, Washington writes a note which is answered first through newspaper comment! And the reason is plain as can be. Japan knows well enough that after United States wrote a note of protest that country would do nothing more about it. And a threat of that sort does not mean a thing to Japan.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Now they have started to use airplanes for hunting purposes wild life in Canada is getting a worse break than ever.

Prince Edward Island has a divorce court which seems to work splendidly. It has not yet granted a divorce.

There has been a splendid new arena erected in Owen Sound and the Sun-Times of that city rejoiced to the extent of 32 profitable pages.

A boy of 10 years snatched a woman's purse in Hamilton and got away with $6. Our book on "How to Be a Detective" says to watch the ice cream and hot dog stands.

Example of rather a stupid thing—Aimee Semple McPherson sued a magazine for $1,500,000 damages, and then settled out of court for $2,000.

Sudbury reports that wolves are growing bolder and they are to be heard at night howling in the bush. The ones that bother us most are the brazen ones who sit on the doorstep.

A man likes to feel that he is wanted and welcomed in the old home town, but we suppose it's different when the police are ready to act as the reception committee.

So keen are the Japanese to secure business that it is said their salesmen follow on the heels of the army. The day after Hankow was taken a salesman was there selling typewriters. And of course all keyed up for business.

Schools in Dayton Ohio, with 34,000 pupils, are apt to close because there is no money in sight and a deficit of $61,000. Strange isn't it how the pioneers with scarcely any money at all managed to provide schools for their children.

Brig.-Gen. E. L. Spears, Conservative member of the British parliament speaking at Carlisle, said: "Ananias compared with Hitler is just a Salvation Army lass." Rather a silly thing to say at best, and causes one to reflect too that Ananias was not a lass.

People sigh now and then for what they call the good old days but the Campbellford Herald reports that 60 years ago eggs were selling for 10 cents per dozen and butter for 12 cents per pound. If producers were selling at such prices today there would be cause for sighing.

Ottawa man sent $2 as conscience money to the R. C. M. P. at Calgary for two jars of preserves which he said, he took. There is no record of the theft and the man will get his money back. Some years ago there were some folk who put their money in the west but they did not get it back.

PINK SEDAN

¶ My pink sedan I fear must go, not that it's running very slow, at times 'twill hardly crawl; but things are even worse than that, the other day it left me flat, and would not go at all.

¶ When I go forth to take a ride, to view the autumn countryside, I fear there's something wrong; nor is it long I have to wait, and then in pain investigate, and find a tire is gone.

¶ I blew the muffler out last week, they tell me poisoned fumes will leak, on that I'm not so keen; and now when I start driving round, it makes a most unlovely sound, like some giant armed machine.

¶ A man told me the battery's shot, and that don't help an awful lot, the thing just dropped apart; the juice in it is very low, that's why the lights will hardly glow, and why the thing won't start.

¶ I don't think I could trade it in, for salesmen speak of it as tin, I listen to their bunk; they say that ere the days of spring, I'll simply have to scrap the thing, or sell it out for junk.

¶ My pink sedan I fear is done, for I can scarcely make it run, at times it will not turn; no offers would it ever bring, nor could another drive the thing—for none could never learn.

Why Churches Are Not Filled

DECREASING numbers attending church is causing considerable discussion by church bodies and by the press.

One clergyman, Rev. Edward Jefferys, who arrived in Toronto recently from the Old Country, is reported by a Toronto paper to have said: "The reason so many of our churches are empty today is that many preachers have given way to modernism."

For more than 20 years, writes J. W. Oakes of Guelph, I have been exploring the reason for the decline in the numbers going to church, and in these years I have come in contact with a multitude of people on this subject, and in not a single instance have I found either modernism or fundamentalism a factor in keeping people away from the church. I believe that it is correct to say that the great multitude who do not go to church are no more interested in modernism, or what the clergy profess to believe, or do not believe, than they are in the old controversy as to whether the earth is round or flat.

The people who are not going to church may, or thy may not, know very much about the fine points of theology, church doctrines, correct ritual or formula. But there are some things that they surely do know. They surely do know that the religion of the churches has not eliminated, or lessened in any appreciable extent, selfishness, greed, ill-will, exploitation of the many by the strong, from the adherents of this religion. They surely do know that the religion of the church has not changed or made better a society in which the haunting fear of want is torturing 3,000,000 honest people in this land of plenty. They do also know that all that the religion of the churches has ever offered them is a promise of "pie in the sky bye and bye." No, it is not modernism or higher criticism that is causing the decline in church attendance. I here quote two sentences from an able editorial in The Guelph Daily Mercury of June 4: "We talk about the higher critics undermining the authority of the Bible; no higher critic in the world can undermine the power of truth expressed in life. We need to profess less and live more. We need to strip ourselves of a lot of hypocritical pretense and hollow cant which we charge up to our Christian belief when it has no partnership whatever with Christ's teachings." Here the editor puts his finger right on the spot.

Between the religion of the churches, and the religion of Jesus (Christianity) there is a duel to the death. The religion of Jesus, as a way of life, would be another Samson let loose among the pillars on which ecclesiasticism, dogmatism, ceremonialism, mysticism and sacramentalism rest.

However, if the great multitude of people who once did go but are not now going to church, and the greater multitude who never went to church, ever form the habit of saying goodnight at sunrise, they may even form the habit of attending the stereotyped innocuous Sunday performances in the churches.

EAST AND WEST.

(Winnipeg Free Press)

MOST BUSINESS MEN in the East wish to see a resumption of immigration. They wish to see our farm lands all taken up and cultivated. Logically, then, they should wish to see Western agriculture sufficiently prosperous to make it attractive to new settlers. The way not to do that is to make Western producers packhorses for other interests of one kind or another. Even more important than bringing in new settlers is the need for preventing too many of the farmers' sons from leaving the land, by giving them something to live for and showing them that they have some prospect.

If the Western people are to be told that they must fend for themselves, it is quite clear that some of our Eastern friends will have to change their ways and stop trying to impose tribute which make conditions in these provinces harder and more discouraging. It is said that we should face realities. That is sound advice. There should be a facing of realities all around.

TRIBUTE TO SKIPPER.

A GREAT DEAL HAS been written about the feat of the gigantic Queen Mary, docking at New York alone instead of with the usual dozen tugs. The skipper explains it modestly thus: "I just got here and found there was slack water and very little wind and it was a matter of manoeuvring the engines to get in. The New York World-Telegram describes it:

"It never had been done—docking anything like so large a ship without tugs in the North River currents. In case of mishap he might have disabled a $30,000,000 ship, smashed a couple of piers, endangered lives, blackened his own career. But safely and without delay he brought in the Queen Mary as smoothly as a ferryboat into a slip. It was an emergency, but so is a gale, and that is what he was on the bridge to surmount. A great tradition could ask no finer fulfillment."

SLOT MACHINES.

(Windsor Star)

ATTORNEY-General Conant places on the shoulders of municipal authorities the responsibility of enforcing the new section of the Criminal Code which was resigned to ban slot machines.

No fault can be found with this. It is clearly the duty of municipal police to see that this law is maintained, though it is not easy to see why a provincial policeman should wink his eye if he sees the law being broken.

But Mr. Conant goes on to say that he cannot understand the exact meaning of the section which came into effect on September 1. Well, if the chief law officer of the province cannot understand it, how can municipal authorities be expected to do so?

JUMPING IN?

"Can you tell us if we can get down to the river this way, constable?" —"What! So soon?"—London Opinion.

• Strongest Man Since Samson

THE STRONGEST MAN of all time was Louis Cyr, according to Farmer Bailey, a professional weight-lifter, in a magazine article. He credits Cyr with having lifted as much as 4,300 pounds.

Cyr was a French-Canadian, born in Montreal, and in The Montreal Herald Elmer Ferguson writes:

"His hair was long, curling, hung in ringlets down to his shoulders. He was a Gargantuan man, with Gargantuan appetite. He was the strongest man who ever lived, at least in the after-Samson era. He was the Samson of modern times, even though he never pulled down any temples. Thirty years ago, they were still selling at old Sohmer Park little statues of the mighty Louis Cyr, and people were still buying those plaster casts of the man with the enormous muscles, of the curling hair that fell in ringlets, this last link with another generation of athletics.

Louis Cyr's feats of strength were nearly unbelievable, but they are not mere legend. They were performed at a time when weight-lifting, tests of straight muscular strength were in high popularity.

"This we find in printed records: At St. Henri town hall in 1889, Cyr met Barre in a weight-lifting contest and records of that day say Louis first lifted a bell weighing 265 pounds. Then a platform weighing 100 pounds was placed on the stage on it were placed seven dumbbells (metal) weighing 798 pounds, then a barrel of flour weighing 249 pounds, and then four men weighing in all 619 pounds. Cyr lifted this enormous load of 1,766 pounds, but Barre failed. It was apparently just a work-out for Louis who asked for three more men on the platform which added 562 pounds, or 2,328 in all. 'Putting his brawny arms around the platform, Cyr essayed to lift the heavy burden and did so with apparent ease,' says the chronicler. After that, Louis lifted 600 pounds of dumb-bell with one finger. He once did a back-lift of 3,536 pounds at Berthierville in 1888."

• People In West Travel More

(Lethbridge Herald)

WHEN Hon. C. D. Howe stepped off the plane at Regina airport the other day after his visit to Lethbridge, he told reporters he doubted that, when the service becomes regular, one plane daily each way on Trans-Canada Airlines would be enough.

Then with, no doubt, in mind the disparity in population between East and West, he added the suggestion that what we in the West lack in numbers we make up in travel. "Westerners travel more," he said.

And now he has the East "in his hair" as the saying goes.

Do Westerners really travel more than Easterners. If so, why?

With nearly 2,000 miles between us, as we write, and Toronto, we will say we agree with Mr. Howe. The writer confesses with some pride that he was born in Huron County, Ontario. A trip into the next county in our younger days was an event. It almost made us a traveled person. Lake Huron, beside which we were born is only 130 miles from Toronto. Yet the travel between the city and the lake is meagre. Of course, Torontonians have a lake of their own at the front door, but the Bay is far from being as inviting a spot as the shores of Lake Huron. Here in Lethbridge the 90-mile jaunt to Waterton National Park is made by Lethbridge people of an evening and they think nothing at all of it. But the average Ontario man would hesitate to drive 90 or 100 miles of an evening to get anywhere, except probably back to his own county.

In the West, of course, we have to travel more. Here we have ranches of 100,000 acres, yes, even 200 000 acres. It's a day's work to ride the line fence of one of these ranches. To visit a neighbor means probably a trip of 20 or 30 miles. Farm homes in many sections of the West are very often a mile apart. It was not out of the ordinary when the West was settling up for the farmer to haul his wheat 30 or 40 miles to the nearest railway, and cattle drives of 5 to 100 miles to ship the beef herd didn't bother the old-time cowboy in the least.

And then, too, here in Alberta we have the Rockies looming up 100 miles away. They look only 20 miles off on a fine clear morning, just a nice before-breakfast walk to a dyed-in-the-wool Westerner. Distance to us is merely a figure of speech. The real reason for this may be that practically all the older generation came thousands of miles to open up the West. They got the travel habit then, and because of the vast area of the prairies and the great distances they had to travel in the good old days, they keep right on traveling.

WHAT GOOD IS IT?

(Ottawa Journal)

DURING THE PAST month cargoes of gold have been coming to United States ports in such numbers that United States monetary gold stocks have reached the colossal total of 14 billions. This is actually a billion dollars more of gold than the United States had on hand three or four months ago, and it is 58 per cent. of all the monetary gold in all the rest of the world (in old gold dollars) held by all the world, including the United States, before the World War.

What good is it? With its 14 billions of gold the United States has some 10,000,000 people unemployed; some 20,000,000 living directly or indirectly on assistance by the Government. It is a fairly devastating answer.

DAMPENS PROSPERITY.

(Brantford Expositor)

MUNICIPAL TAXATION, as every one knows who has given any study to the question, has not only become a menace to individual property owners but also a detriment to the financial prosperity and economic progress of urban centres.

The removal of this grievance cannot be postponed without serious loss to the municipalities concerned. It is hindering the building of homes by people of average means, and is driving many of those who can afford it to settle in rural communities. Worse than that, rather than pay taxes on property, owners have destroyed many houses, thereby adding to the housing problem.

If the municipalities unitedly demand relief from this burden insistently and urgently enough the Provincial Government will be compelled to grant it.

THE CANTON VICTORY.

(Baltimore Sun)

HOW SERIOUS has been the blow to Chinese morale cannot yet be estimated, and it is not possible to say whether the feebleness of the defence of Canton means that resistance is finally breaking or that some revision in Chiang Kai-shek's strategy called for the surrender of that city and Hankow, too. In any event, the Chinese cause is now rendered desperate by the seizure of its main depot of supplies and the severance of its chief artery of distribution. How much longer the armies along the far-flung front can maintain anything like a co-ordinated and organized defence is now a matter of grave doubt which may be resolved within the next week or two.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

THEN SAID Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know you free, and the truth shall make the truth, and the truth shall make you free. They answered him, We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man: how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free?

Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.... I know that ye are Abraham's seed; but ye seek to kill me, because my word hath no place in you. I speak that which I have seen with my Father: and ye do that which ye have seen with your father....Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own; for he is a liar, and the father of it.—John viii, 31-34, 37, 38, 41, 44.

George Street United Church Observes 103rd Anniversary

In the complex, fast-moving life to-day man needs strong faith built upon firm foundations, if he is to achieve happiness and any degree of security. So declared Rev. T. J. Hunter, B.A., B.D., minister of Westmoreland Avenue church, Toronto, speaking last night at the 103rd anniversary services in George Street United church.

Rev Mr. Hunter spoke at both morning and evening services, both of which was largely attended by adherents and friends who came to celebrate the memory of the founding of one of the city's oldest churches. An outstanding feature of the services was a full choir, nearly sixty strong, that sang beautifully. A number of solo numbers were also of unusual strength.

Taking his evening text from the Book of Revelations, Chapter 6, Verse 17, "For the great day of His wrath is to come and who shall be able to stand?" Rev. Mr. Hunter delivered an address that was one of the most inspired to be heard at the anniversary service in many years.

He outlined world conditions to-day and pointed to the problems that face mankind now that were not existent a hundred years ago. While life at that time was a comparatively simple thing, to be lived quietly and with few mechanical distractions, it has now become more and more complex, involving an ever greater expenditure of energy, an ever greater need for something to lean on, he said.

He launched a severe attack on gambling as it exists to-day, found it to be one of the evils that have come with a more complex life, leading men into temptation greater than existed in olden days. Similarly liquor, he said, exists as one of the vices which men must battle. Despite all claims of a few years ago that beer-running would cease with the establishment of the Liquor Control Act, such had not proved the case, he said.

He pointed to unemployment as another complement of modern living that was destroying individual personality and weakening the morale of our race. We live in a world that hates war, yet we are spending more for armaments than ever before. Two cruel wars are being waged at the present time and we have escaped a third and more cruel one by only a narrow margin, he said. These and other factors are causing men's hearts to fail them. They see distress overtaking them, and are apparently unable to ward it off. He told of one couple who had committed suicide because they could see nothing good that life offered, and could not carry on living when they believed it to be worthless.

Science and medicine have made great strides in the past generation, yet men are not so able to cope with life as they were at that time. Machines have given men a greater task to perform, rather than lessening his burden, was his claim.

Against all this complexity, as a solution, he placed faith in God and the Christian church. He who shall be able to stand firm, who shall be able to acquire happiness and security, is the man whose faith is built upon the firm rock of Christianity, whose soul never wavers from the conviction that he can accomplish all with the help of Jesus Christ. He called upon the members of the congregation to take Christ into their lives, to live by His teachings, to accomplish great good in the world. To such men life to-day offered a great many more opportunites for good than it had ever before, he said.

In the morning Rev. Mr. Hunter's sermon was "The Witness of the Church." Soloist was Mrs. James Goldie, who sang "The Lord's Prayer," and took the solo part in the anthem, "I Am Alpha and Omega." In the evening, vocal selections were sung by Mrs. James Goldie, Charles Renaud and G. D. Carlisle.

Looking Back
On This Date

On October 31, 1849, Toronto newspapers published a report of a meeting the previous day of citizens of Cobourg, called by the president of the board of trade "to express disapprobation of the annexation movement at Montreal." Mr. Asa A. Burnham presided and there was a representative attendance of the citizens who had not forgotten the indignity to which their town and its district had been subjected a year before by the invasion of the "land pirates" under Ben Lett and other members of Bill Johnson's gang. Party lines were forgotten. The first resolution moved by Hon. George S. Boulton, expressed "regret and indignation" that any British subject "should have affixed their names to a document recommending the separation of the colonies from the British Empire and their annexation to the neighboring republic."

Other resolutions were moved and seconded by such men as Thomas Eyre, Andrew Jeffrey, George S. Daintry, John C. Boswell, David Brodie, Darcy Boulton, William Graveley and James Cockburn (afterwards the first Speaker of the House of Commons of the Dominion). The expressed confidence that "submission to the rule of a constituted majority and fairplay to any administration under responsible government in the province of Canada, relief from economic troubles could be secured by the co-operation of the provincial with the Imperial legislature, and eventually create a great British community on the north American continent united with the greatest empire in the world."

All the speakers pledged themselves to arouse the loyal sentiments of the district, which had proven its pride in allegiance ever since its creation and keep unstained the record of the county of Northumberland, willing to live in peace beside the American republic as friends and neighbors, but also ready to die fighting rather than sever the connection with the parent state. This meeting had widespread effect throughout central Ontario and did much to minimize the agitation launched at the big demonstration at Brockville a few weeks before.

Alex Edmison Named Clerk Of Smith

Alex I. Edmison of the third concession of Smith was appointed township clerk at Saturday afternoon's meeting of the township council. All the members were present with Reeve Allan B. Mann presiding. Mr. Edmison has been auditor of the township for a considerable period and is well acquainted with the municipality's affairs. He was selected from a strong list of eight applicants, and succeeds Percy Udy, whose retirement has been regretted by the council and ratepayers generally.

Goodnight Story
By MAX TRELL

"LOOK WHAT I've brought you!" father said the other night as he came home.

The two children looked up. So did Hanid and Knarf, their shadows, who were sitting right behind them.

Father had a long, narrow box. He unwrapped it and took out a long, shiny brass tube. It was quite narrow at one end and got wider and wider toward the other end. There was a little glass at the narrow end, and quite a wide, round glass at the other end.

"But what is it?" the children still wanted to know.

It's a Telescope

"It's a telescope," said father.

"A telescope! What's that for?"

Father smiled. "It's for looking at the stars," he answered.

"Humph!" said Knarf to Hanid in a low shadow-voice. "I don't think that's much of a present. I can look at the stars just as well without it. I'm glad he's not giving it to me."

But father went right on speaking. "Of course, we can see the stars without looking through a telescope—"

"There! Didn't I tell you?" Knarf whispered. He felt very proud of himself.

"—but," father continued, "if you look at them through a telescope, you can see them ever so much better. They look bigger. The telescope makes them seem nearer. It's as if they had come down quite a ways closer to us. Do you understand what I mean?"

"Oh, yes!" the children cried.

"A telescope is a wonderful thing," father said. "When a captain of a ship, sailing far out in the ocean, sees a tiny dot upon the water many, many miles away, he looks at it through a telescope. And instantly the telescope makes the little dot seem big, and close to him. Often he sees that the little dot is really a huge ship, as big as his own."

"Look what I've brought you!"

Must See It Work

Hanid looked at Knarf. "I guess a telescope is better than you thought it was. Don't you wish it were your present now?"

But Knarf only said: "I want to see how it works first. We haven't even looked through it yet."

Then father said: "After dinner, when the moon is out, we'll go out into the garden and look at it through the telescope. You'll be surprised to see how differently the moon looks."

And the children all hurried through dinner, for they wanted to see just how the moon looked through the telescope.

AFRAID TO MARRY
by HELEN WELSHIMER

CHAPTER 35

IT RAINED the night that Bob Cushing mentioned Ronald. He sat in a great, overstuffed chair, long legs extended to the fire, hair bright in the firelight, and knitted his brows.

Marjorie, dropping in unexpectly, sat across from him, the fire shades making her brown dress warmer, her chestnut hair sparkle. She had rung the bell just after Bob pushed it.

Judy was on a hassock, a green smock over her black work frock, a smudge of charcoal on her nose, for she had been working when the bell rang twice.

Marjorie and Bob had mounted the long steps together, looked at each other and laughed at their top.

Now, introductions over, they shared the same comfort while a winter rain beat against the windows, and the coffee pot bubbled on its small electric stove.

"Yes. Why?"

"I know him, too," added Marjorie.

"Do you trust him?" The words were almost studied.

"Of course!" That was Marjorie.

"Anywhere!" That was Judy.

"There are forces that are fixing to pull his career down around his bright red head. I'm on a story to find out what I can. If you read the papers, you've noticed mention of it so I'm not spilling the dope?"

"But why? What has he done?" Judy swung around, eyes wide with wonder, uplifted face eager and lovely in the firelight.

"Nothing, I hope. It's a matter of jury bribing—"

"He wouldn't!" She said the words with such vehemence that her curls shook.

"I didn't say he did, my sweet. But he's won five decisions running, every one on an important case, and there are those who begin to wonder. Oh, of course maybe the lad's a wonder, and I'll admit other men have done the same thing. No one would have spent a thought on the matter but a juror made a statement about a bribe and somebody did some detective work...."

"Ever hear about people being framed?" Judy asked, chin in her hands as she rested her elbows on her knees. "It's a word in any newspaper man's vocabulary. Couldn't that have happened to the juror—someone paid him to make that assertion?"

"Very likely. We've thought of that. Has Birrell any enemies that you can mention?"

Judy shook her head slowly. "N-no, but he may have. I haven't seen him for a long time."

(Not since that night I stood in the doorway of Mr. Heaton's office and he said he never would forget that I'm rooting for him. Never as long as he lived!.)

Well, she was rooting for him now.

"Is there more to tell us, Bob?" she asked as quietly as though her heart was not rolling through hoops again. Why had she thought she was getting better?

"Not much. It's only recently that Birrel and the Boland girl became engaged, so that could account for the money."

"Do you know anything about Ronald's background?" Judy asked She told the story slowly, eyes on Bob's face, trying to pierce his thoughts, to make him see how improbable it was for Ronald to lie or bribe or cheat.

When she finished, he nodded, shook the ashes from an old pipe. (Ronald had a pipe, too—he had smoked it that night at the cottage in the white woods. If only scenes wouldn't flit back like throwbacks on a screen!).

Bob spoke clearly. "I'm for Birrell. I hope he cleans his slate. He's young to throw away a career. And for what? He's got brains. He could win his way without a crutch."

"I don't see how you dare to doubt him," Judy puzzled.

Marjorie was more understanding. "Bob doesn't know him, Judy. If he did, he wouldn't say that. After all, he has to investigate both sides."

"Let's declare a truce," the newspaperman said suddenly, "and all go to a movie. I'll run on ahead and hail a cab. Agreed?"

They went to Radio City because there was a picture there which all three wanted to see. They arrived late, so the second show was beginning. When it ended, as they came out of the building, they saw Ronald and Abbey.

Neither Bob Cushing nor Marjorie knew that there was any reason why Ronald and Abbey should not unite. Of that unhappy episode at the Long Island estate Judy had told no one. Therefore, when introductions were completed and Bob suggested they drop around to the Cert room at the Waldorf, Marjorie seconded the invitation.

"Mind if I jump into a cab and go home?" Judy asked. "I have to be at the studio an hour earlier than usual tomorrow. And I'm not accustomed to late hours this winter."

They demurred but she was insistent. It was Ronald who closed the door of the cab after her and gave the driver her address. He said: "Are you sure you are all right, Judy?"

"Of course I am. But what about you, Ronald. Are you?"

"You've heard?"

"About the false accusations? Just tonight."

"Then you don't believe them?" He asked it eagerly.

"Certainly not! Whatever made you think I would?"

Cabs honked behind them where traffic was piling up. The driver lost the green light and turned around, angry. They did not notice. Here, where a yellow cab made an oasis, Judy and Ronald looked at each other and wondered.

Then Abbey called from the sidewalk: "Ronald, we're getting wet!"

By some strange alchemy Ronald might love Abbey for some reason which she could not appreciate, Judy told herself as the cab swept downtown. But he himself was honest, true, fearless. Maybe the gleam and glitter of a hothouse plant had swept him from his base, just as he had feared the lure of a title had been inducement for Abbey to marry Count Phillippe. Perhaps, in his struggling years of school, college, and the beginning of his legal work, he had not spent much time with girls, and did not know that womanhood was not always lovely. Even now Judy was ignorant as to whether the log-stealing story had been told to him. She did not think it had.

Ronald had refused to believe that she was guilty, and she would accept his innocence, too.

Any day Judy feared that there would be an open attack made on Ronald. She wondered how he would respond. Would he keep his white banner blowing in the wind, or would he be hurt, so hurt he would hurry home to his hills?

The first hint of spring was in the air one late February afternoon when he telephoned her. She was at work, trying to help a dressmaker get the right swing to a crushed belt when the call came. She took the telephone extension from the assistant and said hello, her thought still on the silken band of ribbon.

"Judy?" It was Ronald. He spoke hurriedly.

"Oh, yes, Ronald." Her voice was low and surprised.

"May I borrow your apartment for half an hour tonight about 9 o'clock? I wouldn't ask but I need privacy and mine would be observed. I feel—I feel I can trust you."

"Yes, yes, of course, you may. I'll let you in and run around the corner and have a soda until you've finished."

He rang her bell at a quarter of 9.

The Stars Say . . .
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, November 1

A DAY of remarkable and surprising opportunities and adventures is presaged by the major planetary influences. There may suddenly be presented some grand mount influence on the entire future tives, surroundings and associates, fortunes and destiny. This is likely to demand a drastic reorientation of the personal life, with new objectives, surroundings and associates But whatever the situation, the mind will be able to cope with difficulties. Discretion is enjoined.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a year of important events, for high achievements, expanded fortunes and possibly spectacular adventures. An entire about-face in the life seems imminent, leading on to fortune and to fame, but also provoking jealousy enmity and treachery. The mental faculties and emotional forces will be found keyed to success and gratification, if activities are guided with circumspection.

A child born on this day may have original talents, much initiative and high ambitions which may lead it to a conspicuous place in the public esteem. It should be charming, gracious and of great humanitarian aspirations.

Independent Court Of Revision For North Monaghan Aid In Solving Differences

Appointment of an independent Court of Revision for North Monaghan was suggested by Bruce Johnston, township clerk, and recommended for consideration by both the Urban and Rural Ratepayers' Associations, at the meeting of the court, composed of the members of the Municipal Council at the Court House on Saturday afternoon. He said that if there was a more equitable valuation of property for taxation these associations would have little cause and reason for their existence.

Mr. Johnston said the Legislature had provided the means for bringing into being a non-elective court, separate from the Council. It would remove any possibility of members of a Council being exposed to influence as members of the Court of Revision by the fact that they had to be elected. He added that there was too general a tendency by some ratepayers to kick against assessments, with the result that often the man who made the "loudest kick" got off with paying less tax than should be charged against him.

Reeve Milby Presided.

Reeve James Milby was appointed chairman on Saturday afternoon after the Council had taken the oath as members of the Court, administered by the clerk.

Reeve Milby said the Council had adopted the assessment roll of 1938 as a basis for 1939, and also noted the improvements in property, new sub-divisions and transfers of deeds. In the case of persons buying a lot and building a house, he would not be enrolled for assessment purposes unless the Council had filed these friendly appeals. Otherwise, these property owners would be exempt from taxes in 1939. They also became listed as qualified voters.

Reeve Milby said the Council was considering the passing of a by-law invoking the benefits of the Dominion Housing Act, as the City Council had already done. This Act provides for payment by the Government of the taxes on new houses to the extent of 100 per cent. for the first year, 50 per cent. the second, and 25 per cent. the third.

Properties Improved.

Assessment of Herbert S. Routley's property on the Peterborough-Port Hope Highway at $800 on land and $600 on buildings, total $1,400, was increased $200 on the buildings to $1,600. Mr. Routley had rebuilt a kitchen.

The Carruthers property, also on the highway, bought by Dr. Arthur Johnston, was assessed last year at $300 on land and $1,300 on building. W. B. Gordon, for the owner, said an extension was made this year to the rear of the house. Mr. Barnes moved, seconded by Mr. Archibald, that the assessment be increased $400 on the building, making the total $2,000.

Assessment of a dwelling in course of construction by Herbert Bradburn on Weller Street West was agreed upon at $600 on the building as at October 15, when the expenditure was estimated at $1,800, and $200 on the land. Mr. Johnston said that according to the transfer records the land was bought for $750.

Sidney Barrock's assessment, Lots 130 and 131, Lock Street, was confirmed at $2.75. It was assessed previously at $225, and expenditure of about $300 was made on the store subsequent to that time.

They were assessed by the Court at $150 each, total $1,650; the balance of her land is to be assessed at $1,250. It was also decided that the assessment of Mrs. Huffman's property, Lot 4, Plan 63, Monaghan Road, be assessed at $150 for land and $1,000 on building, total $1,150.

Moved by Mr. Archibald, seconded by Mr. Grady, that the assessment of the Huffman Apartments be $6,250 of which $5,000 is on the building.

Lot 6, Plan 63, Monaghan Road, is to be assessed to Robert Scott Allin and Edythe M. Allin, land $150, building $1,350, total $1,500. It was valued at $3,500.

W. H. Andrew was relieved of taxation on Lot 20, Plan 30, which he sold to John Hetherton, who is to be assessed $75 for the land. Mr. Andrew's assessment was confirmed at $1,050.

Mr. Barnes moved, seconded by Mr. Archibald, that Miss French be assessed for $50 and Mr. Royea's assessment be $150 for summer cottage, $900 for house, $450 for land, total $1,500.

Robert Disbarbieux, Lot 20, Plan 4, two cabins and improvements, present assessment $250, buildings $450, total $700; assessment increased to $375, land $250, building $625.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103 and gas? Was the world coming to an end?"

There wasn't a martian in sight and the hysteria subsided almost as quickly as it started. But listeners viewed the broadcast with mixed feelings, principally that they had been untowardly frightened and duped.

The broadcast was an adaptation of H. G. Wells' imaginative "war of the world," further dramatized and enacted by Orson Welles, the 23-year-old theatrical prodigy. Welles Americanized the locale and situations.

Four times during the program, Columbia Broadcasting System pointed out, the announcer stressed that the story was nothing but fiction.

This comforting reiteration either escaped many of those who tuned in for the full program or was lost entirely to part-time listeners or late tuners-in, for it failed to prevent a hysteria unknown to the United States since the Great War.

Many of those who were listening to Charlie McCarthy's foolishness on the National Broadcasting Company network doubtless were caught up in the furor of neighbors dashing out of their homes, some with personal belongings, and heading for havens against invasion from an unknown foe armed with strange death-dealing implements from other and presumably hostile planet.

Welles, who startled the theatre ocularly last season by portraying a Caesar in modern dress with Fascist leanings, was overcome by the unbelievable reaction to his presentation of the Wells thriller-turned-horrifier.

In a statement expressing "deep regret" over apprehension the broadcast caused among radio listeners, Welles said:

Welles said:

"Far from expecting the radio audience rather than a fictional presentation, we feared that the classic H. G. Wells story, which has served as inspiration for so many pictures, radio serials and even comic strips, might appear too old-fashioned for modern consumption.

"We can only suppose that the special nature of the radio, which is often heard in fragments, or in parts disconnected from the whole, has led to this misunderstanding" the actor-dramatist added.

His success as a terrifier was assured by last night's performance which started off with the brief preface about its being fiction. The Mercury Theatre of the Air program started out in routine fashion with announcements and a few bars of music.

Suddenly—"We interrupt this program of dance music to bring you a special bulletin. . . 20 minutes before eight, professor Farrell of the Mt. Jennings Observatory, Chicago, Illinois, reports several explosions of the incandescent gas occurring at regular intervals on the planet Mars."

This was a buildup for a dramatization that eventually had the Martians landing in meteor cars with the shock of an earthquake in the vicinity of Grovers Mills (fictitious locale), New Jersey . . . a 30-second pause for studio music . . . then the octopus-like Martians using the dread "heat-ray" and then, by telephoning from the scene, the report of 40 persons dead there . . . the Martians eventually succumbed to germs that we worldlings are immune to.

The four cautionary announcements that it was fiction were lost and forgotten in the realism of the portrayal, in its faithful smiliarity to the style of the "newscasters" and in the realistic manner of breaking into regular programs with broadcasts of hot news.

Columbia declared afterward it had no intention of misleading listeners "and when it became evident that part of the audience had been disturbed by the performance, five announcements were made over the network later in the evening to reassure those listeners."

Youngest Monarch En Route To Take Over Duties

Apples Are Very Plentiful On Weekly Farmers' Market

Vexations of the vegetable grower were illustrated and personified on Saturday's market by A. L. Wilson of Baltimore, the little hill and valley hamlet on the road from Roseneath to Cobourg, breezing in with a sedan full of cauliflowers of all sizes and selling at the uniform price of five cents.

Other producers had been getting from five up to twenty cents a head, according to the size of the cauliflower. Some of them at the top price were as broad as cow-breakfast straw hat. The smallest sizes had brought five cents each, and most of the heftier speciments fifteen cents. Then came the strangers, and after untangling themselves from a car load of cauliflower, even the trunk at the back was filled, they went to work, and you could take the biggest of the lot for a nickel. Attractive stock it was, too, not the biggest on the market, but otherwise equal in quality.

It was a sharp cut in the cauliflower price, but producers can do what they like, give the stuff away if any one was crazy enough for that.

Market Pattern Changing

The market is definitely changing in its appearance, like the woods and the countryside, settling down for the winter. Even George Benton was missing Saturday, terminating the floral season. The market had nothing to offer for decorative effect except bittersweet at fifteen cents a handful. Nature is done with beauty for this year, that is the soft and fragrant beauty of flowers from the gardens and countryside, and if you still must have table decorations as essential to lunch and dinner you will have to look to the florist from now on, and at present he is making the most of "mums."

There is still ample variety of the provender the producers pass out over their counters but is gradually sifting down to substantial food like potatoes and turnips, roast pork and goose and so on, winter staples, typified by the shelled white beans you can buy by the quart for meals designed for reinforcement against near zero weather.

Apples The Feature

Everywhere you looked on the market Saturday you saw apples and then more of them, and so far as the Examiner could determine they were all from outside and immediate locality except Norman Moncrief's.

Mr. Moncrief put on a real fruit show with the products of his own orchard and jugs of cider in the background. Some farmers grow apples for themselves, and only a few at that, but Mr. Moncrief is giving special attention to that branch of farming and his stock speaks for itself.

Some of the apple prices gathered along the benches were: No. 1 Snows 40 cents a peck, $4 a barrel; Baxters $1 a bushel; Talmans $1.50 for the best.

The Doig family was offering Northern Spies at from $3 to $3.40 a barrel. W. L. Snowden of Bowmanville quoted top grade Spies at $4.25 a barrel or $1.50 the hamper; Starks $2.50 a barrel, tree run, and do your own grading; McIntosh Reds $1.50 the bushel; Greenings $1.25 the bushel; Blenheim Pippins, $1.25 a bushel; Snows, $1.25 a bushel; Wolf Rivers, $1.15 a bushel. The Snowden display of fruit included quite a number of varieties and seemed to have reached its peak in attractiveness They were quoting pears at 45 cents a basket.

John Frei, manager of a big fruit farm near Cobourg, was showing some excellent stock, and told the Examiner he had sold just about everything. He quoted Snows at $1.25 a bushel and 25 cents a basket, and Talman Sweets 25 cents a basket. Mr. Frei said he had tried peddling apples from door to door in Peterborough trying to develop a local outlet, and finally discovered it was easier passing them out at the market.

The prices quoted by Leon Cann of Port Hope included Spies at $1.75 for No. 1 quality and $1.40 for the next grade.

E. Morrison of Port Hope, one of the Saturday regulars, had an attractive display of fruit He quoted $1.50 for Spies, $1 for McIntosh Reds and $1 for Pippins.

The orchard men generally report that there has been a big crop, the quality is excellent and the prices are down to the level at which everybody can afford their "apple a day."

One For the Committee

Doubtless this incident was mere accident, but it might be noted by the market committee, sale of a barrel of cider by Rod Pretty of Bowmanville to some man living at Cobourg. If that were a representative sale Peterborough market could lay claim to an extensive scope. Mr. Pretty wasn't curious about how the Cobourg man chanced to be in Peterborough, and so he could not offer any further information.

The Bowmanville cider this week was pressed from Wagner apples. It was delicious; sells at 50 cents a gallon, but if you take a barrel of it the price is slit in half. People who have had some experience with cider say it loses its innocence and sweetness as it grows older, becomes hard and sophisticated.

Spinach and Broccoli

In the greens department the last planting of spinach is now coming to market and is in prime condition. The price was 15 cents a peck. C. A. Hope reported that the broccoli season will soon be over. It sells at 5 cents a bunch.

Arthur Stenson quoted these prices: Parsnips, 25 cents a peck; beets, 25 cents and carrots, 25 cents; peppers, 25 cents a dozen and cabbage, 5 and 10 cents each; yellow Danvers onions, $1 a bushel and the Red Weatherfields onions, $1 a bushel. Weather has been excellent for farm and garden work, Mr. Stenson reported. Most of the potatoes are in and turnips are on the way. In some places rain would be a big help to plowing.

Potatoes seemed suspiciously light in supply Saturday, as if growers were indifferent about selling now with increasing reports indicating a lighter yield than was expected. The price average was from 80 cents to $1 a bag. Turnips were 5c and three for 10 cents. Brussels sprouts 10 cents a quart, green onions 5 cents. Fresh pork 14 and 16 cents a pound.

Herb Doig, who dynamited prices several times this years, says he has just filled a new root house, 63 feet by 25 feet, also four cellars, and still has 200 tons of cabbage in the field and 2,000 bags of parnsnips.

Poultry is becoming more plentiful, and there was an attractive offering Saturday. Chickens sold at 20 to 22 cents a pound and may have slipped off a little after twelve o'clock; eggs were 35 to 40 cents; geese 18 to 20 cents and butter 20 to 22 cents.

Honey prices were steady.

Five Have Narrow Escape From Death

Five persons had a narrow escape from death Saturday night when two automobiles met head-on a mile south of Bailieboro on Highway 28.

As a result of the smash, Mrs. Michael J. Hallihan, 503 Parnell street, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Oscar T. Hallihan are in St. Joseph's Hospital, the former suffering from a badly lacerated and fractured nose, bruises and shock and the latter from shock, bruises and possibly internal injuries.

The two husbands were also bruised and shocked but were not retained in hospital.

The accident occurred opposite the first aid sign on Highway 28 about 10.30 o'clock. A car driven by Oscar Hallihan was proceeding northward and came into contact head-on with a machine being driven south by George H. Watkins, of Canton.

Watkins who was alone in his car escaped unhurt. Both machines were badly damaged, the Hallihan car being a complete wreck.

The accident was investigated by Traffic Officers McClure and Broughton.

Four Badly Injured

Helen Faseruk, 23, and George Matheson, 19, suffered possible fractured spines and abrasions and are confined to hospital. Two other young women are in hospital less seriously injured, while the sixth person, Charles Thorne, 22, was released from hospital following treatment.

Grant Pridham, 23, Grenville, Que., was killed Saturday night and four Montreal companions seriously injured when the car in which they were riding crashed into the rear of a parked truck on the highway 30 miles northeast of Hawkesbury.

Son of a former mayor of Grenville, Pridham was driving from Montreal with his sister, Mrs. A. Hull and her husband, Miss G. McCallum and A. Smith. The injured are confined to a Montreal Hospital.

Accidental discharge of a shotgun he was holding resulted in instant death yesterday for Corporal A. E. (Bud) Laing, 28, native of Halifax and senior N. C. O. in charge of the canteen, Royal Canadian Air Force at Camp Borden, near where the accident occurred. He was rabbit hunting at the time.

Youth Gun Victim

Thomas Barry, 23, of the Manotick station district, 20 miles south of Ottawa, died while being taken to hospital last night after he was shot accidently by Vincent Harney.

Harney, accompanied by Donald Potvin, 15, who had taken a shotgun from his home while his parents were absent, met Barry and Myrtle Harney, 16, sister of Vincent, on the road near Manotick station. They all lived in the district. Potvin had dropped the gun in the grass by the roadside and Harney picked it up while the four were talking. Not thinking it was loaded, he pulled the trigegr and the full charge hit Barry under the left arm.

He was taken to a nearby house and a doctor called but he died before reaching hospital. Following the shooting Potvin grabbed the gun and ran away. He was located at Kars, nine miles away, later. Police said the shooting was purely accidental. An inquest will be held Monday.

return at once to Ottawa after he lands at New York, and probably will forgo a visit with President Roosevelt at Hyde Park, N.Y. His itinerary is not definite.

It has been generally assumed here that parliament would be called before Christmas in order to ensure prorogation before the King and Queen arrive early next summer, but it is believed now that this early-session plan might be dropped.

The regular weekly cabinet council will be held to-morrow with Justice Minister Lapointe presiding as Acting Prime Minister. Some announcement concerning the parliamentary opening might be made then, but it is more likely the decision will be reached after Mr. Mackenzie King is back.

Six Seats to Fill

Six Senate seats are still vacant and before parliament meets the government might bring the Upper House up to its full membership of 96. Ministerial appointments are slated for the legations in Tokyo, Paris and Brussels. A committee is to be set up to arrange for their Majesties' Canadian tour.

Besides these matters, illness of two cabinet ministers has created another problem. Finance Minister Dunning is convalescing but it is not known definitely whether he will be able to assume his onerous duties in the finance department again. Postmaster General Elliott has been sick for nearly a year. There is a strong possibility there might be several new ministers appointed before the next session.

The British government has made inquiries concerning the settlement of refugees from Sudetenland and while the matter is not formally before the Canadian government it is understood to be under examination.

Apart from strictly political developments on Parliament Hill, the Bren gun inquiry has provided the major interest here. The probe was ordered by the government following publication in Maclean's Magazine of an article by Col. George Drew, Toronto lawyer, criticizing the contract for 7,000 Bren guns between the National Defence Department and John Inglis Company of Toronto and is now entering its seventh week.

It was believed the Prime Minister and Dr. O. D. Skelton, under secretary of state for external affairs who accompanied him on the southern holiday, would be called as witnesses but now it is understood the inquiry will not require their attendance.

where he announced that he had shot a girl. He waved goodbye to his sister and brother, Ray Bacon and rushed out of the house to his car. Ray Bacon phoned the Lindsay police of his brother's action and suggested that they go to the home of another sister, Mrs. Bessie Donaghon. Constable E. Reeves arrived at the front door of the Donaghon home at 9.30 just an hour and a half after the Irwin shooting and as he rang the doorbell, a shot was fired at the rear of the house He found Bacon's body in the back kitchen. He nad been shot through the mouth with the .22 rifle which lay beside him, and was dead.

A Lover's Quarrel

Myrtle Irwin had kept company with Bacon for two years until last July 12th when the two had a quarrel. Bacon, an adopted son of an Ops Township farmer named Johnson, apparently brooded over his broken romance and finally determined to end the affair in death. He almost succeeded when he fired through the window, because the bullet missed a vital spot by inches.

Myrtle Irwin was employed as a domestic at the home of a Mr. Willan in Blackstock. She had arrived home at four o'clock Sunday afternoon for supper with the family.

Provincial Constable Adair of Lindsay had started for the Irwin home after being telephoned and it is believed that his tracks crossed those of Bacon who was travelling in the opposite direction.

Boston, Oct. 31 (CP)

The cup had disappeared shortly after Captain Angus' Canadian salt banker Bluenose won it for keeps Wednesday by beating the United States challenger Gertrude L. Thebaud.

Like a foundling child, it was discovered on the doorstep of the home, tidily wrapped, with this ditty attached:

"Here's to Angus, good old sport,
Whose challenge sort of takes us short.
Send us a gale that blows at thirty,
And we'll bet our shirts on little Gerty!"

No one was more mystified than Miss Elizabeth Beyer, matron of the home. But she took it "to wait until proper authorities call for it."

STRIKING TESTS REVEAL HOW RECENTLY IMPROVED SOAP WASHES CLOTHES SHADES WHITER

THERE are many discoveries that are far less exciting, but few of greater importance in making life more enjoyable than the discovery of "scrubless" soap. One of the most outstanding of the "save work" soaps is the granulated soap, Rinso, which has helped so greatly to do away with the hard work of washday.

A new principle

For years Rinso has given millions of women whiter, brighter washes without scrubbing or boiling. It has done this by producing rich, lively suds that soak out the dirt—gently and safely luring out imbedded particles—and leaving to the housewife the comparatively easy job of scrubbing a few stubborn edges, rinsing and hanging out a dazzling white and much brighter wash.

The effectiveness of Rinso suds has been so marked that the makers of 26 famous washers have long recommended this soap above all others.

A further advancement

Recently the makers of Rinso announced that they had improved their soap. By actual test it was proven that the New Rinso gives, cup for cup, over 25% more suds than the old. These suds are longer-lasting and faster-acting, too. The New Rinso gives suds that last nearly one-third longer than ordinary suds. What a blessing that is in hard water areas!

Women are amazed to see how many shades whiter the New Rinso washes clothes in comparison with old-type soaps.

The New Rinso in comparison to old-fashioned soaps washes clothes brighter and at least 5 shades whiter with perfect safety.

The discovery of New Rinso may not rate a mention in the history books, but to millions of women it means better washday results, economy, freedom from hard work washdays.

"I'm why DADDY SAYS HE MUST PLAN FOR THE FUTURE"

Isn't she the very best of reasons for making provision for the future?

Her father has decided to take an endowment policy with The Imperial Life to assure adequate funds for her education and other needs.

Of course this little lady is happy and carefree. But she is not half so pleased as her father. To him, that Imperial Life endowment policy for his daughter will be a continual source of the deepest satisfaction. He knows that whether he lives or not, funds will be available for his daughter when she needs them most.

In the complex world of today the average man on a salary finds it almost impossible to save money in the ordinary way. The easiest and by far the safest way to save is through an Imperial Life contract. Four men out of five who try to save in other ways do not keep up their saving schedule. But four out of five who adopt The Imperial Life method actually do save money as planned.

Look into the future. Take a long view of life. Then talk it over with an Imperial Life representative.

"FINANCIAL SECURITY THROUGH LIFE INSURANCE", by Paul Speicher, an international authority, is an interesting book which should be read by everyone who plans to provide financial security for himself and family. Your local Imperial Life representative will make a copy availabel to you without cost. 407

Great Indifference Being Shown Towards Reforestation A. L. Elliott Tells Rotarians

Alex L. Elliott, K.C., M.P.P., addressing the Rotary Club at its regular weekly luncheon in the Empress Hotel today on the subject of "Reforestation," expressed keen regret at the great indifference which exists in the country today towards this great national problem, and at the conclusion of his talk he said the Rotarians could make no greater contribution to the nation than by developing an appreciation of this serious problem, so that when the time for action arrives they may be able to give real assistance and possibly initiate a program of reforestation themselves.

"We have always considered Canada to be a land of great natural resources but few of us realize that the pulp and paper industry today is the leading manufacturing industry in the Dominion, which shows that Canada's forests is her greatest national asset." Mr. Elliott read some startling statistics from a synopsis of articles from the Financial Post dealing with the industry. Among other things the articles showed the industry to be the greatest employer of labor in the Dominion employing 16.2 per cent of all gainfully employed as compared to mining's 9 per cent.

With a capital investment of $550,000,000 in the industry it ranks second only to central electric stations in this regard. It was first in gross value of production from 1925, when it replaced flour mills until 1935 when it was overtaken by the non-ferrous metal smelting and refining group. It is the most important in the Dominion in its influence on trade. The difference between the favorable and unfavorable balance at present depends to a large extent upon this industry. In that respect it is more than agriculture. Directly dependent upon the industry for employment are 34,000 workers who draw annually in salaries and wages $50,000,000.

Mr. Elliott switched from the pulp and paper industry to the question of timber values in the Peterborough county and went on to show the value and great need for reforestation in this section.

"In Cavendish township there are 25,000 acres of timber under lease to a lumber company which cut 2½ million feet of lumber in Peterborough Cunty alone. Firewood, posts, railroad tie and many other products are annually shipped in large quantities from this district.

There should always be a continuity of this timber. People seldom stop to recall that Southern Ontario was once clothed in virgin timber. Ninety per cent of waste land now regarded as valueless in Southern Ontario and particularly Eastern Ontario, is very suitable for reforestation.

If matured trees had been left one to an acre when the country was cleaned more than a century ago, there would have been a natural regeneration that would have retimbered the country. Instead a much inferior wood such as poplar and soft maple have grown up.

Selective Cutting

In certain areas today, big timber men are following what is known as selective cutting. This means leaving faulty, mature trees which will reseed the section.

Individual efforts at reforestation should be encouraged. The cost of the trees is negligible and results are very gratifying.

Despite the great Trent Waterway system, veteran farmers say this section of Ontario will be subject to soil erosion, such as exists in Middlesex County to-day, unless extensive reforestation is carried on. Settlers should realize that tree conservation is of vital importance to their future, and the future of their children. Every precaution should be taken to guard against fire.

Few people realize how dependent we are on the lumbering industry. In the north along the waterways the timber has been cut and burned. We should strive to maintain all land fronting waterways as tree producing areas.

The speaker was introduced by V. J. McElderry, K.C., County Crown Attorney, who described him as a "man who has merited the confidence of the electors in this riding." Alderman James Dutton, chairman of the club, expressed the appreciation of the gathering for the fine address.

Stores Open Sunday?

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Oct. 31.—(CP)—Sunday blue laws will be an issue in the state election here November 8 when voters will decide whether the city's retail stores may be open on Sundays. Many Enquiries Are Being Received For Farm School To Be Held In Keene

More than one hundred enquiries have already been received by F. C. Paterson, agricultural representative, from prospective students in the special three months' course in agriculture and home economics and management which begins at Keene in November. "One farmer told me he would have to hire a man for the three months if he was to let the son go to Keene, and as he thought the boy was entitled to it, and he knew a man who was available everything was apparently settled in that case," Mr. Paterson said. "I don't expect all those hundred will sign up, but I believe many others are still to be heard from and that we are likely to have a big class. Some of the students are already arranging for boarding accommodation, others for daily transportation, and really encouraging interest is already being displayed. We are going to make things as agreeable as we can for the class. Otonabee council is going to help and I believe the people of Keene will welcome the school."

Tour Hospital

Girl Acquitted On Theft Count

Without being required to put in her defense, Marjorie McGregor was acquitted in police court this morning on a charge of stealing $4 from Mrs. Doris Hamilton of Howden avenue, North Monaghan. She was defended by W. B. Gordon.

Mrs. Hamilton, the first witness testified that the McGregor girl had worked for her for a few days prior to the alleged theft and during that time had occasion to see where the Hamilton money was kept in a box in Mrs. Hamilton's room. Witness stated that on the Tuesday following there was $4 in bills and 35 cents in silver when she left her house to go to the hospital where a child was ill and next morning she discovered that the $4 was gone. The front and side doors of the house had been locked but the side door at the rear was unlocked.

Mrs. Daisy Bailey, Howden avenue, testified that about the time of the theft Marjorie McGregor had been at witness' house and said she was going to Mrs. Hamilton's. Witness afterward saw her crossing the street from her own house in the direction of Mrs. Hamilton's and later saw her returning from the direction of the Hamilton house. That same afternoon the McGregor girl had been at her house again and had said that she had been at Mrs. Hamilton's but there was nobody there.

Aileen McCoy of the shoe department of the Canadian Department store swore that on October 18, a week after the alleged theft, Marjorie McGregor had bought a $3 pair of shoes in the C.D.S. store and had paid the even amount but witness was unable to remember whether she had paid three one dollar bills or a two and a one.

That concluded the case for the crown and Mr. Gordon immediately moved for dismissal.

"I will hear Mr. McElderry first," said the Magistrate.

"I will leave it in your hands," replied the Crown Attorney.

"Did you think there is evidence there to convict," asked the Magistrate. "I don't and I dismiss the case without any hesitation."

Blow Costs Man $10 Or 10 Days

After George Hutchinson had pleaded guilty in police court this morning to assaulting Wilson Webb, Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C. spent a few minutes trying to learn from Hutchinson and the complainant something of what had occurred and then abandoned the attempt to get at the exact story.

Hutchinson told the court something about two boys who had been waiting for Webb to drive them to Norwood but as he was vague in his description Magistrate Langley turned to Webb for his version.

It was not much clearer than that of the defendant but he did say that Hutchinson had asked him to get out of his (complainant's) car and when he had done so Webb "socked him one."

"Is that about what happened?" asked the court of Hutchinson and Hutchinson intimated that it was.

"It's a strange story," said the Magistrate. "You will be fined $10 and costs or go to jail for ten days. That was a costly blow."

Pleasure Seeker Is Not For Nursing

SYDNEY, Australia, October 31—(C. P.)— The chairman of the board of the Royal Prince Alfred Hospital when giving evidence at an inquiry into the desirability of establishing a new hospital at Canberra, said all Sydney hospitals were experiencing great difficulty in obtaining the right type of recruit—girls who did not want to go out pleasure seeking every night.

Sydney hospitals had been forced to accept girls who not long ago would have been rejected as unsuitable, he said. Many nurses left the profession to marry, and his experience was that about 60 per cent of young doctors married nurses.

"Everlasting Punishment" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon for First Church of Christ, Scientist, Peterborough, on Sunday. The Golden Text was, "Rejoice Not Against Me, O Mine Enemy: When I fall, I shall arise; when I sit in darkness, the Lord shall be a light unto me." (Micah 7:8). Selections from the Bible included the following from John 8: 34, 44, "Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin. Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it." Correlative citations from the Christian Science textbook, included the following. "As both mortal man and sin have a beginning, they must consequently have an end, while the sinless, real man is eternal."

Many Federal Activities Are Under Way In Peterboro West

During the early part of this year three new swing bridges sufficiently adequate to take care of increased traffic were completed at Bensfort, Burleigh Falls and Buckhorn. During the summer the dock at Hiawatha was rebuilt, and just last week a very adequate dock at Pengelly's on Rice Lake was finished, and as well, the extension to a pedestrian walk between the main bridge and the newly constructed swing bridge at Buckhorn.

The beautiful new T-head dock at Little Lake is almost completed, which will provide accommodation for cruisers and other boats as well as facilities which will make it possible for Peterborough to stage regattas and aquatic activities second to none in Ontario.

Last week the rip rap protection job at Lakefield was commenced and it is fully expected that the extension of the work around Point St. Charles will be commenced the next few days, both of which will provide considerable work.

Last fall a new dam was built on Squaw River which enabled the Peterborough Lumber Company to open up new limits, lumbering facilities and the erection of a new sawmill where approximately 45 men have been employed.

Almost immediately the construction of a new dam at Bass Lake Rapids in Galway Township will be commenced, which will make possible substantial increases in lumbering activities in the Township of Galway and Harvey.

Woman Is Charged Theft Of Underwear

A married woman, mother of three children, pleaded guilty before Magistrate O. A. Langley K. C., in police court this morning to stealing a suit of underwear from the Canadian Department Store.

She told the magistrate that it was the first time she had ever done anything of the kind.

"This is one of those difficult cases to deal with" remarked Magistrate Langley, "A suspended sentence is scarcely fair to the stores because so much lying around is a temptation and it would not do to let the impression get around that it is possible to steal and escape punishment for the offense."

Chief Constable Samuel Newhall suggested that sentence should be reserved for a few days because there were some matters into which the police wanted to look.

The case was accordingly adjourned until Friday of this week.

Special Officers For Hallowe'en

Although there will be no attempt to interfere with harmless frolicking and Hallowe'en merry-making, Chief Constable Sam Newhall sounded a warning this morning to those who have any idea of turning the night of witches and spooks into a carnival of property damage.

"Anybody who wilfully damages the property of others will be locked up and kept in the station all night, ready to face court Tuesday morning," the Chief Constable declared.

"In order to see that decent order is maintained and there is no lawlessness," he added, "all the force will be on duty and in addition there will be a number of special officers."

Cheaper To Live In City Court Is Told

D. V. Ketcheson and his new Weller street house hopped out of one court into another last week, although reversing the frying pan into the fire course. Saturday afternoon they were given a going over by the Court of Revision of North Monaghan, composed of Reeve Milby and the members of his council to the extent that the Ketcheson assessment was increased from $2500 to $4,150.

The Court agreed with Mr. Ketcheson on one point, his criticism of inequalities in North Monaghan's official valuations of its properties for taxation. The council appointed Ernest Leeson, former reeve of Havelock, assessor this year, and the members feel that some progress has been made in the direction of equality, with still a long way to go until the peaks and valleys in the assessment landscape are brought more closely to a common level.

Says City Cheaper

Mr. Ketcheson wrote the council that "it would be cheaper to have property in the city, and that will happen if the assessment is not revised." His taxes last year were $109.25, Reeve Milby remarked, and there would be an $8 charge for sewer connection, a total of $117.25 on a house which Alex Archibald estimated to have cost between $13,000 and $15,000. The contract price had been $9,500, according to the evidence in the Supreme Court case here last week, he said, and that meant the Ketcheson place, like a lot of others in the township, were assessed at about one-third of their value or even less than that.

John Barnes commented with irony that the fine homes on the western hill would soon be down to assessment parity with those on New Chamberlain street.

"Silk Stocking Section"

Councillor Archibald was handing out a wise crack about "the silk stocking district in one place..." when one of the other members interrupted him.

"The whole thing will have to be through the washing machine before long," Reeve Milby said.

"And after that the ringer," said Mr. Leeson.

The council and Bruce Johnston, clerk, during that stage of their long afternoon session were using such epithets as absurd, preposterous and so on in regard to the disparities of assessment in Monaghan.

Mr. Leeson endorsed the Court's opinion, and said "I defy any one to bring equality in North Monaghan values in the short time that was allotted to me. It is a big job, but I think you have made a start, and there has been some move toward equality this year."

Endorses Valuators

Bruce Johnston declared that the Judge Smoke, Judge O'Connor and Fred Morrow board of valuators for the county were entirely right in their references to North Monaghan.

"You have to admit that if you want to be honest, and as Judge O'Connor said at that time the inequalities of assessment in the township bear more heavily on the poorer ratepayers." Reeve Milby added.

"Alex Archibald's property is assessed at about 50 per cent of its value, and this afternoon you are setting down assessments as low as 25 per cent," Mr. Johnston said.

"My assessment is more than 50 per cent," Reeve Milby said.

"I think you are starting something that will bring about a re-adjustment," Mr. Johnston said, and Mr. Barnes supplemented, "and it may bring a reduction in the rate."

Deputy-reeve M. H. Johnston wanted to boost the Ketcheson assessment to $4,450, that is $4,000 on the house and $450 on the land. The increase to $4,150 was proposed by Mr. Barnes and seconded by Councillor Grady. Mr. Grady expressed the opinion that in view of the inequalities which were known to exist, the court should not be too stringent in pushing up the Ketcheson assessment. The motion was adopted.

$12,275 New Assessment

The net result of the Court's Saturday sitting until shortly after six o'clock was the addition of $12,275 to the township's assessment roll of 1939, Deputy-reeve Johnston said. Some odds and ends have still to be disposed of Tuesday evening.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

OH, WELL, we had a lot of fun last week, anyway! The Balmies did a 30-3 job on our Orfuns in Toronto Saturday, so now we will do a little catching as the grid experts start throwing. And the Orfuns are still orphans, with no place to rest but in the cellar. We didn't expect 'em to win but thought it would be much closer, and so did the rest of the writers. Here are the Toronto scribe's predictions on 'em before the game—with not a word about "Beaches to swamp Orfuns" either: "Balmy Beach to take Peterborough"...."Another win for the Petes is not on tap tomorrow, we trust"...."Balmy Beach to win by a nose over Peterborough"...."We think they will take the battling Liftlockers"...."Beaches should beat Orfuns but the latter are liable to give them a very interesting afternoon"...."The Balmies are in for a very busy afternoon"...."Beaches to er-ah beat Peterborough!" So the experts were too cautious this time.

THE GAME was okay till halftime was up. A nice 7-3 game with the locals holding their own. But they faded under a hot sun in the second half, lack of reserve strength, injuries and forward passes combining to pile up the total for Alex Ponton's pack of huskies. The Beaches deserved the win by a couple of touchdowns, all right, but it would have been closer but for Orfuns' injuries. Two stars, Herb Hendrie and Mike Loucks, were hors de combat in the first half, thereby weakening the line a lot and the backfield by nearly 50 per cent. Balled up the secondary and tertiary defences, too. Loucks had his knee badly injured and may be out the rest of the season. Cartilages torn, we understand, but a definite diagnosis was not obtained at this writing. Hendrie had a couple of ribs cracked when hit with a knee in the side, but he may be okay by Saturday. Don Hendren was kicked on the kidney and it was a bad injury, too. Kearns had a bad ankle, Deadey a scar on his hip, Crowe a swelled knee, Marsh and Magee were dazed for a time, and others bore marks of the bruising battle.

He Forgot to Duck

YEP, it was a smashing scrap all the way, with the young and light Orfuns as full of fight at the finish as their big rivals. Art Casson, six-foot-three lineman was led off in the last quarter dazed and with a badly bent beak, and we wonder how in the world he got it. It was a hard game with the Beaches really playing for keeps—but then rugby is not a gentle sport. Don Crowe bore the brunt of the locals' attack after Loucks—who had booted a 40-yard placement and, along with Crowe, was running the Balmies ragged with a nifty cutback play—was carried off the field. Don battled his heart out in a grand showing, while his buddies on the half-line and up front toiled like Trojans in a bitter and losing cause. They were beaten but not disgraced.

A B BOX again proved the big difference between these clubs. He was brilliant with his lovely long forward passes to pave the way for a pair of touchdowns. He bootedhigh, wide and handsome and blocked and tackled in great style. Whilst taking care not to get roughed up by rushing rivals. A great player, Box. A couple of intercepted Petes' passes presented the home squad with two more touchdowns near the end. Orfuns were in the clear once for a try when Shields recovered a fumble at midfield, galloped 15 and then tossed it to Kearns; but Chuck, travelling like a tornado, couldn't hang onto the leather lemon. Again Gord McIntyre, on a lateral, stepped out of touch just a yard out from Beaches' goal-line thinking he was over. Tough breaks, but the better club won. Orfuns wind it up here next Saturday against Montreal Nationals.

"Orfuns Can't Complain"

COACH ALEX PONTON, dapper and talkative leader of the Toronto team, dropped around to the Royal York after the fracas ended. He told us: "Beaches were in championship form today and no team could have stopped them. The loss of Loucks took a lot of spirit out of Peterborough, and it was a tough break—but Box hit him legally. After all, the Orfuns can't complain, they are the only outfit to beat Sarnia so far this year; and there would be no justice at all if they made the playoffs in their first season up in senior ranks—not with other teams building for several years before reaching the top." Coach Bill Irwin said he had expected a closer score but the breaks weren't with the Orfuns and "those Beaches were really unbeatable today." Bill felt that, unless those injuries kept some of the gang out of next Saturday's struggle, his team would give Nats a real scrap.

* * * * * *

WHILE SARNIA were outplayed considerably in Montreal, they got a 6-all tie with the Nationals, Bummer Stirling kicking a field goal and three singles as Mullins booted two placements before 8,000 fans. It was a rough tussle, too, with a lot of bruises and black orbs. Burr is out two weeks with a sprained ankle and Butler had three teeth loosened when Burns is said to have punched him after the whistle. Though why it is worse after the whistle than before we dunno. Sarnia officials may protest the assault to the O.R.F.U., it is reported. Montreal is on top now with six points as Imps and Beaches are tied with four apiece, and Orfuns have two. Toronto plays in Sarnia next week in an important contest.

Upsets and Razzle-dazzle

FOLKS who saw the Lindsay team upset the dope here to cop a 9-6 nod over P.C.I. seniors Saturday say the Scugog squad, led by Ferguson and Sharpe, deserved the win. They turned in a great showing to hold possession for practically three quarters of the play. And ya can't pull any trick stuff with the ball when ya can't get a grip on it. The game didn't mean anything but was a moral victory for Lindsay and they ought to have a sweet squad for next year, if their two ace backfielders aren't snatched by someone. P.C.I. nearly pulled the game out of the fire in the last five minutes when Nels Foster—playing his first year—fired eight lovely forwards, seven of 'em clicking, in a dazzling pitching performance that had fans and rivals as goofy as jitterbugs! His last forward, for the winning touchdown, was muffed. P.C.I. juniors ended in a blaze of glory by surprising Lindsay with a 22-3 victory, the boys earning the nod easily by great football. But this game didn't mean anything, either. Oshawa juniors and P.C.I. seniors have their sections clinched.

A COUPLE MORE NIGHTS of hard training and then the local pugilists taper off for their mitt bouts Friday p.m. in the Brock. It is a seven-bout show, featuring three Toronto-Peterborough slugfests in the main events. Each bout will be five two-minute rounds, except the first two which will be three two-minute affairs—unless of course some of the chaps are tucked among the daisies before regulation time is up. Riverview A.C. is promoting the card and fight fans will recall the furious action provided on previous pug cards by this club. Provided the fans support this show, more good events for the fistic followers will be lined up locally during the late fall and winter months. So keep this Friday p.m. open.

Dazzling Rally Is Staged Last 5 Minutes

By FRED CRAIG

Badly outplayed through the line and around the ends by a hard-hitting Lindsay team for fifty-five minutes of Saturday's Senior Cossa game at Exhibition Park, Coach H. L. Bamforth's P.C.I. squad took to the air in the last five minutes and turned on a display of razzle-dazzle forward passing that had the crowd and their opposition dazed. Lindsay were leading 9 to 1 when the fireworks began and were still in front 9 to 6 when the final whistle sounded, but P.C.I. were cheated out of a Frank Merriwell finish when Al Moldaver dropped a touch down pass on the last play of the game.

There was nothing at stake in the fixture but glory as the Peterborough team had already taken sectional honors by winning three games in a row.

The exciting last five minutes not only gave the P.C.I. rooters their first real chance of the day to get enthused but it also revealed the fact that Coach Bamforth has uncovered in Nels Foster the most promising forward passer in P.C.I. history. A first year man in football, Foster threw strikes on every toss. In the final five-minute display he was successful in throwing seven completed forward passes in succession and the eighth throw on which the ball game rode was as accurate as any of the others but Moldaver had the misfortune to let it slip out of his fingers, with five points and victory slipping with it.

Sparked by a brilliant pair of fast-running, shifty and powerful half backs in Ferguson and Sharpe the Lindsay team had a big edge in the day's territorial play and were in possession of the ball nearly all afternoon. With Ferguson and Sharpe doing most of the ball-toting, they ripped P. C. I.'s line to shreds or sent fast-moving extends around the ends for good gains. Their most potent weapon was a delayed buck that often reached the tertiary before it was stopped and it was so successful that for many minutes at a time the visiting team were doing all the attacking.

Two Star Halves

That shifty pair of backs, playing behind a strong forward wall proved a mighty tough combination and if there were any Orfun scouts in the stand, they have undoubtedly marked Sharpe and Ferguson down as most promising senior material.

Ford Loucks, in his Lindsay Collegiate days did not lack a bit better than Ferguson and Sharpe did here Saturday. They were the stars of the strongest Lindsay team seen here in a number of seasons.

Foster's spectacular forward passing naturally made him the standout performer for P.C.I., but Harle, Parnell and Scriver turned in a good card and Rose, a rookie lineman, showed encouraging possibilities as a plunger. P.C.I. defence faltered noticeably and the game did not give much opportunity to judge of the team's offensive strength until they turned on the heat in that final bid for victory. You cannot do much hipper-dipper stuff unless you have the ball and most of the time Saturday P.C.I. found themselves playing a defensive role.

P.C.I. scored the only point in the first period, thanks mainly to a fine run for 30 yards by Scriver who recovered a loose ball on a fumble at mid-field and dashed to Lindsay's twenty-yard line. Two plunges failed and Scriver booted to the dead line for a point. Half way through the sessin Lindsays attack began to roll and P.C.I. were driven back into their own territory for the balance of the period.

Pressure Still On

Early in the second chapter the Lindsay pressure was still on and with Sharpe and Ferguson crashing through or around the end for big gains they carried the ball into pay-dirt territory. Here the P.C.I. resistance tightened and Lindsay were forced to kick. Deyell tried a placement that went wide of the posts but rolled to the dead line for a point, sewing up the game. Back they came with another march and this time, when it was halted, Deyell booted a beauty from placement from the 30-yard line, squarely between the uprights and Lindsay were in front 4 to 1. P.C.I. struck back and two fine runs by Harle put them in striking distance only to have Lindsay intercept a Foster forward pass.

Early in the third period P.C.I. had a good opportunity, after a fine plunge for yards by Harle and a 25-foot toss from Foster to Moldaver had carried the play into Lindsay territory. However Diplock's attempt to drop a goal from the field failed and Lindsay went on the attack again.

There was no score in the period, although Lindsay made consistent gains. Twice they marched down the field and both times attempts at placements failed when Deyell kicked into his own line.

A Lindsay Touchdown.

They were still hammering away when the quarter ended and finally in the final period their persistent attack was rewarded when after two plunges had been stopped at P.C.I.'s 15-yard line, Sharpe circled Peterborough's left end for a touch down without a finger being laid on him. Deyell failed to convert.

With five minutes to go the P.C.I. gang found themselves finally in possession of the ball and Foster, who had been out of the game since early in the third period with an ankle injury, began his spectacular passing. Four were completed in a row with Moldaver and Scriver on the receiving end, the passes representing a net gain of nearly 50 yards. A Harle-Diplock end run carried the ball to Lindsay's three-yard line and Bob Parnell plunged over for a touchdown, making the score 9 to 6.

Lindsay's kick off was deep in P.C.I. territory but Foster's great passing started another march. The first, in a sleeper play, was a 50 yard toss across field to Moldaver for a big gain. Then he tossed another from an extension play to Scriver and a third to Moldaver, the three totalling a sixty yard gain. Ernie Ward broke away for a twenty-yard run that almost got over for a touch down and on the final play of the game Foster arched another beautiful pass to Moldaver who was in the clear at the Lindsay goal line when the ball oozed out of his hands. It was a great finish to a game that from a P.C.I. standpoint hadn't been very hot.

The lineups:

Lindsay C.I.: Flying wing, Elliott; halves, Sharpe, Ferguson, Deyell; quarter, Warrian; capt. snap, Maxim; insides, Stewart, Balfour; middles, Hill, Walton; outsides, Nesbitt, Maxwell; subs, Cresswell, Kingsborough, Campbell, Williams, Begley, Joyce, Betts.

Peterborough C. I.: Flying wing, Foster; halves, Diplock, Harle, Scriver; quarter, Ward; snap, Johnston; insides, Rose, Gillespie; middles, Parnell, Ainslie; outsides, Moldaver, R. Ferguson; subs, Freeman, Elliott, Moorhead, Campbell, Leether, cap., Turner, McNeil, W. Ferguson, Gibson.

Crowe Gets Kick Away For Orfuns

P.C.I. Juniors Beat Lindsay

Sparked by the fine field generalship and good running, kicking and passing of Captain Don. McPherson, the brilliant running of "Poo" Hamilton, the pass-receiving of Eric Taylor, the placement kicking of Ackford and the downfield tackling of Bullock, P.C.I.'s junior rugby squad ran rough-shod over a heavier Lindsay team here on Saturday morning to take their first group win. Although the Garnet and Grey had already been eliminated and although they went into the game as definite underdogs, they completely dominated play in every department to run up a decisive 22 to 3 score.

In the first quarter, with the game but four minutes old, P.C.I. started a march from their own thirty that ended only when Hamilton skirted the end for a touchdown. Ackford missed the conversion, but near the end of the quarter place-kicked from the 25-yard line after McPherson had recovered a blocked kick.

Lindsay made the only score of the second period when Kirley's placement from the 20 hit the post and bounced through. McPherson passed to Taylor on L.C.I.'s 20, but they could get no further. The half-time score was P.C.I. 8, L.C.I. 3.

P.C.I. kicked off to start the second half and Lindsay could do nothing. McPherson then combined with Taylor on a thirty-yard pass for a touchdown which Ackford converted from placement. McPherson made a beautiful 40-yard run and Hamilton, Graham and Gillespie combined for two first downs to Lindsay's 20, but they were stopped there, as the quarter ended.

Midway in the last stanza, Lindsay fumbled a kick and Bullock recovered on the L.C.I. 20-yard stripe, Ackford kicked a field goal from placement on second down. Lindsay took to the air and completed three, but Ellis dropped a third down pass while in the clear. McPherson passed to Taylor, who made a fine shoe-string catch behind the goal-line for a try. Ackford's convert was blocked as the game ended.

While the whole P.C.I. team played well from whistle to whistle, perhaps Ackford, Taylor, McPherson and Hamilton were the best, with Gillespie, Graham and Bullock also prominent. For Lindsay, Kirley, Ellis and MacQuarrie starred.

The line-ups:

Peterborough C. I. — Flying wing, Chimenti; halves, Gillespie, Horton, Ackford; quarter, McPherson; middles, Douglas, Graham; insides, Hamilton, Mathews; outsides, Taylor, Bullock; subs., Gracie, Perry, Cauley, Ferguson, Dundas, Saunders, Richardson, Wildbourne.

With The Boy Scouts

St. Paul's pack last Friday owing to the absence of Akela Miss Bull. Twenty-two boys were present. District Commisisoner J. T. Hornsby paid his official visit.

The hall is taken up next Friday and the pack will not be able to meet as usual, so all St. Paul's cubs are asked to meet outside the church at 2 p.m. sharp on Saturday to join in a hike. Each boy must bring enough food for his supper.

A perfect attendance was recorded at the All Saints pack meeting, the main item of interest being preparing for the banquet which is to be held on Friday next, when the winners of the competition will be announced. The following boys passed tests: Clint Mowry, leap frog and skipping; Jack Chambers and Jack White, Ernie Darling and Claire McDougal, skipping; Norman Harris, book balancing; Stanley Alexander, compass; Allen Tracey, leap frog; Jim Smith, National Anthem.

The ghosts of Hallowe'en were let loose to roam through the den when St. John's cubs held a gala Halloween party many fantastic and humorous costumes were worn in their attempt to disguise themselves beyond recognition.

Prizes for the most original costumes went to Cubs Lawrence Shannon and Arthur Dobson.

Games played in true Hallowe'en fashion included Peanut Relay, Bridges, Reversed Musical Chairs, and Shoe Relay. To complete a splendid night of fun and frolic, refreshments were served by the old wolves assisted by the sixers; the final touch being each cub getting a bag of candy to carry home.

The St. John's troop members were waiting for the reports of last Friday's detective work and although the reports were not as numerous as should be, they were both amusing and descriptive. The top for points in the competition was that super-sleuth of the Otters, Bud Groombridge, perhaps because he is so small he could slip into all sorts of holes to dig up the information. The Otter partol came through with the most points and honored the occasion by buying their patrol flag.

During the evening a ceremony was held. Allan Hooper and George Green were officially entered into the great brotherhood of scouts.

Another interesting event was one which Allan Hooper and Clayton Selkirk will be very proud of as they go through scouting. Akela Frank Pammett presented these two boys with their leaping wolf badges, to wear on their scout uniform to show they won their two stars during cub life.

All Saints' scout troop are getting ready for the Boy and Parents' banquet, being held next Friday night at 6.30 p.m. sharp in the parish hall.

Mrs. Kearns attended the meeting and spoke briefly to the boys about the coming banquet. There was a good attendance.

There will be a joint meeting of the Pow-Wow and the Senior patrol at Ted Tomkins' home, 57 Aylmer street, at 7.30 p.m. on Tuesday night for first aid instruction.

Next Friday every boy is expected to bring a sample of his pet hobby to display at the banquet. So let us make it a real showing.

—The Skipper.

Cobourg Defeats Kingston 20-7

COBOURG, Ont., Oct. 31—(CP).—Cobourg's Galloping Ghosts galloped along in front of the pack in the O.R.P.U. intermediate eastern division today, leading Kingston's Garrison squad by two points.

Ghosts grabbed up two loose balls here Saturday, converted them into touchdowns and went on to a 20-7 victory over the Limestone entry.

The Soldiers were never in front at any time, trailing 7-0 at the end of the first quarter and 8-1 at half time. Another touchdown helped boost the score to 15-1 at three-quarter time.

Meickle scored the first touchdown, carrying the ball over from two yards out after Newton picked up a loose ball at midfield and carted it to Kingston's 10.

Jacobs accounted for the other when he fell on the ball behind the Garrison line after Brant had fumbled.

J. Lucas booted a placement in the fourth quarter for three more Cobourg points. A safety touch and five singles boosted the winners' total to 20.

Kingston's lone touchdown was registered in the fourth quarter. Hayes recovered a Cobourg fumble at midfield. Line plays moved sticks and Grey then advanced the ball to Cobourg's 15. On the third play, Armishaw barged through for five points. The touchdown was converted.

Crash Victim Dies

KITCHENER, Ont., Oct. 31 (C. P.). — Second victim of a car crash near New Hamburg last night, Jerime Mertz of New Hamburg, died to-day at St. Mary's Hospital. The condition of a third passenger, Stanley Helmuth, also of New Hamburg, was described as "very poor."

Lawrence Mertz was burned to death in the wreckage of the machine. The car missed a highway curve in a thick fog and smashed into a post.

Amerks Drop 5th Straight Game To Rangers In Western Tour, Star Defencemen, 2 Forwards Off

(By The Canadian Press.)

Professional hockey's warm-up campaign is drawing to a close with the rapid approach of the schedule opening Thursday, the earliest start in history. More than ever, the clubs have stressed exhibition games in the October preparations and New York's Rangers and Americans will have met six times when they finish their western tour tonight at Winnipeg.

The grind hasn't been exactly kind to the Americans. They have lost all five games thus far to their intra-city rivals and when they accepted the fifth straight Saturday night at Winnipeg, 5-3, they had to play without defencemen Joe Jerwa and Al Murray and forwards Lorne Carr and Red Beattie. Jerwa and Carr were out with injuries and Murray and Beattie were suffering from colds.

Earl Robertson did a tidy job in the losers' nets, despite eight stitches in the neck which prevented him from dropping to the ice to save. Again the Ranger balance was to the fore as the five goals were spread all through the lineup.

Americans head south after tonight's contest to help the world champion Black Hawks open the schedule Thursday at Chicago. Rangers, last club to start, will play an exhibition the same night at St. Paul with that city's American Association team. Then they have to bide their time until Nov. 13, when they meet the Red Wings at Detroit.

The Fighting Canadiens

Montreal Canadiens, generally expected to be near the top of the league from the start, are going to have to learn all over again the managers' axiom: "You can't win a game in the penalty box." In a 2-1 victory over New Haven the other night, the Habitants got into a punching bee. And when they tangled with Springfield Indians, another international-American outfit, last night at Shawinigan Falls, Que., there were three fist fights. Canadiens won the game 7-1.

Toronto Maple Leafs and their Syracuse farm club, breaking up into teams of Blues and Whites again Saturday at Galt, Ont., gave the fans a few minutes more than the regulation 60 after learning that they wouldn't have to travel to Syracuse for an exhibition last night.

As Whites defeated blues 5-3, Red Horner and Bingo Kampman mixed that earned them both penalties. But a couple of times in shoving matches the Leaf defencemen were trying to show their aggressiveness, rather than creating an opening for talk about ill-feeling. Pep Kelly of White and Harvey Jackson of Blues got a goal and an assist each.

The same teams will put on an exhibition for Leafs' fans at Toronto tonight and end their preparations for the opening with another at Midland, Ont., tomorrow. Toronto opens at home against Boston Bruins Thursday.

Bruins defeated Boston's amateur Olympics 7-2 and the showing of Pat McCreavy, Roy Conacher and Harry Frost, all just up from amateur ranks, indicated they will start the season in the big time.

Detroit Red Wings took a two-one lead in games over their Int.-Am. farm club, Pittsburgh, with a 4-3 victory at Detroit last night. The teams finish the four-game series tomorrow night at Pittsburgh.

BALMY BEACH BLASTS THROUGH FOR 30-3 WIN OVER ORFUNS

Locals Weaken Near Finish Of Bruising Grid Tilt And Beaches Pile Up Count

By CEC. PERDUE

An aerial bombing by Box and a smashing attack by the battering Balmies ground artillery wrought havoc on Peterborough Orfuns in the Maple Leaf Stadium on Saturday as the senior O.R.F.U. fray wound up in a 30 to 3 win for the Beaches. Long forward passes figured prominently in the heavy score rolled up by the Ponton pack in the last half, completed passes by Ab Box and intercepted Peterborough forward neaves.

Orfuns held the classy Beaches well in the first half, Loucks booting a 40-yard placement for the only score in the second quarter after the Balmies got a try in the first. But injuries, lack of reserve strength in the tough struggle—with a hot sun blazing down—and the Toronto aerial attack all took their toll on the lighter Petes in the final two quarters. The winners tallied 12 points in the third and 11 in the fourth, two touchdowns coming on intercepted forward passes by the Petes. The Beaches earned the win with a smashing ground attack and fine flinging and booting by Ab Box. The locals muffed several good chances for a major count.

Don Crowe Stars

With his classy running mate, Loucks, out of the game early, Don Crowe had to carry the brunt of the Irwin gang's attack and he played a bangup game. His kicking was fair but he battled his heart out—and was bumped plenty — on plunging, bucking, booting and running all afternoon in a losing cause. The local line was weakened by Hendrie's absence but the boys never quit fighting throughout and were still battling at the end. The whole team worked hard, though outclassed in this contest, and they had no alibis at the finish.

Ab Box again led the Beachers to the victory with a grand all-around performance. He was ably assisted by Humphries, Sward, Manorek, Moores and McCulloch. Box was getting distance and height on his hoofs, and his long forwards nestled regularly in the arms of awaiting mates to pave the way for touchdowns. He also blocked and tackled well—his blocking tearing a cartilage on Loucks' knee to put that player hors de combat.

First Quarter.

After kickoff, Orfuns failed on a long forward and then Crowe kicked to Balmy's 35. Box hurled a 20-yard forward to Haigh and he was downed on Orfuns 30. A forward pass missed fire and Box booted to the deadline for a point. Orfuns were penalized for an offside and Crowe's kick was taken by Manorek of Orfuns 35. Manorek bucked for six. Box plunged to move the sticks. Reynolds took a 15-yard forward pass from Box for a try which Box converted. Beaches took the kickoff on the 25. Crowe ran the kick back 15 to Beaches 50. Magee plunged for six. Crowe bucked for two and then his kick was fumbled by Sward and Pulkinghon got possession on Toronto's 30. Orfuns pulled a forward pass but it was called back as Deadey and Casson were put off for roughing. A forward was not completed and Crowe kicked to the homesters' 10-yard strip. Crowe took Box's kick on his 45. Crowe threw a short forward to Marsh for 7 yards. They kicked then to Beaches 20. Manorek plunged for five. Loucks took a long kick on his own 20. Hendren dropped Moore's on his 40 on Crowe's good boot. Kearns blocked a kick and McNulty got it, but the ball was given to Toronto on an offside. Box hurled a 25-yard forward to Haigh and he was grassed on Orfuns' 35 as the quarter ended.

Second Quarter

A long forward was knocked down and a kick by Box went out at Orfuns' 20. A cutback by Loucks from Crowe made yards. Magee bucked for three. On Crowe's kick, Loucks downed Sward on Toronto's 25. Beaches were penalized for an offside. Crowe got the kick on his 50. A forward failed. Beaches were penalized for interference. Loucks threw a short forward to Marsh for seven. On a snap return kick, Orfuns held possession on their 45. A local forward missed and McCulloch took Crowe's kick but fumbled and Deadey got it on Beaches' 40. Crowe skirted end for five. Magee plunged four. Crowe bucked to move the sticks. Magee went through centre for a couple. Loucks kicked a placement from his 40. Manorek bucked four and the Petes were penalized for an offside. Then Beaches drew a penalty for roughing. Loucks took Box's kick on his 25. Crowe went through the line for 15 yards. On a cutback, Crowe to Loucks, the latter got nine to midfield. Loucks was hurt on the play and carried off. Magee bucked two to move the sticks again. Crowe fumbled on an end run but E. Spencely recovered. Crowe's kick went to Reynolds on Beaches' 20. A buck was blocked. Crowe took a long kick and ran it back six to his 45. Crowe threw a 15-yard forward to Deadey. Irwin tossed a short forward to Marsh for seven yards. Crowe's kick went to Balmy on their 20 as half time arrived.

Third Quarter.

Crowe ran the kick off back 15 to his 20. Manorek was down on his 45 on Crowe's hoof. Manorek plunged eight. Box's boot went to Orfuns' 15. Deadey tackled Moores on the kick at midfield. Manorek tunnelled through the line for four. Moores on an end run was tackled high and Orfuns penalized to their 40. Manorek bucked for six. On an end run, Moores got three. McIntyre fumbled Bo's kick but it was recovered. Crowe's kick was taken on Orfuns 45. Box threw a long forward to Manorek who was stopped on Orfuns' 5 and Moores raced around end for a try. The convert failed. After the kickoff, Manorek plunged for 20 yards to his 40. Box hurled a 30-yard forward to Humphries who was tackled by Deadey on Orfuns' 30. Manorek took Box's forward toss and was down 5 yards out. Reid bucked for a try. Box kicked the convert. They started to march again with Sward bucking for 25 to Orfuns' 50. Moores skirted end for 15. Manorek got six through the line. Box kicked and Manorek rouged McIntyre as the quarter finished.

Fourth Quarter.

Sward intercepted Crowe's forward and raced 25 yards for a major count. It was not converted. Lush ran the kick back 20 but fumbled and Marsh grabbed it on Beaches' 25-yard strip. Crowe's forward was taken by Kearns on the 15. Crowe got five on a buck. A forward, Crowe to Giardino, was awarded on interference five yards out. A buck missed. McIntyre took a lateral from Crowe but ran out of touch a yard out and they lost it next play. It was kicked to midfield. McCulloch intercepted a forward pass and Seymour plunged for six. Sward got four on a buck to move the sticks. A forward failed and Shields recovered a fumble on Sward but on a pass to Kearns the ball was again fumbled to give Beaches possession on their 40. Casson came off hurt. Crowe ran back Sward's kick 12 yards to his 35. Seymour intercepted Irwin's forward and ran 35 for a try with Gray kicking the convert. Kearns pulled down Lush on the kickoff on Toronto's 20. Crowe received Sward's boot on Orfuns' 30-yard chalk. Crowe skirted end for 40 yards. Sward ran Crowe's kick seven yards to his 10. Murphy dropped Manorek in his tracks on a bad snap and Crowe took the kick at midfield. McIntyre bucked four. A forward was incomplete at the finish.

Old Faces In New Sweaters In Coming Campaign

JOHNNY SORRELL JOFFRE DESILETS RED BEATTIE

Every hockey season brings its new faces, as the clubs bring up new stars and trade older ones. Three in the latter group who will be wearing different sweaters than the fans are used to seeing them in are presented ABOVE. Joffre Desilets was secured by Chicago Black Hawks as part of their strengthening campaign to hang on to the Stanley Cup they won so surprisingly last spring. The Hawks got the French-Canadian right-winger from Canadiens in exchange for Louis Trudel. Johnny Sorrell and Red Beattie will line up with Red Dutton's "Keep Punching" New York Amerks. They pushed their last year's pucks for Detroit Red Wings, and go to the Amerks as a straight purchase.

Remember When—

It almost cost John Henry Lewis money to lift the world light heavyweight boxing crown from Bob Olin at St Louis three years ago to-night. Gate receipts were $16,584, and Olin guaranteed $15,000, received only $10,000. Lewis was guaranteed 12½ per cent., and his share amounted to practically nothing.

Pitt Panthers Defeat Fordham 24-13

By Bill Boni
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—(AP). — Pittsburgh's "wonder" football team, with its "dream" backfield and practically anonymous line, emerged from Saturday's form-following program with fresh and indisputable claim to its ranking as the No. 1 United States' College gridiron power.

The Panthers proved their ability to come from behind under pressure by roaring to three touchdowns in nine minutes to beat back Fordham, 24-13, in a scoring feast that ended these rivals' three-year touchdown famine.

But if there's little doubt of Pittsburgh's might and right to first place, you can get an argument anywhere in the country on which team deserves the runner-up spot.

In the Western Conference they offer Northwestern, responsible for the day's biggest casualty among the all-winning teams with its 6-3 conquest of Minnesota, beaten in the Conference for the first time since the Wildcats' 6-0 victory two years ago. Non-Conference midwest enthusiasts will offer Notre Dame, which over-powered Army, 19-7, with the wealth of its reserves and the speed of its ball-carriers to stay in the unbeaten-untied ranks.

In the south-west they'll tout all-conquering Texas Christian, which rolled for 509 yards, 221 of them on Davey O'Brien's passes, to wallop Baylor, 39-7, and look more and more like the best team that Conference ever has produced.

Tennessee Unbeaten

In the south, depending on Conference allegiance, they shrill for Tennessee, which remained unbeaten and hung up its fourth straight Southeastern league victory in downing Louisiana State, 14-6, or for Duke, which kept its goal-line clear for the season with a 14-0 defeat of North Carolina, the Blue Devils' fourth win in the Southern Conference.

Eastern Ivy league worshippers are high on Dartmouth, which rode high, wide and handsome behind captain Bob Macleod to a 24-6 rout of Yale and its first one-year clean sweep of the big three.

The decisiveness with which Pitt, Dartmouth and Norte Dame, scoring 48 points among them in the last half, gained their victories was duplicated on other eastern gridirons. Harvard, finally mastering Coach Dick Harlow's style, sent Torbie Macdonald whirling away to three of its four touchdowns and 192 yards as Princeton bowed to the defending big three champion, 26-7. Holy Cross, paced by Bill Osmanski, plowed Colgate under 21-0. Ohio state scored four times in the second quarter to blank New York U., 32-0; Cornell spanked Columbia, 23-7, on power plays.

Meanwhile Navy and Penn. with the latter making two fine goal-line stands, battled to a scoreless tie and Rutgers, intercepting a pass and recovering a fumble, beat its middle three rival, Lehigh, 13-0.

Biscuit, Admiral Fit For Battle

BALTIMORE, Oct. 31.—(AP). — The weatherman was the fair-haired boy to-day as the match race of the mighty, the showdown tomorrow between Seabiscuit and War Admiral, neared the zero hour of starting time on Pimlico's manicured mile and three-sixteenths of cushioned turf.

War Admiral, now a four-year-old, will take the track to-morrow for his 24th race in three years of competition. He can afford to be calm. From his 23 starts he has garnered 19 victories, and only once has he finished out of the money. The little brown son of Man O'War has earned $257,050 for Owner Sam Riddle.

The Biscuit, a year older than War Admiral, run 83 races in a busy four years, and on the credit side of his ledger are: 31 victories, 12 seconds, 13 thirds. He has put $331,405 in the pockets of Owner Charles Howard. Victory to-morrow would add $15,000 to the pot.

Despite their victories in the best-known stake races, the paths of these two have never crossed at the track. Twice have they met—almost; at Laurel, at Belmont Park, at Suffolk Downs. But each time one or the other was scratched before the event.

Nats Again Tie Imps In 6-6 Tilt; Redmen Dethrone Queen's 9-1; U. of T. Barely Defeat Mustangs

By Sydney Gruson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

One of the major developments in eastern football this season has been the rapid rise to prominence of Montreal Nationals, a new entry in the Ontario union, relying for the most part on stars who failed Montreal Indians in the Interprovincial Union.

For two seasons previous to this, when Indians finally were disbanded, they started out as potential champions of the Big Four. Loaded with such stars as Johnny Ferraro, Ernie Hempey, Pete Jotkus, Bill Davies and Dave Ryan, they fell swiftly and without good reason to Ottawa and Toronto.

There was talk of the stars being unable to agree. Yet most of them have moved to nations under Hoddy Foster and they are blazing a streak that stamps them as probable Union champions—and a bet for section honors. With only two weeks to play, they are one of the two undefeated teams in the East.

Nationals assured themselves of a place in the two-team O.R.F.U. playoff Saturday with their second tie of the season against Sarnia Imperials, 6-6. They should have won for they outplayed the faltering champions throughout and only heroic work of Hugh (Bummer) Stirling saved Imperials a lacing.

Apart from Nations gaining a playoff spot, the major developments from the fourth week of play were:

McGill Redmen dethroned Queen's as Intercollegiate champions by defeating Red Reeve's Tricolor 9-1 at Kingston and University of Toronto moved into a second-place tie with the wild western Mustangs, by beating them 8-7 in the final minutes of a thriller at Toronto.

Ottawa Takes Argos

Ottawa tangled the question of superiority in the Big Four with a 15-13 victory over Argonauts, who had beaten them the previous week in Toronto, and Toronto Balmy Beach rocketed back into a contending position in the O.R.F.U. by drubbing Peterborough Orfuns 30-3 at Toronto. In the only game that meant nothing, Hamilton Tigers gave Montreals Cubs a 13-9 beating.

Nationals, who lead the O.R.F.U. with six points to four for Balmy and Sarnia, rushed and passed better than Imperials, losing the advantage by fumbling three times in their own territory. Early in the first quarter a bobble on the 10 allowed Stirling to kick a placement and after Ray Mullins tied the score in the second, two more fumbles led to two singles by Stirling.

But Mullins, a bench-warmer with Indians and a star from this season's start, smacked a second field goal between the goalposts from 27 yards on the first play of the fourth quarter, and it appeared Nationals would win despite themselves. But Stirling had the better of a punting duel with Jimmy Riddell and he scored the tying point near the end.

Twelve thousand fans, largest crowd in Ottawa's football history, watched a comedy of fumbles made thrilling by a swiftly-changing lead in the Argo-Rider clash that left them tied for the top with three wins and a loss apiece. The winning shot came in the fourth quarter when the giant Tiny Herman booted a placement field goal.

For the second successive week Ottawa's Rocky Rocano was the kicking equal of Bob Isbister and Johnny Munro. Riders held the vaunted Argo end run in check with speed of their own and in the end it was an acknowledged superiority along the wingline that gave Riders victory.

Fumble Does It

A Queen's fumble in the third quarter, when the champions were behind three points, broke up the battle against McGill, who ran their undefeated record to four straight. Jimmy Hall dribbled the fumbled ball from the 45 across the goalline for a converted touchdown.

It was a fumble by Western halves, with five minutes to play, that led to Toronto's victory. Mustangs had outplayed the Blues all the way and were coasting on a 7-3 lead when the halves—no one knew just who it was—fumbled a kick behind the line and Murray Scott fell on it. Mustangs marched back to the Toronto 32 in the final minutes but they gambled on a field goal when a punt would have tied the score.

Balmy Beach scored four last-quarter touchdowns to stop Peterborough's challenge. Ab Box was the star, completing nine of 11 passes for 193 yards. Three touchdowns followed directly from the great pitching. Montreal Cubs made 12 first downs to Hamilton three, but fumbles and a blocked kick led to Tigers touchdowns and nullified Cubs' superior groundwork.

Bombers Pound Riders 13-0 In 4th Straight

WINNIPEG, Oct. 31—(CP)—Winnipeg Blue Bombers accomplished an unprecedented feat, four straight victories over Regina Roughriders, to qualify for the Western Interprovincial Football Union final with Calgary Bronks.

Bombers, facing a Rider machine rated in early season the most powerful in Regina grid history, suffered defeat in their first meeting this year but completed the string of four straight wins Saturday with a 13-0 conquest of Riders here in a sudden-death union semi-final.

Reg. Threlfall's well-coached offensive tore the Regina line apart as Bombers made 11 first downs and 228 yards rushing to Rider's six and 108. Winnipeg failed to complete a forward pass in two tries while Regina completed one for 40 yards in six attempts.

Bombers travel to Calgary next Saturday for the first game of the total-point final to be completed in Winnipeg Nov. 12. The finalists meet again Nov. 19 with players barred who are ineligible under the Canadian Rugby Union residence rule. Winner of this game will represent the West in a national final.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard Lang and family take this opportunity of thanking the attending doctors and staff of Nicholls Hospital; the I.O.O.F. Lodges, No. 111 Peterboro and No. 308 Millbrook; the Men's Bible Class of St. Andrew's Church and all their friends and neighbors who were so kind during Mr. Lang's illness, and for the flowers and fruit received at that time.

IN MEMORIAM

THOMSON.—In loving memory of Mrs. Isabella Thomson, who departed this life November 1, 1933.

What we would give her hand to clasp,
Her patient face to see,
To hear her voice, to see her smile,
As in the days that used to be.
But some sweet day we'll meet again
Beyond the toil and strife,
And clasp each other's hand once more,
In Heaven, that happy life.

—Ever remembered by her Husband and Family.

Sailors Searched

HANKOW, Oct. 31. — (AP). — Tightening of Japanese military restrictions in Hankow resulted in incidents to-day which led to protests from Britain and United States' authorities, but amicable settlements were reached.

The British protest was made when sailors were searched by Japanese sentries while acting as couriers. A similar incident involving a United States' sailor brought an American protest.

Part Of Wuchow Falls To Japs

CANTON Oct. 31.—(AP)—The inland Port of Wuchow gateway to Kwangsi province was being evacuated today under pressure of Japanese aerial bombardments believed to be a prelude to a Japanese drive in that direction.

Wuchow 90 miles west of Canton and terminus for ocean going vessels on the West river is a large trading centre and distributing point for Northern Kwangsi, Southern Hunan and Kweichow provinces.

The Japanese also were driving northward from Canton. Chinese acknowledged the invaders had captured Kwangmoon, about 80 miles north of the fallen metropolis, but said 300 Japanese had been killed northeast of Tsungfa, about 50 miles from Canton.

Japanese warplanes were bombing Tsingyun, 45 miles north of Canton, and Yuyuan, 70 miles farther to the north. Chinese said 34 grade school pupils were killed at Yuyuan.

Large forces of Chinese peasant militia were reported to have been massed along the west and north rivers, definitely checking Japanese advance forces near Tsingyun.

Canton continued deserted eight days after the Japanese occupation. Sporadic rifle and machine-gun fire still could be heard as Japanese soldiers pursued looters.

Karl Eskelund, Associated Press photographer, who reached Canton yesterday after being detained and robbed by numerous bands of Chinese outside the city, gave a graphic picture of desolation in the wake of the swift Japanese drive into the interior.

RARE COMBINATION.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

ASK FOR HIS HELP

IF YOU WANT to win the third round of a suit with the jack, so you can lead through a tenace in dummy, give a high-low signal on the ace and king. Unless your partner is not especially keen or is unobservant — which is worse — he will get the idea, toss away his queen and so keep from being endplayed.

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable)

South opened the bidding on this deal with 1-Heart. North responded with 2-Hearts, which South raised to 3-Hearts, and North took the contract to 4-Hearts.

The spade Q was West's opening lead. East overtook the trick with the A and returned a spade to South's K. Declarer ruffed his third spade and led a heart, which East won with the A and returned the heart 8 to South's 10.

Declarer then decided to lead his two high clubs and lead a third with the hope that East would be the winner of the trick and so force a lead up to his diamond tenace.

When South played the club A, West played the 9 and on the lead to the club K he threw the 3. East wondered what possible reason his partner could have for giving him a high-low signal. The only honor West could hold was the J. It then dawned on him that West was imploring him to unblock, so that West could get in to lead a diamond. He did and the diamond lead killed game for declarer, who thought his end play might produce game.

Lad 16, Arrested For Attempt To Wreck Train

COCHRANE, Ont., Oct. 31 (CP).—crude attempt to wreck a Canadian National Railways train carrying 50 persons will bring a 16-year-old farm boy into court today. Arrested last night, the lad is said by police to have readily admitted the attempt, but no charge was laid immediately.

Parents of the boy expressed belief that reading too much "western and blood-and-thunder literature" led to his action. They think he may have been trying to re-enact something he read when he placed ties and other obstructions across the rail line.

Engineer Donald McKinnon spotted the obstructions and stopped the train in the nick of time. The engine struck a signboard and switch light without damage, but a mile and a half farther down the track two 12-foot poles and half a dozen ties were heaped in a more formidable obstacle.

Railway and district police investigated the theory a gang of transients put off C.N.R. trains may have engineered the attempted wrecking as revenge. A former railway employee also was questioned before the trail turned to the farm boy. He was located at his home in Brower township near Abitibi and jailed.

Pimples Kill Many a Romance

The lives of many young people are made miserable by the breaking out of pimples on the face.

The trouble is not so much physical pain, but it is the mental suffering caused by the embarrassing disfigurement of the face which very often makes the sufferer ashamed to go out in company.

The quickest way to get rid of pimples is to improve the general health by a thorough cleansing of the blood of its impurities.

Dad Is Just Hired Help Handy When Cash Needed

By JOCK HAMILTON

On Castlefield Ave. in Toronto there's a complete staff working on marionettes and marionette plays.

Jack Conway, 16, is boss, director and producer. Eunice Clendenning is wardrobe mistress and general chief assistant. Bill Conway, 12, is property man and provides music and other sound effects.

The other staff member is A. C. Conway's Jack father. He says: "I just work here." Mr. Conway helps provide the necessary background of materials and general finances that make Jack's projects possible. When Jack is paid for putting on a show he follows his dad's advice and "plows the profits back into the business."

The Conway marionette shows use a stage 15 by 10 feet, with the front opening about six by three feet.

Making marionettes is a tough job. Jack began when he was nine, with a few clothes pins. His first production won him a prize at a Y.M.C.A. hobby show. He called it "Clothes-pin Theatre."

Some marionettes are made from wood, some from papier-mache. Balsam wood is used, but is difficut to handle. Best way is to make a model of plasticine and cover it with plastic wood, Jack says.

Of 11 characters in the Conway shows, the most popular is the skeleton. It is known as "he". "He" is a bit ghastly, especially when he comes apart and you see him gruesomely drifting about in pieces. "The kids love him," Jack declares.

Another popular number is Sailor, a real old tar. It took about three weeks to put him together. Takes a lot of time, too, Jack says, to make stage furniture. Beds, back-drops, chairs, even a spinning wheel that actually works, are all made in the Conway workshop. Obstacles are overcome regardless of seeming difficulty. The show must go on.

Hastings Merchants Become Suspicious

HASTINGS, Oct. 31.—Two men are believed to have been trying to pass worthless cheques on Hastings merchants Thursday night. They tried at least three different stores and finally succeeded in getting a restaurant proprietor for two meals when he refused to accept a cheque from the strangers after they had eaten.

In the first attempt, the younger of the pair chose a number of pieces of clothing in J. M. Baker's. The amount came to $5.70 and the clerk was handed a cheque for $5. It was on the Royal Bank in Napanee, marked payable to "J. Windover" and signed by "H. Windover". The clerk detected a similarity in writing of both signatures and called Mr. Baker who refused to accept it.

Wanted Blank Back.

The pair then went to Scott's restaurant. H. Petersell, a fur buyer, came in and demanded a blank from the men, he had signed his name on a few minutes before, presumably for their future reference. He explained that the pair had called on him and had enquired the price he was paying and the prices were to be given Windover's brother in Trenton. He had written his name on the blank cheque that they might remember it. He became suspicious of the pair immediately after they had left his house. Mr. Petersiel claims that the $5 cheque was written by one of the pair in his house and that he also had refused to cash it.

3 Weeks Of Liberty Net Convict 2 Years

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 31—(CP).—For three weeks of liberty from the Kingston Penitentiary, Gordon Barrett, 28-year-old London Township man, must serve an additional two years behind the bars.

County Magistrate C. W. Hawkshaw to-day sentenced Barrett on a variety of burglary and theft charges and the escaping custody charge, bringing the total time he must serve to around 4½ years.

Barrett pleaded guilty to two more charges, bringing to six the total of crimes he confessed committing during his brief spell of liberty.

Barrett walked away from a field where he was ploughing outside Collins Bay Penitentiary early in September. He was caught in London by city and Provincial Police, who had been watching a building for him for two days.

Besides the escape, Barrett has admitted stealing two cars, one from Roy Gibson, London Township, the other from Percy Stevens, in Owen Sound; one burglary at the shop of Henry Rose in Williamsford Village near Owen Sound, theft of a watch from Wilfred Sutton of Camden Township, and theft of clothing from a car in Sullivan Township.

Nazi Raids Net Thouands Of Polish Jews

BERLIN, Oct. 31—(AP). — Thousands of Polish Jews were held at German concentration points awaiting possible deportation to their homeland to-day while the Warsaw and Berlin governments debated the meaning of a new Polish citizenship law.

Polish police estimated 1,100 Jews, rounded up in swift night raids, already had been shipped to Poland through Schneidemuehl. An unrevealed number was kept at Neu-Bentschen, another border town, by secret police. Additional thousands in secret police custody elsewhere were ready to be evicted if Polish-German negotiations should fail.

Poland has ordered that nationals living abroad must have their passports certified by consular offices or lose their right to re-enter Poland. Polish Jews believed the law, effective to-morrow, might be an attempt to deprive Polish Jews abroad of their passports. Informed quarters said Germany feared many Poles would become public charges if refused revalidation stamps.

The government estimated that 150,000 Poles live in Germany, of whom only a fraction are Jews.

Poland Out to Bar them.

("Energetic Polish intervention" against the deportations was announced by Poland. Warsaw reported negotiations were under way to stop the deportations from Germany and to allow those already expelled to take their property with them. The Nazi drive was called a "misunderstanding" in authoritative Warsaw circles.)

The thousands of male Jews, routed from their homes in the night throughout Germany and confined to barracks and border stations pinned their hopes to the negotiations, scheduled to continue today.

Roundups continued in Vienna where black-uniformed elite guards, as the executive organ of the secret police, resumed combing the city's Jewish districts. The number taken into custody was estimated to exceed 2,000, about 500 of whom were Hungarian and Rumanian Jews. They were released later.

5,000-Mile Flights Only Hops In Future

LONDON, Oct. 31 — (CP). — Mid-air launching has convinced Captain Donald Bennett, pilot of Mercury, upper component of the Mayo composite air craft, that 5,000-mile non-stop flights will be considered "hops" in the future.

After establishing a long-range seaplane flight from Dundee to South Africa — a distance of 6,045 miles—the pilot declared the completion of a flight of such magnitude proved the principle of composite aircraft "holds tremendous potentialities for the future."

He said the Mercury unaided would possess a range not much more than 1,500 miles but in conjunction with Maia, the lower half, that could be quadrupled. If necessary, he said, it could carry twice the normal load for double the distance which could be achieved by any ordinary aircraft.

Captain Bennett mentioned that on the recent flight of the Mercury from Southampton to Montreal the fuel bill could not have been much in excess of £100 ($500) for 2,900 miles.

Two Brothers Meet For First Time After Twenty-three Years' Absence

"TWENTY-THREE YEARS is a long time to wait to see one's own brother," remarked John Lane of Los Angeles to the Examiner. The brother is A. F. Lane of Brock street. "He would not come out to see me, so when I was east I had to come and see him," was the explanation.

Mr. Lane left Peterborough more than 35 years ago, and recalls that as a boy he served his time learning to set type and all such things in the printing office at Brighton.

Asked if he had followed the newspaper business after leaving Mr. Lane replied in the negative. "I am," he said, "one of those people they refer to as inventors. I do not know what explanation there is for it but now and then ideas come in the most unusual way and then I start to work on them with the mechanics and something comes of them. Take the old hammer for instance. There has not been a change in it for years. The old claw hammer has now been changed and it will pull nails out straight."

Mr. Lane also has patents on fountain pens, lips for cream pitchers which prevent dripping and many other things which are on the market in United States today.

21,000 Loans On Homes Been Repaid

OTTAWA, Nov. 1 (C.P.). — F. W. Nicolls, director of the Federal Housing Act, reported yesterday that 21,000 Home Improvement loans have been repaid by Canadian borrowers.

Under the loan scheme, put into effect on November 1, 1936, when Dominion banks were authorized to advance funds to those persons wishing to renovate homes, 52,600 loans have been made amounting to more than $21,000,000.

"More than $8,500,000 has been repaid by borrowers since the Home Improvement Plan came into being," Nicolls reported. "Of this amount, the Government has had to pay only 25 claims, totalling $4,836."

The Government technically endorsed the loans by guaranteeing bank losses up to 15 per cent. of the amounts borrowed, but with more than one-third of the loans already liquidated, the Government had had to assume only one-sixth of one per cent. of all commitments, Nicolls said.

Loans under the plan average about 30 months in duration, with some in force as long as five years, the official said.

Masonic Lodge Observes 75th Anniversary

Masons in Peterborough and District marked two anniversaries on Monday night when over 200 attended a banquet in the Empress Hotel. Peterborough Lodge, No. 155, second oldest in the history of Masonry in this city, observed its seventy-fifth anniversary, and Most Worshipful Brother W. J. Dunlop, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario, returned to Peterborough to observe the thirtieth anniversary of his initiation into Masonry with his Mother Lodge.

It was a big night for Masonry in Peterborough, which dates back to 1848, with the institution of Corinthian Lodge, No. 101. Veterans were there, several of whom have been members of the craft for over fifty years. Worshipful Bro. E. H. D. Hall, sixty-three years a Mason and fifty-nine years a past master, was given a seat of honor at the front of the banquet hall. There were also Brother Thomas Richardson, who was initiated into Lorne Lodge, Omemee, in 1879 and in 1882 he became affiliated with Peterborough Lodge, and Bro. Japs Spread 200-Mile Net In China

3 Months of Siege Wrecks Teinan Nanchang is Next

SHANGHAI, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Chinese admitted today they had lost Teian, 125 miles southeast of Hankow, after more than three months of bitter fighting in which both sides lost heavily.

Japanese last week announced capture of the town, but today was the first definite admission by the China forces.

The Chinese compared the Teian losses to those incurred in the battle for Taierhchwang last winter. Hundreds died and the town was wrecked is that campaign where Chinese won a smashing victory, only later to be driven back. A Japanese spokesman said Japanese losses at Teian were somewhat less than at Taierhchwang.

The new line of defence, Chinese said, was established south of Teian to protect Nanchang, the Chinese air base.

An estimated 300,000 Chinese soldiers were in retreat, the Japanese said. The Japanese were endeavoring by a 200-mile encircling movement to close in upon them.

The Toughest Job?

Meanwhile, Japan has started the second phase of her conquest of China—the job of knitting conquered areas into the rising sun empire.

Japanese diplomats, merchants, builders, professional men, promoters and propagandists have followed close on the heels of her advancing armies, bent on drawing profit and power from the territory where 200,000,000 Chinese have been brought under Japanese sway.

They are faced with passive resistance of China's millions, active resistance of night-riding guerilla armies in the north, and pressure from neutral powers attempting to stop the closing of the open door to trade.

But the pace of political and economic penetration has quickened under the guidance of puppet government directed from Tokyo.

Trade monopolies have been established in North China and inner Mongolia. Neutral interests have been kept out of the Yangtse River valley because of "military necessity."

A "greater Shanghai" building plan in under way which would make the once important international settlement of Shanghai a small, neutral island surrounded by a huge Japanese-dominated Chinese community.

At the same time, an educational and cultural program to paint a Japanese complexion on the face of conquered territory has been launched.

A new joint Chinese-Japanese motion picture company, expected to have a monopoly on importation of films, is being formed under sponsorship of the Japanese, Manchoukuo, North China "provisional" and Central China "reform" governments.

Foreign business men in Peiping and Tientsin report that once-profitable trade with inner Mongolia now is impossible for their firms.

The Japanese-sponsored Mongol border government at Kalgan formed an oil monopoly, to which it turned over the marketing of all petroleum products. British and United States firms formerly had this market.

All transportation except inner Mongolia's sole railway is in the hands of a similar monopoly, and the railway is controlled by Japan's South Manchuria railway company.

Toronto, Nov. 1 (CP)

MUD on an evening dress worn by a 19-year-old girl was the clue which led to the arrest of the girl and two youths by Scarboro police for car theft.

The girl, Florence Thompson, East York, was arrested last night shortly after a stolen car had been ditched, following a chase by police in which both cars travelled at 75 miles per hour.

Harold Green, 20, and Peter West, 20, were taken into custody today, charged jointly with the girl.

After the car went off the road, the occupants scrambled out and fled. Miss Thompson was picked up a short time later by police cruising about the vicinity.

Youth Badly Carved Up Hallowe'en As Harrassed Czech Uses Knife

PARRY SOUND, Ont., Nov. 1—(CP).—Fred Charlson, 21, was in serious condition in hospital here today, suffering knife wounds believed received during the perpetration of a Hallowe'en prank. Martin Brinovar, 44, was held in custody on a charge of causing bodily harm.

Police said Brinovar told them several youths visited his home at Shawnagh, 16 miles north of Parry Sound, early today. Brinovar said their overturned an outhouse, broke a window of his house and then one of the party entered the house by the front door.

Provincial Constable W. A. P. Robinson, who arrested Brinovar, said the Czechoslovakian told him he grabbed a bread knife with a six-inch blade and slashed at the youth who entered the house. The youth was given emergency treatment by Brinovar's neighbors then was brought to hospital here.

Witness to the affray was Ted Beagan, who is said to have been in the cabin when the attack occurred. Uninjured, he accompanied Carlson to the hospital.

Cabin A Terrible Sight.

Provincial Constable Walter Robinson and Constable J. Elliott of Parry Sound police arrested Brinovcar, after they visited the scene of the attack—Brinovcar's little homestead in the bush north of here.

"When we arrived the inside of the cabin was in a terrjbel condition," Constable Robinson said. "There was blood al lover the floor,

Vienna Session To See Czechs Lose Still More

VIENNA, Nov. 1. —(AP)— The glistening yellow castle in which Dr. Kurt Von Schuschnigg lived as independent Austria's last chancellor will be the scene tomorrow of a German-Italian conference on the further dismemberment of Czechoslovakia.

The German foreign office mouthpiece said the 1920 Trianon treaty's "injustices" to Hungary would play "an essential role" in the talks. The newspaper of Field Marshal Hermann Goering said the conferees would "correct mistakes of the Paris suburban treaties (Versailles and Trianon)."

A new territorial alignment or plan for southeastern Europe, based on racial nationalism and aimed at appeasing the Danubian area, may be the result.

Goering's organ, the National Zeitung of Essen, said the parley on the Czech-Hungarian territorial dispute primarily would go down in European history as "a demonstration of the Rome-Berlin axis."

It added the ground work had been so thorough that "successful closing negotiations can be counted upon after one-day deliberations."

The Final Decision.

Foreign Ministers Joachim Von Ribbentrop of Germany and Count Galeazzo Ciano of Italy, the referees whose decisions will be final, will meet with Foreign Ministers Kolomon Kanya of Hungary and Frantisek Chvalkovsky of Czechoslovakia.

Their meeting place is the ornate, Baroque-style Belevedere on the edge of down-town Vienna. In a less prententious part of its buildings Dr. Schuschnigg resided and later was a Nazi prisoner after Germany annexed Austria March 13. (The former chancellor now is held by secret police in their Vienna headquarters, the hotel Metropole.)

The Trianon Treaty, negotiated between the Allies and Hungary after the Great War, reduced Hungary from a country of about 109,000 square miles to about 36,000 square miles, with Czechoslovakia getting about 24,300 square miles, Rumania about 38,600, Yugoslavia approximately 8,100 and Austria about 1,900. Germany has scrapped most parts of her post-war treaty of Versailles with the allied countries.

Chamberlain Ready To Push Anglo-Italian Pact Through Soon As Possible

LONDON, Nov. 1—(AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons today that he intended to bring the Anglo-Italian accord of April 16 into force "as soon as possible."

He said he would offer a motion for debate tomorrow to the effect that "this House welcomes the intention of his Majesty's Government to bring the Anglo-Italian agreement into force."

The Prime Minister spoke to the House as it assembled for a four-day session expected to be devoted largely to debate on the Government's rearmament, civilian defence and foreign policies.

The Anglo-Italian Pact, signed at Rome the day before Easter, has been held in abeyance because of failure to achieve a "settlement" of the Spanish question.

Settle All Conflicts.

The Rome accord was designed to provide a comprehensive settlement of all conflicts of British and Italian interests in the Mediterranean, Africa, the Near East, and Spain. It provided for British recognition of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia and for complete Italian withdrawal from Spain after the Civil War and Italy's assurances that she had no territorial or political aims in Spain.

Cheers from the Prime Minister's supporters and cries of "Never!" from the Opposition greeted his terse announcement.

Mr. Chamberlain refused to be drawn into discussion to-day of his reasons for deciding to make the accord effective, but it was believed the decision was based on Premier Mussolini's recent withdrawal of 10,000 Italian troops from Spain.

"Settlement of the Spanish question" was made a prerequisite to enforcement of the treaty when it was signed.

2 German Army Leaders Resign Posts

BERLIN, Nov. 1—(AP)—Military observers today saw in the appointment of a new chief of the German army general staff another step in the gradual removal of officers clinging to the ideas of imperial days or not willing fully to go along with the whole program under the Nazi Regime.

Chancellor Hitler yesterday named Lieutenant General Franz Halder, 54, to the post which General Ludwig Beck resigned because he could not see eye to eye with Hitler.

Colonel-General Fedor von Bock, 54, was named to succeed Colonel-General Gerd von Rundstedt, commander of army group No. 1.

Both of the new appointees led German soldiers into the former Czechoslovak Sudetenland, and well-informed circles believed they were receiving rewards for their work.

General Beck Long has been reported at odds with Hitler and was said particularly to have disagreed on German military occupation of Austria and Czechoslovakia, when both first were considered.

When Hitler was ready to rush armed force to "Liberate" Sudetenland, General Beck was sent on a "special mission" to the western front, across the country from Czechoslovakia.

Volley Of Shots Are Fired As Col. Miller Laid To Rest

Ghostly figures in faded blue uniforms must have been present to welcome to their ever-swelling ranks a comrade of three-quarters of a century ago, when modern khaki-clad soldiers stood at an open graveside in Little Lake Cemetery and bade farewell to Col. J. W. Miller, veteran of Gettysburg who died here Friday night at the age of 93 years.

The staccato thunder of a volley of shots rang out over his grave, the haunting strains of the Last Post faded into memory on a thin October breeze, and the end was written to a life of strenuous adventure.

His funeral was one of the most impressive to be seen here in many a month, as soldiers and civilians, civic leaders and fraternal heads, joined in paying tribute to a man who had won recognition in many fields of endeavour. Six former commanding officers of the old 57th Battalion, which Col. Miller headed for a good many years, and dozens of other prominent military men in the city and district were present. The city council, the board of education, on both of which he once served, were represented. Honorary pall bearers also included representatives of his two lodges, the Independent Order of Foresters and the Loyal Orange Lodge. Active pall bearers were from the ranks of the Prince of Wales Rangers and the 4th Field Battery. The firing party, under command of Battalion Sergeant-Major William Piercy, was

3-Way Call For Baby Leaves Judge Worse Poser Than Solomon's

WESTPORT, Conn., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Judge Austin Wakeman ascended the bench in probate court today with such a knotty problem in child fare to solve as once confronted King Solomon—but possibly Judge Wakeman's task of pronouncing judgment is the more difficult.

The biblical king once decided the disputed parentage of an infant by awarding the child to the more humane of the two wrangling claimants, but the local jurist must decide which of two Westport couples may adopt 10-months old Betty Lou Francos, or, as an alternative, may approve an offer of marriage made to the baby's unwed mother.

Claiming the baby are Mr. and Mrs W. R. Brown, with whom the child is now living and who have exhibited an adoption agreement signed by the mother Oct. 17, and Mr. and Mrs. William N. Buttery, who have produced a similar agreement signed Oct. 15.

Since the Browns and the Butterys brought their case to court, a New York chauffeur has written to Welfare Director Howell F. Fuller, offering to marry the mother, Anna Francos of New York, whom he has never seen.

Although Judge Wakeman did not indicate before court opened whether he would consider the marriage solution, he said he believed the New York man was "absolutely sincere." Before the marriage offer the mother testified she was "too poor" to support the blond, blue-eyed baby.

Corsetted Gen Brock Greets Early Brockville Risers

Brockville, Ont., Nov. 1 (CP)

HALLOWE'EN revellers last night placed a garbage pail over the head of the statute of General Brock which stands at the top of Court House avenue and affixed corsets to the figure of the soldier on the war memorial at the foot of that thoroughfare.

Police removed the corsets today.

Ontario Mops Up After Hallowe'en

Toronto Gets Beating From Revellers Firemen Kept Busy

TORONTO, Nov. 1 (CP)—Gates were brought down from roof-tops airless automobile tires were refilled and soap was scraped from windows today as Ontario mopped up after another Hallowe'en.

In some places last night young pranksters made off with everything that wasn't nailed down, and in others fires and fire alarms kept trucks on the run. But in many centres community parades and parties reduced damage and disturbances of other years to a minimum that had the police guessing.

Toronto took a good-natured beating from roving bands of youths. Streets were flooded when fire hydrants were turned on, street-lights popped before the assaults of sling-shots and bean-shooters, and windows of homes were broken. One $1,000 fire was blamed on young men and 27 false alarms were turned in before midnight.

Little damage was reported at London, where all Hallows' Eve was celebrated at indoor parties. Extra motor patrols of city and provincial police reported they didn't have even to wave a disapproving finger.

Chuckles and Frowns

Police who chuckled when they heard about a gang which tried to take a bread-wagon into a downtown hotel took a more serious view of a fire that destroyed a garage and an automobile at Hamilton. They had to cope, too, with a blockade of downtown traffic as costumed boys and girls poured through the streets in a huge parade.

Service clubs organized parades in Woodstock, Welland, Tillsonburg and many other Ontario municipalities. Marching behind three bands, 800 Woodstock youngsters whooped down the main street to the arena, where they were treated to sweets and awarded prizes for costumes. Then most of them went home, while the others toured the streets ringing door-bells and getting handouts of apples or candy.

Daladier Cabinet In 3-Way Split

PARIS, Nov. 1 (AP) — Premier Daladier summoned his cabinet again today to try to reach agreement upon measures to solve France's economic difficulties.

The premier asked the ministers, who met with him yesterday, to assemble at 5 p.m. (12 noon EST), although it was All Saints' Day, a national holiday.

Political observers said the cabinet split into three groups, one supporting the Finance Minister Paul Marchandeau's program of drastic economic measure, one holding it completely unacceptable, and the third, including Daladier, favoring part of the plan but opposing its provisions.

The cabinet kept silent but the French press said the measures revolved about requisition of foreign exchange, exceptional income taxes and an eight per cent levy on stock coupons.

The nation faces a treasury deficit of 60,000,000,000 francs (about $1,596,000,000) for 1938 and an unfavorable trade balance of 12,600,000,000 francs ($335,160,000) for the first nine months of 1938.

A New School

SARNIA, Ont., Nov. 1—(CP)—City council decided informally last night to submit to the ratepayers at the municipal elections a bylaw providing for the raising of $100,000 to build a new 12-room intermediate school. The action was taken on request of the Board of Education.

The Silent Hunt

WHITE CLOUD, Mich, Nov. 1.—(CP)—Michigan's silent deer season opens tomorrow with 200 archers prepared to seek deer in two counties. Archers here are given two weeks hunting before the regular season starts.

Last year 186 hunters used bow and arrows in the annual hunt, but only three deer were shot and one wounded. Veteran bowmen say the low kill is because archers must come within 30 to 50 yards of their prey, before shooting.

Had No Interest In Gun Firm Plaxton Says

OTTAWA, Nov. 1 (CP) — Hugh Plaxton, 34-year-old Liberal member of the House of Commons for Toronto-Trinity, lent his good offices to the John Inglis interests in their efforts to get machine gun contracts solely because it would bring employment to his sorely-distressed constituents, according to his testimony before the Bren gun inquiry here.

The tall, boyish-looking former Olympic hockey star was on the witness stand all yesterday under examination by Hon. J. L. Ralston, chief commission counsel, J. C. McRuer, associate counsel for the Inglis Company, Fred Parkinson, counsel for the Plaxton law firm of Toronto, and Lt.-Col. George Drew, representing Maclean's magazine.

Col. Drew, whose article in Maclean's criticised the government's method in awarding a contract to John Inglis Company Limited for 7,000 Bren machine guns without calling tenders and mentioned Hugh Plaxton in connection with the contract, opened his examination just before adjournment. The magazine article led to the inquiry.

Mr. Plaxton introduced Major J. E. Hahn, president and head of the organizing group of the present John Inglis Company Limited, to Defence Minister Mackenzie and General L. R. LaFleche, deputy minister, in October, 1936.

He was never under any misapprehension as to the purpose of Major Hahn which was to obtain orders for munitions to assist him in getting the Inglis plant back into operation. But once he had made the introductions and accompanied Major Hahn to London in November, 1936, to facilitate negotiations for supplementary orders with the British war office, he had no other

Brinovar, the officer, stated, had fled to the bush after the attack. On the kitchen floor police found the knife.

Second casualty as the result of the night's episode occurred here when Provincial police called the home of Chief Constable Lang to tell him about the affair.

The chief and Constable Jack Hudson were sitting in the kitchen having tea when the provincial officer telephoned and asked if they "had their guns ready because it looked like a man-hunt was on."

"We both pulled out our revolvers," said Chief Lang. "Hudson's must have caught in his tunic. There was an explosion and blood ran down his leg."

Accidentally shot by his own revolver, Constable Hudson was removed to hospital where the .32 slug was removed today. The bullet entered the left leg just above the knee.

Accompanied by Constable Elliott, Provincial Officer Robinson drove to the scene of the affray in the northern bush. Finding an empty, blood-stained cabin, they trailed the fleeing man.

"Brinovar did not offer any resistance when we came upon him in the bush," said Constable Robinson.

History of the Lodge.

Peterborough Lodge was the second of the Craft lodges to be established in the town (now city of Peterborough), taking its name from the community in which it was founded.

The first lodge to be established was Corinthian Lodge, No. 101, instituted in 1848. It made such progress in the decade following its birth, that fifteen years afterwards it was apparent that the town contained numbers of men of sterling principles and habits to warrant formation of another lodge.

Seven men from Corinthian agreed to participate, and Peterborough Lodge was brought into being. A charter was granted on January 27, 1863.

In addition to increasing its membership Peterborough Lodge parted in turn with many of its number on the occasion of the forming of the third lodge, Royal Arthur, No. 523.

At the time of the formation of Peterborough Lodge the Craft was gradually making progress from the east to western parts of Upper Canada. Charter members of the lodge were as follows: George Burnham (M.D.), Worshipful Master; Robert Stevenson, Senior Warden; Allan T. Huffman, Junior Warden; P. C. Blaicher, Secretary; N. Hoffeler, Treasurer; Henry Lawson, Senior Deacon; Thomas Galley, Inner Guard. And, in addition to the officers-elect, were Lewis Grant, I. J. Christie, J. M. Burns, William Helm, W. Bruce Ferguson, B. Kimball, J. A. Butterfield, A. Smith, H. Aitkens, and John Drake, as Tyler. Eighteen in all.

The first candidate initiated was Bro. J. I. Davidson at the regular meeting on April 10, 1863. Brother Davidson remained a member of the lodge for nearly 60 years and passed away during 1922.

The lodge prospered and its borders were enlarged. Among those offering were names afterward very familiar in and to the town and of the most prominent citizens: George A. Cox, Alexander Graham, Charles Cameron, John Manson, Robert Romaine, George Hastings, with many others.

R. Wor. W. D. Campbell very ably performed the duties of chairman, and welcomed the visiting brethren and especially mentioned were R. Wor. Bro. E. H. D. Hall, the dean of Masonry in the Grand Lodge, 59 years a past master of Corinthian Lodge and an honorary member of Peterborough and Royal Arthur Lodges.

Wor. Bro. Robert Cotton, on behalf of Mayor Hamilton, gave a civic welcome to the visiting brethren, and Wor. Bro. Mel. Turner, the ruling master of Peterborough Lodge, extended his greeting to the visiting members and especially to the Grand Master who, on October 30, celebrated his thirtieth year in Masonry. W. Bro. Turner introducing the Grand Master said that M. Wor. Bro. W. J. Dunlop took up residence in Peterborough in 1907 and became a Mason on October 30, 1908. He soon was elected to the chairs, and on his departure was the Senior Steward of the lodge. In 1914 he became affiliated with University Lodge in Toronto, and was Master of the lodge in 1922. District Deputy in 1927, chairman of the Masonic Board of Education in 1931, and Deputy Grand Master in 1935, and Grand Master in 1937.

Man Among Men.

The Grand Master in his address paid tribute to Peterborough lodge in having so many veterans of the craft present. He told of his first experiences in Masonry and believed that a man when he becomes a Mason has a feeling that he is a man among men. "Masonry had a great deal to do in giving me a start in my career. In the lodge then were such men as Wor. Bro. E. E. Lord, V. Wor. Bro. W. J. Henry and R. Wor. Bro. Alex Gibson. All men whom one could "look up to", he said.

He declared that the craft means a great deal to Masons and more so as the members grow older. Peterborough Lodge has been a real force for good in the community and no one is able to calculate what the lodge has done for men. It has been a tower of strength to them and has given them a chance to be better men".

He described as one of the great features of Masonry the learning to know men better. In the lodge there is an opportunity to meet fine men and to throw off the care of the everyday world. He urged his hearers to try and let Masonry do for them all that it is intended to do. Masonry makes men think and in making them think they will not drift with the current and they will see their objective and work towards it. In Masonry men realize that each man has his own niche to fill and if he does not fill it or find it he is a misfit and is unhappy. If a Mason renders good service to the craft he will hence be a good citizen.

The Grand Master dealt with some of the criticisms of Masonry and said that it came from people who did not understand it for the fundamental principles are such that should make every Mason a loyal citizen and one who has no hatred and greed in his make up.

He spoke of the great duty of today in retaining citizenship as it is now known, for democracy is a wonderful system but it works only when every citizen looks after his franchise and uses it. By not voting invitations are thus given to other forms of government.

In closing he urged Masons to spread goodwill, stand pat on Masonic principles and he wished his mother lodge the best of good luck in the future.

Wor. Bro. Ross Dobbin presented to the Grand Master on behalf of Peterborough lodge an electric toaster. The presentation being made by Bro. Roland Payne the youngest member of the lodge.

The chairman introduced Bro. J. Hampden Burnham, son of the first master of Peterborough Lodge. Bro. Burnham said his father was an ardent Mason. He spoke of Masonry as something that has stood the test of time and has lasted, and it, he asserted, is encumbent on every Mason to remember that men may come and men may got but Masonry goes on forever.

Wor. Bro. J. E. R. Munro presented communications by letter from some of the distant members of Peterborough Lodge and also other lodges. Some of whom he mentioned were Royal Arthur 523; Golden Rule No. 126 Campbellford; Percy Lodge, Warkworth; Hastings Lodge, 623; Norwood Lodge, 223; Clementi Lodge Lakefield, 223; True Britons Lodge, Perth and the members were Bro. Samuel Jay of Toronto, Bro. Clarence Casson, Toronto; Bro. J. W. Patton, Toronto; Bro. W. J. Fox, Three Hills, Alberta; Bro. Percy Gilbert, Kindersley, Saskatchewan; Bro. L. George Bedford, Drummonville, Quebec; Wor. Bro. J. G. Brown, Vancouver; Wor. Bro. J. M. Roszel, Toronto; Wor. Bro. W. B. Bamforth, Nelson, B.C.; and Bro. Alex Haddow of Bolivia.

Wor. Bro. A. E. McGregor of University Lodge Toronto presented to Peterborough Lodge on behalf of his own lodge a picture of the Grand Master to be hung in the Lodge Hall and the gift was accepted by R. Wor. Bro. John Comstock. Greetings were also brought by R. Wor. Bro. H. R. H. Kenner from Corinthian and Royal Arthur Lodges, R. Wor. Bro. O. C. Watson of Campbellford, district deputy; Wor. Bro. H. Attacks Two Assailants.

Replying to questions from Mr. Attlee as to the effects of the Munich agreement, the Prime Minister by implication criticized the broadcasts of Winston Churchill and David Lloyd George to the United States Oct. 16 and 25.

"I do strongly deprecate," he said, "statements made by persons in responsible or even irresponsible positions who take opportunities to broadcast to the world or to other countries in particular that their own country is in a state of decadence."

He added he was not referring to Mr. Attlee.

Opening debate on a motion for adjournment, Mr. Attlee called upon the Prime Minister to give an explanation of the political and economic consequences "of the great defeat sustained by France and Great Britain."

"I do not regard the Munich agreement as a defeat either for democracy or for the cause of law and order," Mr. Chamberlain replied.

That Guarantee.

The Opposition Leader charged that the territorial sacrifices demanded of Czechoslovakia were greater than those sought in the Godesberg memorandum and that the economic blow suffered by Prague was even heavier. Declaring he wished to know the value of the guarantee given by Great Britain to the dismembered state, Mr. Attlee added:

"I am totally opposed to this country giving guarantees which it cannot carry out and I am opposed to committing this country to vague obligations outside the League."

Regarding a loan to Czechoslovakia, the Labor Leader expressed the view Great Britain must avoid granting credits which in one form or another will flow into German coffers.

He urged a rapid, humane solution of the general political refugee problem and a solution of the colonial question on the basis of mandates which would, above all, guarantee fair treatment to native populations.

Room For Both

Then replying to opposition attacks on the consequences of the peace of Munich, he insisted "there is room both for Germany and us in trading with southwestern Europe."

Outlining Sir John Anderson's new functions, he reiterated his opposition to peacetime conscription of the nation's manpower for defence, declaring: "There will be no compulsion. The government are satisfied that it is desirable and practicable to meet the needs of civilian defence by voluntary action suitably guided and organized.

Sir John, as Lord Privy Seal, will in fact become minister for civilian defence and will be a member of the imperial defence committee, Mr. Chamberlain explained.

The measures undertaken by the government within the framework of this department will not be of an obligatory nature, the prime minister emphasized. The needs of civilian defence will be fulfilled by "voluntary action suitably guided and organized."

Mr. Chamberlain said he had decided against establishment of a ministry of supply to speed rearmament because it would dislocate industry unnecessarily. He also asserted Great Britain was not planning to equip her army on a continental scale.

Of Germany's drive to the southeast he said:

"We have no desire to block Germany from this country or that or to encircle her economically. It is true we have certain trade interests there ourselves, and of course we mean to maintain them.

No Economic War.

"Don't let suppose there must be economic warfare between ourselves and Germany. There may be some competition, but competition is a thing we have thrived on in the past and it is not in our interest to see any part of the world remain poor."

The Prime Minister said amid cheers that "there is nothing further from our mind than entry upon a new armaments race."

"I repeat categorically, that we have no aggressive intentions against Germany or any other country," he said. As to the suggestion that our armaments are inconsistent with peaceful intentions, I do not know why any different standards should be applied to this country in that respect than to other countries."

That was interpreted as an answer to German and Italian expressions of suspicion that Great Britain agreed to the Munich peace only to gain time to arm for a punitive war.

Mr. Chamberlain concluded:

"It is our firm determination that there shall be no sitting still and waiting for peace to come.

"We shall nevr get far unless we can accustom ourselves to the idea that democratic and totalitarian powers can work together in a constructive program to facilitate the interchange of goods to improve relations for the good of all."

LONDON, Nov. 1.—(AP).—George Brain, 27, was hanged at Wandsworth jail this morning for the murder of Mrs. Muriel Atkins near Wimbledon Tennis Courts July 14.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, November 1—(CP)—Flurries of stop-loss selling drove Winnipeg wheat futures down about two cents late to-day. At the final bell values were 2 to 1⅞ lower, November 57½, December 57¼, and May 60½.

Lack of export demand, late Chicago declines and overnight precipitation in Western Canada's Spring wheat areas caused bearishness.

Unsettled weather in the United States Southwest dry belts turned early Chicago buyers to the selling side, and this apparently was an inducement for outside selling at Winnipeg.

Extra Teacher Discussed By School Board

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 1.—Whether the Campbellford High School is to have an additional teacher depends entirely upon the recommendations made by the school inspector when he makes his visit within the next month. The matter had already been studied by the Internal Committee, it was revealed by W. Roy Loucks, who stated that it had been discussed with the staff at the High School. A part time teacher for French seemed like the only solution for the problem, but nothing definite had been done by the committee who invited the rest of the board to express any opinion they might have on the matter.

There are 213 pupils registered at the school this year, and 53 were at present taking Grade X. French. This, it was felt, was too large a class for one teacher to handle efficiently. Asked what would be the probable result of this overcrowding, Principal Greig stated "this would have a tendency to increase the number of failures. The work will be covered, but there will be less individual attention to each pupil, and with the new course of study providing for more oral work, it makes the task increasingly difficult."

If some of these pupils drop the subject or discontinue the subject, the trouble may rectify itself by Christmas, suggested Dr. H. O. Richardson.

Chairman of the Property Committee George Free reported that work on the school steps had been held up due to delay in shipment of materials.

A motion was passed authorizing the purchase of records and other miscellaneous supplies to facilitate the teaching of music in the Public School. Chairman F. C. Bonnycastle recommended the purchase of a miniature cup for the winner of the oratorical contest, as has been the custom in previous years. On motion of Armour and Todd, the purchase was authorized.

Don't Keep on Having Constipation!

If constipation's got you down—so you feel heavy, tired and dopey—it's time you did something about it. And something more than taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat only the things most people do, the chances are that a very simple fact causes your constipation—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If this is your trouble, eat crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran is not only rich in "bulk"—it also contains the natural intestinal tonic, vitamin B_1.

New York Doctor Lauds Use Of Cancer Fund

OTTAWA, Nov. 1—(CP).—Dr. C. C. Little of New York, general director of the American association for the control of cancer, praised the use made of the King George V. Jubilee cancer fund and the attitude of the Canadian people in combating the disease in an address here last night before the Ottawa branch of the Health League of Canada. Governor General and Lady Tweedsmuir attended.

Dr. Little said he was greatly encouraged by facilities he had seen in Toronto and Ottawa for fighting the disease and he was pleased to read of the interest Lord Tweedsmuir took in the cause.

He urged that researchers be allowed to continue experiments on animals. "We must have complete freedom of research. Somewhere there is an unbalance of the body, a discrepancy between growth and repair and the new biology, chemistry and physics are men's weapon's on preventing this."

Quack doctors should not be allowed to practise in the field of cancer for much harm could be done by unskilled attention. Despite many handicaps, 80 to 90 per cent of early cancer cases were curable because the disease is localized.

Widow Puts Baby In Coal Heater

COLUMBUS, Ga., Nov. 1—(AP).—Burial was arranged today for three-months-old Priscilla Ann Turner, who Police Captain J. T. Spence said was burned to death when placed in a coal heater.

Spence said Mrs. Lucille Adams, middle-aged widow, placed the baby in the heater at her home where the infant's mother, Mrs. T. E. Turner, rented living quarters.

Police Chief J. W. Satterfield said Mrs. Adams probably would be given a lunacy hearing. He said she was being held on a charge of murder.

Dorothy Wright Of Cartwright Tp. Tops School Fair Winners

MILLBROOK, Nov. 1.—The office of the county Department of Agriculture at Bowmanville, E. A. Summers, district representative, has just issued the following list of (a) the total exhibits at the Durham county rural school fairs for 1936 and 1938; (b) the winners of the Eaton trophies and books; and (c) a list of the six highest point winners in the thirteen fairs.

In the case of the Eaton trophies, if a pupil had already won this coveted award, he or she is only entitled to the second or third prize; and in case of a tie, the pupil with the largest number of first prizes has been declared the winner; in other words, quality and not quantity of exhibits is given the preference.

Table gives name of school, number of schools competing, number of entries 1936 and 1938 and number of ground hog tails:

Fowl Supper Draws 300 To Janetville

(Examiner Correspondence.)

JANETVILLE, Nov. 1.—The annual fowl supper held under the auspices of the Presbyterian church in the C.O.F. Hall on Friday evening, was an outstanding success in every way.

The tables were most attractive with floral centres of dahlias and a tempting array of appetizing viands.

Over 300 partook of a most delightful goose supper and afterward a play, "Constable Jerry of Fulton's Ferry," was ably presented by the Young People of Hartley United church, who also furnished delightful music between acts.

The pastor, Rev. W. H. V. Walker, was chairman for the evening and extended a hearty welcome to all.

Rev. Bury of the United church, was called upon for a few remarks, also Mr. Cecil Mercer, M.P.P., of Newtonville.

The proceeds amounted to around $120 which will be devoted to church purposes.

Priestley to Act

LONDON, Nov. 1—(AP).—J. B. Priestley is to make his debut as actor to-night, playing the lead in his own play, "When We Are Married."

The author's role is that of a cimic Yorkshire press photographer. He plays it as a "sporting gesture and necessity" since the regular lead, Frank Pettingell, was injured in an automobile accident Sunday.

Emigrants Get Call Back To Nazi Jobs

Robert Ley, German labor front leader, announced 2,000 emigrants would be repatriated as the first step of a program to "overcome an acute labor shortage in the fatherland."

Addressing an audience of mining experts last night, Ley said those workers who left and now are encountering hardships in foreign countries may return home where they will find work and bread."

Ley suggested also that training of skilled laborers be advanced, to start during the last two years of secondary school.

"Only if we continue to increase our efforts to raise German production," Ley concluded, "will we be able to secure Germany's equality and freedom."

What a Strike Proves

The strike of the Humberstone Shoe Co. at Port Colborne has been settled after a duration of some eight weeks. The Minister of Labor and his chief conciliator sat in at a conference and the end came. There is to be a seniority list prepared and men will be taken back according to that regardless of what they did when the strike was on. There is no union mentioned in the agreement, nor is there to be any discrimination against those who were active in the formation of the union.

There is virtually nothing stated in the reports regarding wages so it is taken for granted they will remain as they were. When a strike of 450 workers runs for eight weeks it means a loss of wages. Allow the workers even the low rate of $2 per day and it will be found they have lost about $45,000.

The next thing is that the 450 will not return to work at once. It will be necessary for the company now to secure orders and we read it may be two weeks before 250 are placed in employment, and as business picks up again the other 200 will be called in as their services are needed. That is one of the unfortunate features which generally marks the close of a prolonged strike. The workers and the management finally come to terms and the workers desire to return to work because they need their wages, but very seldom does it happen they can do so. There is always that period of waiting for the shop to get busy again and in lines where competition is keen markets have been lost.

The Examiner doubts very much if there is anything in the agreement at Port Colborne by which the workers are going to return which could not have been agreed to before the strike started. That is the tragic thing about strikes; they could be settled in advance and without all the loss and bitterness of the factions involved would do their negotiating before striking.

Necessity Does It

Time was and perhaps still is when Rosedale was considered by Toronto to be rather exclusive property. The folk who went in there built good homes and they were assured it was what was called "restricted" territory. But things appear to be different today, and there are 150 boarding houses in Rosedale. The Ratepayers' Association desires to have them closed, and the Rosedale Boarding House Association wishes to keep them open. The Civic Property committee will have to make a decision.

Most residential sections in Toronto or any other large city undergo a change. Years ago Jarvis street was a city of fine old homes in Toronto; today it is filled with rooming houses and the southern end of it is rather tough. St. George street was even better, but today signs on windows indicate roomers are welcome. Rosedale started to weaken a few years ago and today there are 150 boarding houses there.

The reason is not hard to find. If an individual wants to sell his large home he must have a buyer, and it may be the buyer wants to keep roomers or boarders. It may be that people who have not sold their houses find their old sources of income cut off or interfered with and they have rooms which they are no longer using, so in order to make a living they rent them. We know of one case where nine young men lease an old home in Rosedale and employ a housekeeper to run it for them. If a woman is left with a large house on her hands and with insufficient income to support herself or the home, she turns to renting her rooms through necessity, and if she did not do that she would soon be in a hard-up position.

For those and other reasons it is difficult to call a section of any city strictly residential and guarantee that it will remain that way. The ever-pressing need of making a living is something which changes lives as well as residential districts.

Foolish Men

We notice where two men armed with revolvers attempted to hold up a butcher on Saturday evening. Late in the evening too when the proceeds for the day were all tucked away in the till.

This butcher, Sidney Sletzer, did not feel like being robbed; he had not the least intention of complying with the demand that he hand over his money. He had in his hand what the people in his business call a cleaver, and at best it is a formidable looking bit of equipment. It does just what its name indicates—it cleaves.

Sidney used the cleaver with consideration. That is, he raised it high in the air and brought it down with the flat side whack on the shoulder of one of the robbers and he went partially flat, so his companion in poor business had to lug him from the premises and be off.

These robbers appear to have been loose in the head. They might tackle shops where clerks sell many things and they might terrify their victims, but tacking a man with a cleaver in his hand is different. It is a sign of stupidity.

When They Turned Wild

There is on the desk a small clipping from the old paper in the village which bears the one word "Warning" at the top. Then it proceeds to tell that extra police have been sworn in for Hallowe'en night; they have full power to make arrests, and no wrong doing is to be tolerated." If it were possible to do so that little notice might be kept standing from year to year, because the only thing that ever is changed is the year and the name of the reeve of the village.

Years ago the boss used to smile a little when he brought that notice out to be set up in type, and he used to remark it should be given a good place down in the corner of page one where all would see it. Every boy in the village knew who the special police would be and the only distinguishing mark they wore was a badge with the word "Police" printed on it. The special police were appointed by the one policeman in town and they were his friends so they were going to get the $1.50 which was going for the night's assistance. They were not fleet of foot, neither were they going to comb the community for law breakers. They generally went to investigate after they heard of deviltry having been performed.

The village of those days would have enumerated amongst its real estate a number of outbuildings—frail construction for the most part and they stood like sentinels in the dark alone. When the young life of the community had a sniff or two of night air on Hallowe'en they seemed to undergo a change. They became bent on destruction of a sort, and their wrath or whatever it was found an outlet on these little premises. They stood of course in a vertical position, and the desire seemed to be to reduce them all to the horizontal or reclining attitude. Next day the elders in the tribe would with toil and ill-concealed anger continue the work by reversing the order and make them stand straight once more. There is many a full grown man right in this city who has in other days indulged in this miserable sort of business. Apart from Hallowe'en he would be a model lad in the community, but on that particular night some evil spirit seemed to enter in and inhabit him entirely.

Gouging In War Scare

Britain had a war scare a few weeks ago, and now the people are making demands for investigations. They claim they were riddled by war profiteers or by scare profiteers. And undoubtedly they were.

The thing they dreaded was the air raid. People dug trenches in parks, in their own lawns, flowers beds and gardens, and they were making places of safety. There was no time to be lost and they did their buying of material at the nearest point. When people are doing their purchasing under pressure they take no time to count the cost, nor do they stop to consider whether they are being soaked or not. After the scare is over they attend to the thinking and the questioning.

It is now asserted that prices of war raid material went up in some cases during the recent scare a full 500 per cent.

Sand bags were in demand and they sell usually at 1 1-2 pence; in a few hours they were selling for 10 pence or more.

Corrugated sheeting jumped $10 per ton.

Timber increased $40 per standard, and wire screening went up in price beyond all reason.

The business may be threshed out in parliament, and it should be. England, where one person would be in as much danger as another in case of air raids, apparently has its share of people who look upon a man's extremity as the opportunity to make him pay through the nose for what he urgently needs. Without any particular desire to draw comparisons, we doubt whether Hitler would tolerate such a custom.

When Radio Goes Crazy

The maximum in poor judgment seems to have been reached during a radio broadcast of H. G. Wells' "The War of the Worlds," which was released in New York on Sunday evening between the hours of 8.15 and 9.30. There were those who missed the opening announcement telling what it was all about, and the result was they sat and listened to reports of strange bombers and troops landing in or near New York; of strange attacks being made and of pending air raids, etc. It was horrible stuff at any time and more so for those who were not fully aware of the nature of the broadcast.

The result was that a wave of hysteria seized thousands of people in New York and other large cities, and they rushed from their homes, believing it would be safer in the parks. In Newark in one block twenty families rushed from their homes after having supplied themselves with wet towels, believing that in such equipment there might be a margin of safety from gas attack. Hundreds of people hurried for the subway stations, believing that in case of an air raid they would find safety below the ground.

Even if the program had been explained a dozen times and at intervals we fail to see why such a thing should go on the air on a Sunday evening or any other evening. There are a number of radio performers and managers who appear to have become obsessed with the idea that the people in general long for something which is thrilling, horrible in spots and will hold one in a tense state of mind right through to the end. Bunk! If those who select and plan programs can do no better than they did Sunday evening then it is high time they made way for better men who possess at least some common sense.

NOTE AND COMMENT

We fear if Czechoslovakia was left alone on Hallowe'en night it may be tipped over or stolen.

Hunting with bows and arrows has been pronounced legal. It is also, we might mention, a bit antiquated as well.

We soon ought to know everything about the Bren machine gun except how to make it.

In local court a man who "socked him one" was assessed $10 and costs. If that proves anything it is well he did not keep on "socking."

It is said that the farmers have made no complaints in regard to the pheasant shooting. Any protests from the pheasant of course does not count.

Mayor Day of Toronto wants council elected every two years, claiming it would save money. Holding elections every ten years would, of course, save a lot more.

Toronto police state that telephone warnings about loitering has resulted in the arrest of ten burglar suspects in a week. That kind of co-operation is a big help in law enforcement.

Man at North Bay went out and shot two wolves which were sitting on his doorstep. He should explain just how he did it as there are a number of people who would like to do the same thing.

An Austrian count who lost his 60-room castle after the German occupation of his country is now living in a dilapidated cottage in England. Possibly he did not cheer loud enough when Hitler made his triumphal entry.

Hamilton man got a 60-day sentence for drunk driving plus a $25 fine. If the fine is not paid he gets 21 days more, so there is a possibility of 81 days in jail. It can hardly be urged that our courts are inclined to compromise with the drunk drivers.

Speaker in Germany says the Munich agreement came because Chamberlain was afraid of the German air force and France was in the same position. If that is correct then the new-born peace will be cutting its first teeth on a strange bone.

One candidate for mayor in Windsor is going to run on the "home rule" platform. Windsor defaulted and its finances are looked after by the Municipal Board." And we have a feeling that conditions will remain just the same after the "home rule" appeal.

Toronto merchants have been fooled by customers who hand them Mexican five-peso notes which resemble in size and general appearance our $5 bill. This fraud has been reported several times in the papers, and if these merchants read their newspapers seriously they would not have been swindled.

Police are rounding up a number of men in Western Ontario who have been selling lottery tickets. It would be much better for these people who want to gamble or bet to wait until the horse racing season starts, for then they have the sanction of the government and all is safe.

DIET

(By A. B. K.)

¶ My Neighbor A. is rather stout, and wobbles when he goes about, and yet he seems all right; he's cheerful as a man can be, and it is plain enough to see, he has an appetite.

¶ His wife she up and read a book, that told how people ought to look, they should be rather slim; she stopped her husband as he ate, and scooped up victuals from his plate, and read the thing to him.

¶ And then she started on a plan, to take the padding off her man, she made a diet list; he'd shake off forty pounds or more, look trimmer than he did before, have slender neck and wrist.

¶ Then Neighbor A. was deep in grief, he missed his heavy cuts of beef, his spuds and apple pie; instead of geeting slabs of ham, he found he was a salad man, a tear came to his eye.

¶ But Neighbor A. would not rebel, nor stomp about the house and yell, it's hard to nail him down; he looked quite pleased at what he ate, took everything from off his plate, no wrinkle and no frown.

¶ Then Neighbor A. his supper through, remarks that he has chores to do, a busy man it seems; he ducks in then so he can buy, beef sandwiches and spuds up high—and then some pork and beans.

The British Parliament, in the year 1700, passed a law providing that any woman who lured a man into matrimony "by means of scent, paints, cosmetic washes, artificial teeth, false hair, Spanish wool, iron stays, hoops, high-heeled shoes or bolstered hips" should draw upon her the penalty prescribed for witchcraft, and her marriage would in the eyes of the law "stand null and void."

ABOUT LEECHES

LEECHES that come from Italy are shipped to the U.S. enclosed in lumps of earth. They give the appearance of fat, juicy worms possessing a slight greenish tinge. Each leech has 24 rings. Its sex life is comparable to that of the worm.

✧ ✧ ✧

Leeches are used for many purposes. They are used in treating black eyes and are effective in reducing the blood pressure.

✧ ✧ ✧

✧ ✧ ✧

At intervals throughout the veins, nature has placed tiny valves. These serve to prevent the venous, or old blood, from flowing back.

THE BIBLE

IT IS an old saying among printers that "not even a copy of the Bible has ever been printed without a typographical error."

✧ ✧ ✧

Despite the popular belief, there is no specific mention in the Bible of the whale's swallowing Jonah. Strangely enough, the book of Jonah ends with a question mark.

✧ ✧ ✧

The longest word in the Bible occurs in Isaiah 8: 1, 3. It is Maher-shalalhashbaz.

✧ ✧ ✧

The dog is frequently referred to in the Bible, but the cat is not mentioned once.

✧ ✧ ✧

Most Bibles used by school-children in this country are not printed in America, but in England. The reason for this is that English Bibles are more reliable. In America the right to print the Bible does not belong exclusively to one or two firms, as in England. As a result many printers compete, the price is lowered and so is the quality of the work. Hurry and price-cutting breed mistakes, even in Bibles.

✧ ✧ ✧

The copyright on the English Bible, or Authorized Version, has been held by the kings of England since the year 1611 when it was first published after King James I employed fifty-four scholars to write it in 1604.

✧ ✧ ✧

The saying, "God helps those who help themselves," is not in the Bible as many persons suppose. It is an ancient proverb, first expressed in these words by Algernon Sidney during the 17th century.

✧ ✧ ✧

In England it is unlawful for any magazine to reprint an extract from the Authorized version of the Bible. The right to publish the Scriptures belongs exclusively to the King's Printers, Oxford University Press, and the Cambridge University Press.

The Bible is widely believed to be the best-seller of all time. During the period from 1931 to 1933, however, its sales in the United States dropped from over four million to 66,000; this represents a greater decline than that suffered by fiction, travel or biography.

The Geneva Bible, published in 1560, is called the "Breeches Bible" from the fact that Genesis 3: 7 reads, "They sewed figtre leaues together and made them selues breeches."

OVER THE PHONE.

(London Cor., Ottawa Journal)

A GERMAN WOMAN, married to an English ex-serviceman and resident in London, got through to her sister in Germany on the phone in the recent crisis. This was before the Czecho crisis took a turn for the better on the news of Hitler's invitation to a four-power conference.

The London sister, hearing her relative's voice for the first time for some years, emotionally asked whether she was praying that there might be no war between England and Germany. "War between England and Germany," came the reply, "what in heaven's name are you talking about?" It was impossible for the London woman to make her German sister realize the actual facts of the situation.

She had evidently heard nothing of the true position, and viewing her sister's anxiety with sheer incredulent amazement. "Why," she said over the phone, "if I were to put the telephone receiver out of my window now, you might hear the people in the street shouting 'Heil Chamberlain!'" A strange revelation of conditions under Nazi rule in postwar Germany.

• And Yet the Patient Died

As the International Sudetenland Commission proceeds with its work, the average outsider is forced more and more to the conclusion that the final outcome is likely to be a repetition of the medical announcement that "the operation was successful but the patient died."

When the Munich agreement was made the intention, according to general belief, was that four zones populated predominantly by Germans were to be handed over and that in other parts with large German population the question of transfer or maintenance of nationality was to be determined by plebiscite. But International Commission says the Owen Sound Sun-Times, has recommended — ordered, in fact — transfer of a fifth zone which is said to include territory containing the Bohemian coal mines and cutting deeply between Bohemia and Moravia, severing rail communications between these two provinces.

It appears that many mines and additional industries will be lost. The terms are described in Prague ministerial circles as "cruel."

And apparently there is no way to stop this grabbing business, though it all appears to be directly in breach of the agreement. Certain zones were definitely named for cession; others were left to be decided by plebiscite; but the International Commission seems to have constituted itself judge, jury and executioner. Unless strong opposition to this gradual dismemberment of the republic develops into armed conflict — Czechoslovakia will be sliced away, a bit at a time, until Czechoslovakia ceases to be more than a memory.

Was it for this that Benes consented, for the sake of peace, to amputation of parts of his country? Is it not possible that Mr. Chamberlain and M. Daladier were too confiding when they trusted Adolf Hitler to carry out an agreement?

• Should A Man Get Out of Bed ?

MAYOR LAGUARDIA of New York returns a wise answer to Mrs. Elizabeth Faff of Glendale, L. I., who wrote to inquire whether it is necessary to get out of bed and stand when our national anthem is played over the radio. The answer, of course, is yes and no.

It seems that Mrs. Faff and her husband are fond of listening in on WYNC, our city station says the N.Y. Times. Too fond, perhaps. Mr. Faff is very patriotic. So is Mrs. Faff—within reason. On two occasions after the Faffs had gone to bed, once at 10 p.m. and once at 7 a.m., the majestic strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner," floated from the loudspeaker. Mr. Faff immediately leaped to attention from under the bed clothes. Mrs. Faff was not so prompt. But when Mr. Faff, more in sorrow than in anger, pointed out her dereliction, she also rose. Hence her somewhat plaintive appeal to the mayor.

The mayor has little balm to offer. He has never found himself in a similar quandary, probably because he is too busy to get to bed much. He quotes the Flag Code of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which says flatly that "all present should rise" and "those in uniform should salute at the first note of the anthem." This raises the question as to whether pajamas and night robes are uniforms per se or merely a lounging mode. The code further unhelpfully states that men should "remove their headdress," but in the circumstances outlined by Mrs. Faff this could be accomplished only with a night cap. The Public Relations Officer of the navy starts out soothingly by suggesting that "members of the family in the privacy of their homes need not respond to the rendition"; then adds confusingly, "but should guests or visitors be present it is perfectly proper to quietly rise." Mrs. Faff, as we recall, was discussing these amenities with strict application to the bedroom.

So the most that can be said on the matter is that it depends. It depends on how cold it is. It depends on whether you are married or single. But most of all it depends of whether you have sense enough to turn off the radio before you go to bed.

MODERN SUNDAY.

(Hamilton Spectator)

THE AVERAGE man and woman has come to look upon the Sabbath not so much as a day of rest and introspection, as of relaxation and amusement. It is too much trouble to go to church, especially when there are so many counter-attractions of a more congenial nature. Some prefer to stay at home, doing just what they please, or nothing at all; others would rather go out motoring, play golf, etc.

It is convenient to make the minister or the brand of church service the scape-goat, but it is most unjust.

The way to promote religious zeal in oneself and in others is to take an active, personal part in church activities. Nothing is accomplished by staying away and criticizing the few faithful ones who are unselfishly carrying on—and who would be only too glad to welcome those who believe they have a useful contribution to make to the spiritual progress of their community.

A BIBLE NAME.

LETTER in London Sunday Times — Sir:— Mr. George Sherwood asks about the Christian name Prisca. I have a sister with that name. She was born on January 18, and my father referred to a calendar of saints' days and found this name.

The reference to Prisca in the epistle of Paul to Timothy is probably not to this minor saint, whose date was roughly A.D. 50. I have never seen or heard the name anywhere else, and it is most definitely not, as so many think, a diminutive form of Priscilla, who was also a saint.

W. M. MAIDLOW.

Palace Gardens Terrace, W 8.

Sir:—The name Prisca is more familiar as Priscilla, which is the diminutive form of the word. Prisca occurs in Romans xvi. 3, and I Corinthians xvi, 19, as well as II Timothy iv, 19. As Priscilla it is found in Acts xviii, 2, 18, 26.

To The Editor

APPRECIATION.

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—May I, through the columns of your newspaper, express the most sincere thanks of the Anglican Young People of Ontario, to the City of Peterborough, for the wonderful time it accorded us during our recent Conference.

We cannot adequately express our thanks to the city officials, the citizens and businessmen of Peterborough who all did so much to make our stay the happy and successful one that it was. We owe a debt of gratitude which cannot be repaid; however, we realize all the work that was done, and believe me, we do appreciate every bit of it.

Conference is over, but memories linger on, and it is our sincere hope, that we will have the good fortune to visit you again, and renew the many fine friendships formed during our short stay.

Peterborough we thank you.

NO MAN SAW IT.

(Edmonton Journal)

NO MAN—as far as is known—saw what must have been an awesome sight when the big glacier on Mount Hector rushed into the valley. The mountain guide who was in the district two weeks ago saw the glacier in its usual place; when he returned the other day from Banff, the valley was filled with a carpet of broken ice, two miles long and a mile wide. Fortunately no human beings were in the path of the avalanche when it broke loose.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

EVERY MAN is right in his own eyes: but the Lord pondereth the hearts. To do justice and judgment is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice.—Prov. xxi, 2, 3.

And he spake this parable unto certain which trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and despised others: Two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican. The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess. And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner.

I tell you, this man went down to his house justified rather than the other: for every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.—Luke xviii, 9-14.

ALL SAINTS.

One feast, of holy days the crest,
I, though no churchman, love to keep,
All—Saints, — the unknown good that rest
In God's still memory folded deep;
The bravely dumb that did their deed,
And scorned to blot it with a name,
Men of the plain heroic breed,
That loved Heaven's silence more than fame.

Such lived not in the past alone,
But thread today the unheeding street,
And stairs to Sin and Famine known.
Sing with the welcome of their feet;
The den they enter grows a shrine,
The grimy sash an oriel burns,
Their cup of water warms like wine,
Their speech is filled from heavenly urns.

About their brows to me appears
An aureole traced in tenderest light,
The rainbow-gleam of smiles through tears
In dying eyes by them made bright,
Of souls that shivered on the edge
Of that chill ford repassed no more,
And in their mercy felt the pledge
And sweetness of the further shore.

Average Oxford Student Does Little Work, Tom Allen Finds

Life in one of the oldest university residences in the world Merton College at Oxford University, was described in a letter received today from Tom Allen, M. A., young Peterborough scholar. Built about 1290 A. D., Merton is Oxford's oldest college, and one of its most heavily endowed.

"It's quite amazing, even to me, to find how little work is done by the average," he wrote. "Of course they depend largely upon their vacations, which are long. We have only three terms of eight weeks each actually in college." But those eight weeks are expensive, for he calculates the cost at about $42 a week.

"It is a real 'gentleman's' existence, which in its ease, comfort and every kind of amenity surpasses all I could have imagined. For instance, my rooms and meals: two rooms, in a part of the building put up about 1290 A. D. The sitting room is large with two gothic windows, high ceiling, large fireplace, easy chairs, large polished table, solid side-board, desk, book cases, and so on. I take breakfast and lunch in my rooms. My scout comes in about 7.30 a.m., lights the fire, takes my shoes for cleaning, wakes me, and busies himself laying my breakfast. I have to do 30 'rollers' that is, sign the roll or go to chapel, at 7.55 a.m. each of the three terms. Rather a nuisance for I usually lie in until the bell starts ringing, then pull on my trousers over pyjamas, put on a coat to cover up the fact I'm not dressed, grab my gown, and dash off to Fellow's Quad, the next quad to mine, to sign up. Then I have to get all undressed for a bath. If I were an earlier riser I'd have the bath first; it would be more convenient."

Life At Oxford Described.

It was a lazy, scholarly life he described, with strolls about ancient college grounds, garbed in the traditional black gown, attendance at one or two lectures, rowing on the river, tea in the Common Room. "Dinner in Hall is a fine affair." It is an old pannelled hall, with stained glass windows, three great long tables and a head table for the dons on a dais at the front. The dons live like lords. It is quite a sight, we undergraduates in our black gowns, and the dons' table with its glittering silver and glass."

Oxford has dozens upon dozens of customs, traditions, and rules that have been passed down through the generations, he wrote, and described two or them. One was "sconsion."

"In Hall, at dinner, if an undergraduate comes in late, or comes in early without getting permission from the head of his table, or speaks more than three words of a foreign language other than Latin, or carries on a long and heavy conversation about politics, science, etc., or mentions a lady's name before the second course, etc., he is liable to be "sconsed" by his equal or by a member senior to him When he is "sconsed" a quart tankard of beer is brought to him. This he either must down without removing his lips or pass it along the table until it is emptied. If he does the former successfully the chap who sconsed him has to pay for the beer and also for another similar quantity which is his gift to the culprit. If he does the latter, the offender has to pay for the beer. He has the right to appeal to the head table, if he thinks he has been unfairly accused, but he must appeal in Latin."

Locked in at 9.15 P.M.

"We are locked in at 9.15 in the evening, but if we are out before that we may stay out until 11 o'clock. Between 11 and 12, a shilling fine. Being out after 12 is a serious and moral offence. To get in after 9.15 we kick the old door and the porter opens it and takes our names. Merton is the easiest college to climb into—11 different ways, so my friends say, being known. If one is caught, the fine is about £.

"I like the life and the college tremendously. Merton is the oldest college and one of the most interesting architecturally. It has good gardens and good food—the best table in the University, I am told. Since it is one of the wealthiest colleges, comparatively, living is cheaper than in most. It has a huge endowment, owning land in Oxford, slums in London, and so on—a medieval inheritance."

The colleges at Oxford were all prepared for being converted into hospitals in case war had broken out a few weeks ago, he wrote. Students' books and clothes were stored, sand bags and piles of sand are now only gradually being cleared away. Canadian students in London have been issued gas masks but not at Oxford as yet, though residents of the town and the dons all have them.

ROBERT TOWNSEND.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Nov. 1.—Robert Townsend, son of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Townsend, who resides in the township of Thurlow, died in the Western Hospital (Toronto) early Monday morning. He had been in failing health for some time. Robert was in his 15th year and when health permitted attended the Prince of Wales school, Thurlow township. Surviving to mourn his loss besides his parents, is one sister, Mary, at home.

The funeral will be held from his late residence on Wednesday afternoon.

ROBERT EDMUND STANTON

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Nov. 1.—The community lost a citizen of outstanding integrity, the major portion of whose life had been spent in Millbrook and its immediate vicinity, in the sudden death of Robert E. Stanton, which occurred on Thursday, following a brief illness, in his 81st year.

Mr. Stanton was born at Welcome, and was the younger son of the late James Stanton and Mary Hunt, early settlers who came out from England and after a comparatively short stay north of the community mentioned, removed to the farm homestead on the north gravel road a short distance from Millbrook, where for the remainder of their lives they were well known and highly respected citizens.

Fifty years ago, on June 8, 1888, the marriage took place at the home of the bride's parents, Owen Sound, of Robert E. Stanton and Louise Winterbotham, and the golden anniversary of their wedding day was quietly celebrated this year, while Mr. and Mrs. Stanton were on a visit at the home of their younger son, Frank, who resides in Montreal.

Some years ago Mr. Stanton left the farm homestead and took up store-keeping in Millbrook, later moving to Toronto where from 1921 to 1929 he continued in a business career. Selling out, the return was made to the scene of his earlier years, the H. J. Russell house was purchased, and the home established here ever since. A lifelong Methodist, going with that church into Union, Mr. Stanton was for some time a very faithful and capable superintendent of the Sunday School of the present St. Andrew's Church.

In fraternal circles, he was a member of Millbrook Lodge I.O.O.F. No. 308.

Besides the bereaved widow, the immediate surviving relatives include two sons, Charles E., of Peterborough; and Frank L., of Montreal, the latter having served overseas during the World War; one sister, Mrs. John McKee, of Kansas, and four grandchildren also survive.

The funeral took place on Saturday, at 2.30 p.m., from his late residence, King street; the Rev. A. L. Sisco having charge of the service; a large number of citizens were in attendance, and the floral tributes were many and beautiful. The pallbearers included Messrs. W. F. Fallis, J. A. Brown, Percy Stinson, P. I. Bentley, G. Burnham, and John Skitch of Peterborough. Interment was in the family burial-plot at Gardiner's Cemetery.

ROBERT STONE.

The death occurred on Wednesday, October 19 of Robert Stone, one if the oldest and most widely known residents of Burleigh, in his seventy-fifth year.

Although Mr. Stone had been ailing for a number of years death came as a great shock to his many friends.

He was born in Dummer and took up residence in Burleigh at the age of two with his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. John Stone. He spent all his life clearing and working the farm to which his parents had brought him.

While in good health Mr. Stone was an active member of Holy Trinity church at Mt. Julian.

A widow and five children are left to mourn his loss. The children are Mrs. Andrew Batten, Mrs. Albert Batten, Mrs. Gordon Perry, all of Peterborough, Susie and John at home. The late Mr. Stone is also survived by one brother, Mr. W. G. Stone of Burleigh; and three sisters, Mrs. Samuel Bryson of Lakefield, Mrs. Frederick Bolton of Burleigh and Mrs. William Patterson, of Peterborough.

Rev. Mr. Moore of Young's Point, conducted the funeral services. Interment was made in Hillside cemetery at Lakefield. Many floral tributes attested the esteem in which the deceased was held.

The pallbearers were Mr. J. H. Sherin, Mr. Wesley Leonard, Mr. Norman Bolton, Mr. Arthur Bolton, Mr. William Tedford and Mr. Cephas Leslie.

Australian Aliens To Be Registered

CANBERRA, Nov. 1.—(CP-Reuters)—Legislation providing for the registration of all aliens in Australia is foreshadowed here by Interior Minister McEwen. It is understood the Commonwealth proposes to use the electoral machinery to apply the registration system.

Mr. McEwen said at the present time it was not possible for the Commonwealth to keep a strict watch on the movements of aliens once they had arrived in Australia. The federal authorities had to rely upon the undertakings given by aliens that they intended to engage in a certain occupation, at a certain place.

Rawdon Farmer Loses Barn, Stock

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Nov. 1.—A frame basement barn situated on the Walter Benedict farm on the boundary line between the townships of Rawdon and Seymour, along with a drive shed, maching shed and hen house were destroyed by fire late Saturday night, the cause of fire being unknown. A valuable horse, twenty-one shoats, a number of hens and all the season's crop with hens, and a quantity of machinery were also destroyed in the blaze. The stock and implements were owned by Charles Smith, who has rented the farm for the last two years and his loss will be considerable as little insurance was carried. The barn is protected against fire and the owner's loss will not be great.

The threshers were at the place on Saturday but a tractor outfit owned by Allen Simpson was used, and it is not believed the fire was caused from this source. The fire broke out about nine o'clock on Saturday night, and noticed by Mr. Smith when flames shot from the upper part of the barn. A large number responded and were responsible for saving the house and garage from the flames.

Hawks To Prove 1938 Win Was Not A Fluke

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—(AP).— The world champion Chicago Black Hawks' "Cinderellas of the ice," are determined to keep from skidding from the heights to which they swept in such amazing fashion last winter.

Some fans always will claim the Hawks had nothing less than "black magic" in their sticks last April when they captured the Stanley Cup after finishing sixth in the National Hockey League with only 14 wins and 25 defeats.

This season the Chicagoans are confident they will prove their 1937-38 performance was no fluke—and there is little doubt but they the Hawks will be better. They will show an entirely new line in Russ Blinco, Baldy Northcott and Earl Robinson, acquired from the defunct Montreal Maroons, and are expected to have strength where they once were very weak—on the third forward combination.

Three Tested Veterans.

Manager Bill Stewart's first line will be made up of three tested veterans—Elwin (Doc) Romnes at centre, Paul Thompson at left wing and Mush March at right wing. The second line will be the Blinco-Northcott-Robinson trio, which consistently picked up scoring points for the Marcons.

The jobs are practically "cinched" on the third line—the veteran Johnny Gottselig at left wing and Cully Dahlstrom at centre. Joffre Desilets, obtained in a trade with Montreal Canadiens, may take over the right wing chore but he is being pressed by Roger Jenkins and Jack Shill, both veterans.

The defensive line-ups will be hold-overs from last season. Art Wiebe and the speedy Earl Seibert will work together, with the other duo being Alex Levinsky and Bill McKenzie. Mike Karakas, who had no relief through the regular 37-38 campaign, will have help this year. The Hawks plan to carry Paul Goodman as a spare goal tender.

Veteran Passes

HALIFAX, Nov. 1 (CP).—Thomas Mullalley, one of the originals of the Princess Pats who went overseas with the first Canadian contingent, died in Halifax last night. He was a member of the guard of honor for King Edward VIII at the unveiling of the Canadian war memorial at Vimy Ridge. A veteran of two wars, he entered the army as a bugler boy in the Boer war.

Puzzling Law

DETROIT, Nov. 1 (C.P.).—Michigan employers, baffled by the intricate wage-and-hour law effective last month, are flooding the Labor Commissioner's office here with inquiries, more than 100 requests daily are made for rulings, the law sets up minimum standards of pay and a maximum hours of work, as well as barring children from work.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

BOXING AND RASSLIN' appear in for a bit of a revival locally within the next few weeks. Playfair Brown, well-known boxing dean of Toronto, was in Peterborough the other p.m. to look things over. He plans a couple of pro mitt shows here, the first probably a week from Friday. Brown has no place to stage his shows in Toronto so is trying a bunch around the province, places like Peterborough, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Brantford, St. Thomas and London. Queensbury Wrestling Club of the Queen City will promote a couple of pro grapple cards in this town, too, the first maybe inside of two weeks. And then the local Riverview A.C. will run two or three amachoor shows, the first this Friday e'en in the Brock St. rink. All of which should guarantee plenty of mitt and mat action for the many ring fans in Peterborough.

* * * * * *

A RIGHT interesting pug program is listed for Friday, three outstanding Toronto leather-pushers meeting three good locals. And four other bouts on the card. Two main bouts see Nick Orlando against Scotty McDonald of Toronto and Dutch McIlmoyle meeting Billy Amato of Toronto. In the semi-final, Harry Low swaps punches with Harry Kiel of Toronto. In the prelims, Ken Roy fights Eddy Curtain, Joe Hobbins tackles Bill Joiner, Buddy Redmond and Izzy McIntosh mix it, and Gord Riel tosses fists 'gainst Dan MacGregor. When the boxers get boom-booming up there on the roped-in battleground, fans will see mor efights than at a Beaches-Orfuns' football fray, no fooling!

New Hockey Team Here

PLANS TO RUN an independent O.H.A. junior "C" club here this winter—apart from the Hockey Club's senior "B" and junior "B" teams—are going right ahead. Bill Clarke, Pete Vitarelli and Jim Guiry, with a few others, are behind it and have received the okay of the Peterborough Hockey Club. With the O.H.A. willing to take the new entry. Club ossifers will be elected in the near future as soon as uniforms have been lined up. Players will be picked from last year's Monarchs and other Junior City Loop squads, and the team which represented this city in juvenile playdowns. A lot of promising material and it is a good move to get 'em playing organized hockey. Should be simple to get a decent "C" grouping, too.

* * * * * *

TWO HUGE CUPS arrived recently from the O.L.A. for the Petes' lacrossers, the LeFortune Trophy for the senior "B" title and the Leveck Cup as a challenge trophy. Also some two dozen classy medals which the Petes have for keeps. Meantime, the City Council will throw the champs a banquet in the near future, and there is a very fair possibility of windbreakers for the boys. Just so the local athletes who travelled thousands of miles in a big interlocking group—not counting the miles they ran on the floors—and took a million bumps and bruises before emerging victorious won't feel they were overlooked. They brought Peterborough their first lacrosse title in half a century. While moseying about in the woods Sunday, we overheard a little birdie say that two of the Petes' better players might play lacrosse in Rochester this winter, and not be with the locals in '39.

Checking The Casualties

ORFUNS held a chalk talk last p.m. and will swing into heavy practice sessions nightly the rest of the week. Herb Hendrie is expected back in the local lineup against Montreal Nationals here Saturday, and we imagine Don Hendren will be on hand, too. But Mike Loucks is still a question mark. He had the knee attended to in Toronto last Saturday night and the bandage willbe taken off tomorrow. Can't say whether he will play any more this season or not at present, but we should hear in a day or two. Coach Bill Irwin isn't too downhearted about the locals' loss to Balmy Beach, figuring 'twas a case of Orfuns being away off and the Beaches in peak form—with the injuries and breaks ruining the Petes' chances. The squad is ready to give the Nats a man-sized battle here this week-end.

FRED JACKSON, sports editor of the Toronto Star, wrote last p.m.: "Beaches showed power plus against the Petes and the Pontonites are apparently at the well-known peak. The Orfuns gave ample demonstration of how they pulled a surprise win over an over-confident Sarnia team by extending the eastenders until an injury forced Mike Loucks out of the game." And Ted Reeve wrote in the Telegram: "Peterborough put up a grim display until half-time against Beaches. Then with Loucks and Hendrie out, they fell apart, and Ab Box's passes forward and Coach Bill Irwin's passes sideways brought up the score to the thirties. Friend Irwin has done a good job of coaching with the youthful Petes, but he will have to leave the pitching for somebody else. The attendance of more than 4,000 was surprising. Beaches used to draw less than that to their Dominion finals."

On The School Gridders

AND WE DON'T BLAME the Scugog scribe one whit for chortling: "The L.C.I. covered themselves with glory when they defeated the champions of the Lakeshore District in Peterborough on Saturday. They clearly out-played their opponents along the line but were unable to cope with the deadly passing of Foster, who filled the air with footballs the latter part of the game. What seemed like a safe lead suddenly took on the aspect of a very small margin when the Petes started heaving the pigskin through the ozone. This boy Foster throws a very deadly pass and the L.C.I. secondary had little or no chance of knocking it down or intercepting it, as it was thrown low and fast into the arms of a P.C.I. receiver." A nice tribute to a boy whose pitching might have given the Petes an O.B.A. win over Stratford, eh?

* * * * * *

A SQUINT at the C.O.B.L. financial statement shows the ball loop didn't make any sugar the past year, just about broke even, and that was a good showing in view of the screwy circs. Main sources of income were $60 in entry fees, certificates at $12.50, playoff receipts of $138.97 and the Petes' $25 protest fee. Also a slight balance from the previous semester. Expenses included O.B.A. entry, certificates, replating cup, O.B.A. delegates, telephone and telegraph, postage, rental of rooms for meetings, umps to protest session, and travelling expenses to various meetings of the three top officers. So the circuit will show a slight balance to start off next spring. Local club hasn't met yet to present the financial report, but the Petes didn't do any too well the past season, either, we believe.

Player Rushes From Bench To Tackle Quarterback On Touchdown Run

CINCINNATI, Nov. 1—(AP).—Remorseful John Barnini of the Providence College football team was as bewildered as anyone else today by his blind leap from the bench to tackle Xavier University's quarterback, Tom Hogan, on a touchdown run.

The Providence centre wandered around the clubhouse afterward as if the world had caved in on him. He made no alibi. He only asked "why did this have to happen to me? All I can say is that I'm awfully sorry."

When the "twelfth man" incident occurred yesterday, Providence had passed 10 yards to a touchdown, but the officials called the ball back because of fighting between Barnini and Irv Slattery, Xavier end. Both were ejected.

On the next play Hogan intercepted a pass and was in the clear at the 45-yard line when he was stopped by Barnini, who forgot he was out of the game.

Officials gave the touchdown to Xavier. The Musketeers then went ahead to win, 33-7, before 12,000 fans.

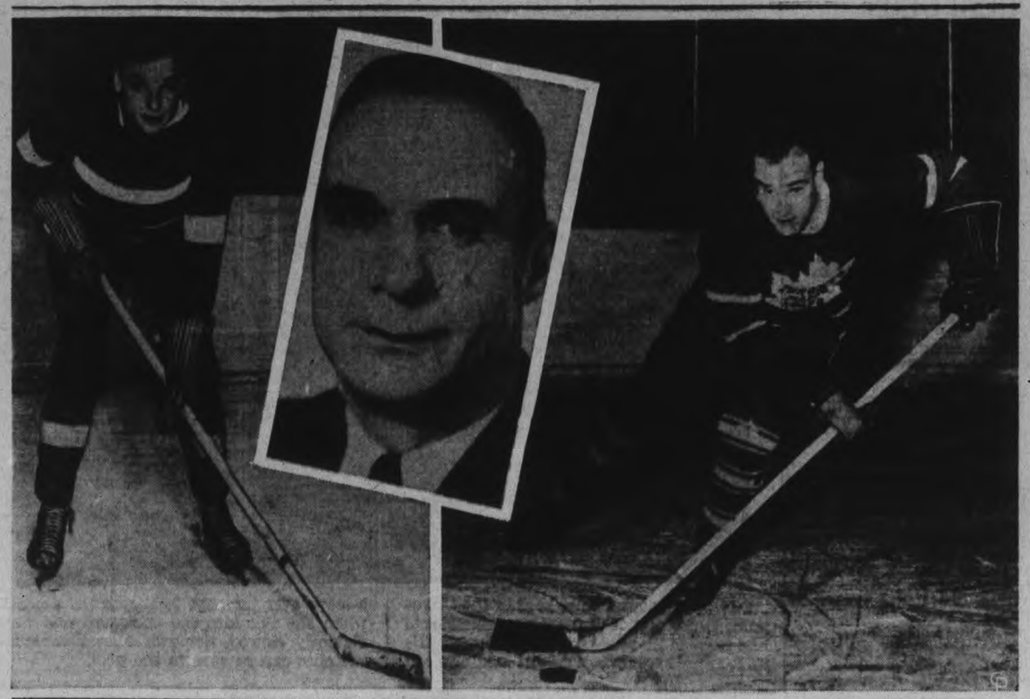
Three Conachers Been Signed By National League Teams



A National Hockey League season without a Conacher in the ranks would not seem the same. Latest of the famous family to hit the big time is Roy Conacher signed by Art Ross for Boston Bruins. Charlie, next oldest, is at the RIGHT as he appeared the last time hockey fans had a look at him, getting under full steam for Toronto Maple Leafs. All eyes are on him this year as he makes a comeback effort with Detroit Red Wings. Lionel and mightiest, now an M. P.P., but formerly Canada's greatest all-round athlete, is in the CENTRE.

Stirling Holds Lead In Rugby Scoring

TORONTO, Nov. 1. — The race for the eastern football scoring championship has settled down to a two-man duel between Sarnia's Hugh (Bummer) Stirling, 1937 champion, and Annis Stukus, the Argonaut quarterback, who has been playing the best football of his career in recent weeks.

Standing of the two remained unchanged after Saturday's play, and the third Canadian Press summary shows the Bummer ahead by a single point—23 to 22. Both scored six points on Saturday, Stirling with a field goal and three singles in a 6-to-6 tie against Montreal Nationals, and Stukus with two field goals in Argos' 15-to-13 loss to Ottawa.

Young Ray Mullins, who booted all Nationals' points, jumped from third place in the Ontario Union to second place behind Stirling, while Ab Box of Balmy Beach held third to himself. Mullins has 16 points, and Box, who kicked four points against Peterborough, 12.

Increasing his lead steadily over the college gridders, Herb Westman ran his total to 17 with three points against Queen's. This gave him a seven-point edge over Western's Ace Hurley, and Cam Grey and Ben Shuken of Toronto tied for second place with 10 points each.

Andy Tommy and Tiny Herman, two of Ottawa's brightest stars against Argos, moved in beside Argo Art West and teammate Stan O'Neil for a second-place tie in the Interprovincial Union by scoring five points each.

Lionel, Charlie And Roy Are National League Institution

By Central Press Canadian

When a National Hockey league season rolls around, as they seem to do every year, fans expect to see the name Conacher in the summaries . . . and in the headlines. For more than a decade the two have been interwoven and if an up-and-coming youngster named Roy Conacher turns out to be half as good as his brothers, the name should be a standout for some time to come.

When Art Ross recently announced that he had signed Roy to a Boston Bruin contract, it made three brothers of the famed family who have made the grade in major league puck-chasing. The names of the others hardly need mention, Charlie, who Jack Adams is counting on to do some heavy bombing for his Detroit Red Wings this winter, and Lionel, now a verbal instead of physical battler, as a member of the Ontario provincial parliament.

Like his brothers before him, young Roy comes from Toronto corner lots and higher calibre amateur hockey, and the Bruin boss hopes to form a new "baby line" out of a sextet composed of him, amateurs Harry Frost, Pat McReavy and Terry Reardon, and Red Hamill and Red Hill, two pros up from the minors.

Lionel Starts It

It was back in the days following the great war that the name that has become such a by-word for sporting prowess first sprang into prominence. Lionel, oldest of the three, carried the torch. Playing lacrosse for Toronto Maitlands, rugby for Argonauts, hockey for Aura Lee, and other sports "on the side," Lionel blazed an unparalleled trail through the Canadian sports picture.

Tales of his deeds have been told and re-told. He was no ordinary performer in any sport . . . he was a standout. He has been acclaimed time and again Canada's greatest all-time, all-round athlete. And that designation could quite easily take in more territory than the Dominion. Nobody has bothered to nominate a second greatest.

Big Connie, oddly enough, entered the National league via the United States, while adding to his education in Pittsburgh, he and other Toronto amateurs signed up with that city's Yellow Jackets in the United States Amateur Hockey league. Aspersions have been cast as to the amateur status of that group, but nobody disputed the team's ability.

Came the 1925-26 hockey season and the all-conquering Yellow Jackets turned pro in a body, entering the N.H.L. as Pittsburgh Pirates. In major company they proved something less than all-conquering, but Connie was just hitting his stride. He had taken up the puck game much later in life than most youngsters, but he made up for lost time.

Pirates Fold, Connie Moves

The Pirates didn't last long in Mr. Calder's loop, and after they folded, Conacher moved to New York Americans; later to Maroons and Chicago Black Hawks, with the latter two teams being the backbone of Stanley cup winners and right-hand man of Tommy Gorman.

While all this was going on, while the Big Train was winding up an amazing athletic career as an all-star of the ice lanes, young brother Charlie was moving rapidly forward. He made quick strides in Toronto amateur ranks and topped off his record as a simon-pure with Marlborough juniors, winners of the Canadian junior championship in 1928-29.

With Marlboroughs, Charlie won a reputation as a hard-skating, fast-shooting right winger, and without further seasoning was signed by Conny Smythe to a Maple Leaf contract. It proved to be one of the best buys canny Conny ever made. Along with Conacher, he signed his partner on left wing, Harvey Jackson, and together they moved up to form with Joe Primeau, the famous "Kid Line," a trio classed with Boucher and the Cook brothers, and Canadiens' famous Joliat-Morenz-Gagnon lines.

For 10 years "Chuck" scintillated at right wing for the Leafs. His sizzling shots, acclaimed the hardest in the league, whizzed past goaltenders with monotonous regularity. He was near the top in the scoring records nearly every year, and twice was top sniper. This in spite of the fact that in many seasons he spent a large part of the time on the sidelines with injuries.

Leaves Game "For Good"

The name Charlie Conacher still spells color and drama to the hockey fans. In the middle of last season he retired from the game on the doctor's advice, seemingly through for good. The strain of going all out through one campaign after another, with the added handicap of having lost a kidney early in his career, began to tell, and the famous name appeared to be on the way out of the National league picture. It was at the end of the previous season that big brother Lionel had deserted the hockey arenas for those of politics.

Another season is almost here and in place of no Conachers we find two! The erstwhile Big Bomber of the Leafs is on the comeback trail with Jack Adams' Detroit Red Wings and more than a few hockey fans will be asking, "How did Conacher do last night?" during the coming campaign. The Chucker is still far from being an old man, and if his health is as sound as it appears to be, and he believes it to be, those Wings will be heard from!

Lionel . . . Charlie . . . and now Roy. The latter, of course, may not even stick in the big time this year. The camps are still full of ambitious youngsters with headline aspirations—many to stick and many to be farmed out. When Art Ross jots down his team for the season, the youngest member of the athletic family may be on the list. If he's not, look for him next year. Maybe Charlie will have to keep the name in the headlines for another year alone. But there's another Conacher on the way up. Somehow the National league wouldn't be the same without that name leading the parade . . . or mighty close to the front!

Witnesses said trucks were stopped by sticking a steel pin through the spokes and letting it jam against the fram of the truck.

Lombardi Wins Players' Cup Lee Runner-up

NEW YORK, Nov. 1—(AP).—Award for the most valuable player in the National league in 1938 goes to Ernie Lombardi, an Italian-playing an American game in a German town.

The big Italian who catches for Cincinnati Reds rolled up 229 points in the voting by the Baseball Writers' Association of America. He is the first Cincinnati player ever to win the title.

Lombardi has much to recommend him. He led the league in hitting with .342 and according to his manager, Will McKechnie, had much to do with the success of the Reds' young hurlers this year.

He cannot run fast enough to scare any infielders but he is a big, calm resourceful catcher with an arm like a bullwhip.

Bill Lee, Chicago Cubs' hurler, finished second.

Torn Tendons Slice Metz Chances Of Placing With Leafs, But Jackson Comes To Life

(By The Canadian Press.)

Injury has robbed one of the training period's brightest prospects of any immediate opportunity to catch a National Hockey League position. The experts were giving Don Metz a 50-50 chance of gaining a place with Toronto Maple until this thing had to happen, making it certain he won't be in there when the Leafs open the schedule at home against Boston Thursday.

Don, a brother of the Leafs' Nick Metz, suffered torn tendons last night when Toronto and its Syracuse farm, of the International-American League, mingled for their annual charity game at Toronto. The young wingman, who has been one of the last three amateurs to stay with the club, teamed with his brother and Murphy Chamberlain on an aggressive forward line and with Pete Langelle and George Parsons on another. Now he's been ordered to take a compete rest.

Harvey (Busher) Jackson, offensive disappointment of the Toronto practices at Galt, started to go last night when the time neared to put down the chips for the schedule's start. He scored twice and contributed an assist to lead the Blues to a 5-3 victory over the Whites.

Manager Mervyn (Red) Dutton of New York Americans, expects to have his team back at full strength for the opening against the world champion Black Hawks at Chicago Thursday. Maybe he'll need all hands, too, for the Star-Shirts haven't been able to win a single game in a series of six Wheat League exhibitions with New York Rangers.

Rangers finished out the string with a 4-3 overtime win last night at Winnipeg. Clint Smith scored twice for the winners and it was a big night for the Jacksons as Art, brother of Harvey, got two goals for Americans. Lorne Carr, right wingman, has played in only one of six games but Dutton hopes to have him available at Chicago. Joe Jerwa will be on the defence despite a toe injury.

Rangers Go to Town

Rangers outscored their intra-Manhattan foes 31-13 in sweeping the series, taking the Saskatoon stand by 7-0. Cecil Dillon and Alex Shibicky were the only Ranger casualties of the tour and both played last night.

An old addict at conservative statements, manager Cecil Hart admitted yesterday that Montreal Canadiens "went a little better" in defeating Springfield of the International-American league 7-1 at Shawinigan Falls, Que., Sunday. If the Habitants double that score on Springfield in their exhibition at Quebec tonight, Hart probably will admit they are starting to look good.

Ronnie Hudson, forward who came to Detroit Red Wings in 1935 as one of the season's finds, will be released soon to a minor league club, officials said today. Hudson's trouble has been inability to play consistently clever hockey. Noe yet 26, he still has a chance to get back to the big tent.

Normie Smith, Red Wings' bouncing little goalie, thinks the rule-makers were conspiring against him when they decreed this year that the netminder may not toss the puck among the spectators. The trick was so great a favorite of Smith's he was thinking of trying for a patent on it.

As expected, Chicago Black Hawks will bank on the best of their 1937-38 lineup and four former Montrealers, Joffree Desilets from Canadiens and Baldy Northcott, Earl Robinson and Russ Blinco from the defunct Maroons. They have sent to Providence of the Int-Am three youngsters, Ab Demarco, Harold Besler. Demarco and Jackson are on loan for the season and Besler who led the Pacific Coast league in scoring with Oregon last winter, is subject to immediate recall.

Jacobs Predicts $100,000 Gate At Fight

By Alan Randal
(Canadian Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 (C.P.). — All things considered, this Henry Armstrong's quite a fighting man, a fact which might account no little for recent talk of his looking none too good the past few days getting ready to meet Ceferino Garcia tomorrow night in the first defence of his welterweight crown.

It does the gate no harm to have such a battler as the Dusky Hammerer appear a little off form before the call to arms and nobody knows it better than Uncle Michael Straus Jacobs, the man behind the 15-round Garcia-Armstrong fuss.

Promoter Jacobs, meantime, is predicting a gate of $100,000 or thereabouts which means Madison Square Garden won't have much unoccupied space with some 18,000 fans in the pews.

The boys finished their training yesterday and will confine to-day's didoes to lumbering up exercises. Armstrong looked a mite perkier in his last workout than he has for the past two days, as he sharpened his defences against Garcia's much publicized "bolo punch."

With Chalky Wright doing his best to imitate the Garcia weapon —he tossed a high right uppercut with a hooking motion—Armstrong practised rushing in close and slipping under it. Garcia contented himself with exercises.

In some spots Armstrong was the 7 to 5 choice. Elsewhere the odds remained at 6 to 5 and take your choice which was quite a change from the earlier odds which heavily favored the Filipino on the general belief a good big man could beat a good little man even if the little man is champion. Garcia will come in around 147 pounds with Henry at 136.

Hockey Players For Sale

ALLAN SHIELDS

GUS MARKER

DAVE TROTTIER

Much-to-do was made when Montreal Maroons faded from the National Hockey League scene, and most of the players peddled off to the other teams in the circuit. But not all the remnant of the "big red team" found immediate berths with their former foes, and the three presented here are still indulging in practice at Montreal's Forum, awaiting purchasers. Marker can take care of right wing chores in good style, Shields plays defence and is one of the N.H.L.'s ace "bad men," and Trottier is a left winger. Need any hockey players in your home?

Oshawa Teams Hold Workout

OSHAWA, Nov. 1. — Oshawa's three hockey teams had their initial ice workout last night under the supervision of Coach Tracy Shaw, and when the three-hour session was over prospects of Junior "A" and Junior "B" championship contenders appeared very bright. Only 14 candidates were in evidence for the senior squad, and a fair opinion of their ultimate ability could not be formed, as obviously a number of the players were not of senior calibre.

Last night's senior candidates included only two defencemen, Doug Maundrell and Bill Morrison, while Glen Salter, who, it is expected, will again guard the nets, was an absentee. It is believed that "Doc" Rowden and Scotty McAlpine will turn out later in the week for defence duty.

On the forward lines Lex Chisholm, Roy Covert, "Winkie" Smith, Jerry Cooper, Patton and Bill Hastie, all members of last year's team, were present. Of the newcomers, "Doc" Dafoe and Red Krantz of last season's Memorial Cup team, Cliff Maundrell and Regina Tisdale were the most prominent. A number of city industrial players also worked out.

Missing were Jack McEwan, who has left for Montreal, but is expected back; Chief Jamieson, who will play for Holzbaugh Fords, Detroit; and Ab Barnes, who is playing with Quebec Aces this season. Owing to no goal-tending candidate appearing Max McCuaig of the General Motors Hockey League and Les Colvin of Oshawa Juniors filled in.

Shoots House Fly Nine Out Of Ten

What at first sounds like the most prodigious shooting feat of all time, the hitting of a house fly on the wing nine times out of ten, was accomplished at Monte Carlo in 1890 by a German-American dentist, well-known in international shooting circles. The feat was performed with the aid of a special gun and apparatus which the dentist had invented for practising trapshooting indoors. A miniature trap containing a fly was placed on a table at one end of which the marksman took up his stance with his unique gun, an ordinary double-barrelled shot gun except for the diminutive barrels, each one decimetre long with a bore the size of a goose quill. The secret of the trick lay in the pair of magnifying glasses worn by the marksman, which made the released housefly look the size of a partridge at a distance of four or five yards. Hitting the fly at this and lesser ranges was a comparatively simple business according to a writer in The Gazette of that date, who saw the Monte Carlo demonstration of what he called "tir mouche." Several matches were shot, he reported, the inventor hitting nine out of ten flies on several occasions.

Try Them All

During the course of some sixty years of trapshooting, "tir mouche" is about the only variety of sport in which Canadian marksmen have had no experience. They have shot at live bird targets, at glass balls stuffed with feathers and they have mastered all kinds of clay targets and become adept at the newer form of trapshooting called skeet, but they have never tried "tir mouche." The Gazette correspondent spoiled the chances of the diminutive variety being introduced to the Dominion by hinting to an interested Toronto manufacturer, who witnessed the Monte Carlo demonstration, that should the Anti-trap Bill which Parliament was considering at that time become law, the shooting of any living thing released from a trap would be prohibited.

The early history of pigeon shooting in Canada is either buried with its first devotees or remains as a somewhat hazy and localized recollection of anecdotes, colorful personalities and outstanding matches in the heads of octogenarians or as a faded set of press clippings. From such sources the Toronto Gun Club, which was flourishing in 1881 with one hundred and fifty members, appears to have been one of the earliest pigeon shooting clubs in the Dominion. The date is a significant one in the development of trapshooting, for that year clay-pigeons were used for the first time in Upper Canada. Mr. J. L. Rawbone, a member of the Toronto Club, imported a couple of barrels of them from St. Louis to replace the live birds which were being used

At Woodbine

The club's first clay-pigeon shoot was held out at the Woodbine Race Track, where W. McDowell, a leading shot of the time, won high-gun honors. The shoot led to a good deal of controversy as to the advantages of the new target, the majority of members favouring the live bird. McDowell, however, saw possibilities for the new style target and put most of his spare-time energies into winning an acceptance for it. This was not difficult as public opinion was already discouraging the use of live targets, even though most clubs retained the services of a veterinary surgeon. McDowell persevered and in 1883 there was enough interest in the clay-target for the first large-scale shoot to be held. Forty-seven competitors travelled by sleigh to the grounds behind the John Alcott Hotel, which at that time lay several miles outside the city of Toronto, and from then on clay-pigeon shooting became a recognized form of trapshooting. It was some years, however, before the use of live targets died out completely, and for a short time an attempt was made to substitute glass balls stuffed with feathers for the clay-targets.

Cobourg "Galloping Ghosts" Pace Kingston And Trenton In Intermediate Scramble

TORONTO, Nov. 1.—(CP). —All the scrambling in the Ontario Rugby Football Union is not confined to the Senior series. The Intermediate and Junior teams have a few dog-fights of their own.

With the season half over, Sarnia lead Stratford by two points in the Western Intermediate group. Down East, Cobourg's "Galloping Ghosts" are out in front, just two points ahead of Kingston Garrison and Trenton's Fliers.

In the Junior series, Sarnia, Welland and Queen's University boast undefeated records in their respective groups, but in a fourth group, Woodstock and Toronto Malvern Grads are tied with four points each.

Sarnia held Stratford to a 1-1 tie at Stratford Saturday and prevented the Nationals from going into a first place deadlock. Wallaceburg, the third team in the group, have lost both their games.

In winning three straight, Cobourg have scored 69 points to 18 marked up by their opposition. While Trenton Fliers are tied with Kingston behind the leaders with four points each, the Soldiers have a game in hand. Belleville, the other team in the group, have dropped all four games to date.

The teams finishing first in each group will play-off for the "A" title while the second place teams battle for "B" honors. Dundas, winner of the "A" championship, withdrew from the league this season and Cobourg, the "B" titlists are in a fair way to succeed them.

In the extreme western end of the province Sarnia have beaten Windsor, their only opposition, twice to date and need only one more victory to qualify for the playdowns.

Although tied with Woodstock for the leadership in their group, Toronto Malvern Grads have a better scoring record, marshalling 33 points for the eight scored against them. Woodstocks' record is 23 for and 21 against. Kitchener, the third team, have yet to win a game in three played.

In a well-balanced Niagara Peninsula group, Welland have established themselves as one of the heaviest scoring teams in the minor series. In winning four straight, the Clippers amassed 76 points and yielded only 12. Thorold, with two victories and two defeats, are second and Fort Erie and St. Catharines Bulldogs are tied for third with two points each.

In the Kingston City League, the winner of which qualifies for the O.R.F.U. playdowns, Queens have shown a decided superiority over Royal Military College and Regiopolls College. Tricolor scored 53 points and held their rivals to five, while chalking up three straight victories. R.M.C. are second with one victory and one defeat while Regiopolls have lost all three games.

As in the intermediate series, the group winners meet for the title and the second-place teams play for the "B" championship. Woodstock and Windsor were respective title-winners last year.

Challenger

Three times amateur badminton champion of Canada, Doug Grant, ABOVE, now of Winnipeg, has issued a challenge to Jack Purcell, of Toronto, for his world's professional title. Grant took the dominion crown in 1933 '34 and '36, but has been out of championship competition since winning two years ago. Because of the challenger's recent inactivity, Purcell said he did not think the time was ripe for a match.

Olympic Tickets In Great Demand

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Nov. 1.— (CP-Reuters) — Demand for tickets for the Olympic games to be held here in 1940 has been so great that a sell out is anticipated by J. W. Rangall, president of the Olympic organizing committee.

Bookings are being received daily, the majority of them coming from Great Britain, the United States, Sweden and Germany. The price of tickets for the Stadium, where the track and field events will be decided, range from about 30 cents to $4.50. Tickets for the other various events, such as boxing, wrestling, swimming and football will be cheaper, ranging from 25 cents to $1. The actual sale of tickets to foreign buyers will probably begin early next year.

Race Officials Silent On Jockey Ring

TORONTO, Nov. 1 (C.P.). — Reports on an alleged "jockeys' ring" and doping of horses likely will be considered by the incorporated Canadian Racing Associations some time this month, it was learned to-day.

At an association meeting here yesterday, the reports were tables, but no action was taken and no statement regarding probable action was made after the closed session. It is possible the next meeting will be held in a week or more.

A. E. Dyment, the president, will negotiate with a group of men to act as officials at all Ontario race meetings next year. The following likely will be approved at the next meeting: Steward representing the I.C.R.A., W. A. Hewitt; racing secretary, Patrick C. Galliger; clerk of the scales, Johnny Farrell; Patrol judge, William Kelly; starter, Thomas (Nipper) Rowe.

from the Prince of Wales Rangers. Members of the old Prince of Wales Dragoons were fittingly present, for in his days of active service Col. Miller had been a cavalry man. Veterans of the World War were present to say farewell to one who had also seen battle.

Service Keynoted Life

Service to his King, service to his community, and service to his God, marked the life of the noble old soldier, Rev. Canon J. D. Paterson declared in his address at the service in George Street United church. Rev. M. C. Parr read the scripture lesson and led in prayers. The auditorium was filled to capacity with hundreds of friends and relatives and flowers were piled high about the bier.

"He was an esteemed citizens of this city, a member of many of our fraternal organizations, and a man whom we individually knew as a friend," declared Canon Paterson. He told members of Col. Miller's immediate family that he had left them a great heritage in his name, and in a long life filled to its fullest possible extent. "It is almost incredible that one man should have seen as much as he did, should have done as much as he did, should have served as much as he did." The sense of adventure that so characterized the life he led was the same sense that led pioneers to establish themselves in this country, and was one of the highest qualities a man could have, was his opinion.

"He was an adventurer first but an adventurer who offered to his country the trues and noblest service in that place in which he was best able to serve. Certainly I think the best single keynote in his life lies in the one word, service."

Served His Community

When his days of fighting were over and he laid down his arms, he still found a means of being of service to his community, by his efforts in the city council and the board of education, recounted Canon Paterson. In fraternal organizations—the Kiwanis Club, the Loyal Orange Lodge, and the Independent Order of Foresters—he was prominent, and he was a man strong in fellowship, he said. In his church, too, he served, acting as a Sunday School teacher for many years.

"There are few like him in our midst today. We shall remember him with fondness and respect."

At the conclusion of the service, while the organ played the Dead March in Saul, the entire congregation stood reverently in homage to the veteran of so many years ago.

Honorary pall bearers from military life were: Lt.-Col. A. Stevenson, Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Lt.-Col. W. Gordon Hall, V.D., Lt.-Col. M. H. Park, V.D., Lt-Col H. A. Morrow, Lt.-Col. C. H. Stuart, Lt.-Col. C. H. Ackerman, Lt.-Col. T. D. Johnston, Lt.-Col. G. G. Winterbottom, M.C., D.C.M., Lt.-Col. R. E. Birdsall, Lt.-Col. F. Bradburn, Major T. Hounsell, Major James Turnbull, Major George Melton, Major Alan McNab, Major G. R. Scott, Major H. Mason, Captain Gordon Monkman, M.C., Captain Ralph C. Honey, Captain D. A. Loomis, M.C., and Messrs. E. F. Mason, William Langford, R. L. Davidson, and Graeme Falkner. Lt.Col. J. A. Dewart, M.C., represented the Brigade and Major R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, M.C., the Prince of Wales Rangers. Included among the honorary pall bearers were six former commanding officer of the 57th Battalion. They were Lt.-Col. A. Stevenson, Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Lt.-Col. F. Bradburn, Lt.-Col. W. Gordon Hall, Lt.Col. M. H. Park, and Lt.-Col. G. G. Winterbottom.

Representing the Independent Order of Foresters were W. F. Green, G. A. Gillespie, and C. H. Huffman. The Loyal Orange Lodge was represented by Bert Lockington, John Edgar, Charles E. Wiley. Pall bearers were Privates Londerville, Carpenter, Trenum, Brooks, Weir, and Stanley.

Had No Interest

specific part in negotiations, Mr. Plaxton testified.

No Financial Interest.

To direct questions from Col Ralston, Mr. Plaxton declared he had never at any time had any financial interest in the Inglis organization, never had any promise of any financial advantages nor any hope beyond that of facilitating employment in his riding.

Gordon and Herbert Plaxton, brothers of the member, conducting a law firm in Toronto from which Hugh withdrew when he was elected to Parliament in 1935, were associates of Major Hahn in reorganizing the Inglis plant. Hugh Plaxton said he had not drawn any money from the law firm since his retirement except small amounts on account of work he had performed before his withdrawal. Under examination by Col. Drew, Hugh Plaxton said he had not kept any account books since his retirement from the firm and said his parliamentary duties took so much of his time that his legal business was small.

Col. Drew brought in the name of another member of the Plaxton faimly, C. P. Plaxton, chief counsel in the Department of Justice. He asked Hugh if this brother was with him when he visited Canada House with Major Hahn in November, 1936. The witness said his brother was in London at the time on departmental business, but he could not recall whether or not he was at Canada House at the same time.

On his trip to England with Major Hahn, the witness said he paid his own hotel bills and all expenses, but drew from the Inglis interests a total of $1,250, which was not sufficient to pay his out-of-pocket expenses. He had given his time free because of his interest in getting the plant into operation and because he welcomed the opportunity for a trip abroad.

4,000 Pheasants Shot

PELEE ISLAND.—Four thousand pheasants fell before 1,300 hunters during the four days of hunting here this year, game officials said today. Gunners had difficulty during both shoots at getting close enough to the birds because of the heavy growth.

Dear Jumps On Car

LINDSAY.—When a large deer hitch-hiked a ride on Walter Breaws' car last night, it ended fatally—for the deer. The Kinmount man was returning to his home when a deer jumped from the side of the road and landed on the fender and hood of his car, suffering a broken back.

John S. Adair Dies Suddenly During Night

The sudden death of John S. Adair, popular young Peterborough osteopath, at his home at 521 Homewood avenue last night, shocked the entire city to-day.

Practically a life-long resident of this city, the 31-year-old man had been in practice here since 1932, after graduation from the College of Osteopathy in Chicago. His office is located in the Sun Life Building at the corner of Hunter and Water streets.

He went to his home last night in seemingly good health and started to work at minor alterations. He and his mother, Mrs. A. P. Adair, had recently moved from the upstairs apartment of their home to the lower apartment, and he was remodelling parts of it in his spare time. About 11 o'clock he complained of a pain in his chest and said he was going to lie down for awhile.

He undressed and went to bed and some time later his mother heard him call out. She went to his room and he was dead.

He was the son of Mrs. A. P. Adair, with whom he made his home, and the late C. B. Adair. Born in Collingwood, he came to this city when he was only a year old. Besides his mother, one brother, Ralph Adair, B.Sc., a mining engineer in British Columbia, survives.

Popular Young Man.

A thoroughly popular young man, he was active in many phases of this city's life. He was a charter member of the Lion's club and from his earliest years had been associated with the Y.M.C.A. A member of George Street United church, he taught Sunday school there for some time.

"Jack Adair was one of the most conscientious members of our club and a close friend to all of us," said Fred Cripps, president of the Lion's club. "We will feel his loss more deeply than I can say. In all our enterprises he was a man to be counted upon to do more than his share of the work, and do it eagerly and efficiently."

G. H. Roper, general secertary of the Y.M.C.A., was shocked to hear of Mr. Adair's death. "He was practically a life-long member of the Y.M.C.A., and was active in many of its branches," he said. "He took a keen interest in the Friday Night Supper club for many years, and was for some time vice-chairman of that organization. His death is a great shock to me personally and the Y.M.C.A. will miss him."

Quiet and Unassuming.

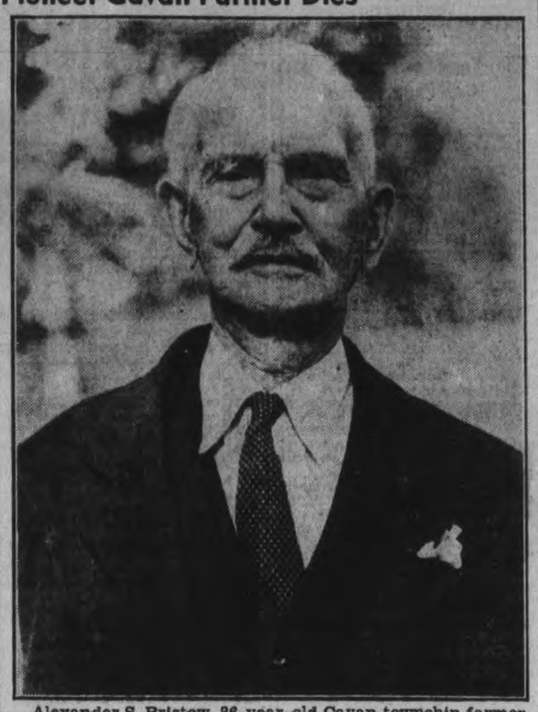
"It was with a deep sense of regret that I learned of the sudden passing of a real friend, Dr. Jack Adair," said his pastor, Rev. M. C. Parr. "I not hnly had come in contact with him as a member of George Street church but in a more direct way when he became president of a young adult organization known as the Second Quarter Club. He was one of many others who was trying to interest those between the ages of 25 and 50 years in the work of the church.

"Jack was quiet and very unassuming, one would say rather deep. He loved a good book and in an address given on comparative religion to the Second Quarter club during the last year he indicated that he had read widely and a great variety of the better books.

"He was interested in boys' work and for some time taught in the George Street Sunday school. Talking with him, one was impressed with his many interests and the high ideals which characterized his living."

The remains will rest at the Comstock Funeral Home until eleven o'clock on Wednesday morning when they will be taken to George Street United Church with the funeral service being held at two o'clock.

Pioneer Cavan Farmer Dies



Alexander S. Bristow, 86-year-old Cavan township farmer, who died in Peterborough this morning. A vigorous man for his age, he could recall that in the days of his youth he had used the flail and the cradle in threshing. For the past ten years he lived in Peterborough, was a familiar figure downtown, where he walked to keep fit.

Main Street Topics

Jabs and Jottings as Picked Up By Examiner Reporters.

BANK CLEARINGS.

Peterborough's bank clearings for the month of October reached a total of $2,737,000, it is stated officially to-day.

LEAKY PIPES

Repairing the water main in front of the Canton Cafe on George street is getting to be a habit. Today workmen were busily engaged digging down through pavement and earth to locate a leak, and passersby recall that this was done a little over a month ago, and also once before within a one year period.

LOWEST BIRTH RATE

Vital statistics for the month of October reveal that the number of births for the month was 47 and the lowest for any month so far in 1938. There were 35 deaths, the same number as October a year ago, and 25 couples took their marriage vows. This was an increase of four over October in 1937 and shows that 1938 will come close to establishing a record for the number of marriages.

AN EXPLANATION.

The omission of a couple of words in a police court report Monday might make it appear that a blow had been struck by the complainant Wilson Webb, whereas the police court proceedings showed that the only striking had been done by the accused, George Hutchinson. Incidentally it should be stated that this George Hutchinson is not the George Hutchinson of Cassan and Hutchinson.

OFFICER IN CHARGE.

Announcement that Lieut-Colonel J. A. Dewart, M.C., has relinquished the appointment as officer in charge of the Armoury here, with effect from to-day, was made in district orders by Major-General C. F. Constantine, D.S.O., in command of Military District No. 3. His post has been taken over by Major R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, M.C. The change does not bring with it any change in the command of the Prince of Wales Rangers.

CREEKS FROZEN.

Lakefield residents report that water in pails outside and creeks near the village had a thin layer of ice this morning, the first so far this year, and a warning to motorists to watch their radiators. Fog was dense on all highways leading to the city this morning and traffic was slowed down considerably. Even in the city the blanket of fog was heavy and motorists travelled slowly with headlights burning.

"GOBOLINS" WERE GOOD

Disappointment touched lightly the little "gob-o-lins" Monday night. Several citizens mentioned today that after their supplies of candy and apples had been passed out, and other children arrived later to be greeted with "all gone," invariably their answer was "thanks just the same" or "okay," and expressions regretting that at some houses they weren't early birds. This disposition applied particularly to the children of from four to eight years.

TAG DAY RECEIPTS

With some pledges still unredeemed, the Children's Aid Society Tag Day receipts and subscriptions have reached a total of $1263, Miss Rachel Young, superintendent of the local branch states. This is a gratifying increase over last year's total of $901.

JUDGMENT RESERVED

Magistrate Langley had reserved judgment in a charge against Arnold Nussey, 82 McDonnel street, of illegally possessing liquor, until this morning but as Nussey's lawyer, H. R. Rose, of Toronto was unable to be present today, delivering of judgment was postponed until next Monday.

LAWYER ABSENT

Because her lawyer H. R. Rose of Toronto could not come to Peterborough today, two charges against Mrs. Max Vincent of illegally selling liquor and illegally keeping liquor for sale were adjourned until next Monday at her request. Crown Attorney McElderry explained that Mr. Rose had telephoned from Toronto explaining his position.

CUSTOMS TOTALS DOWN

October receipts at the Customs House took a dive this month and the total of $185,606.74 is $57,480.14 less than a year ago for the same month. September of 1938 showed a total of $197,742.73, almost $12,000 more. The total was made up of: Import duty, $78,493.97; excise tax, $107,003.77 and sundry collections, $109.00.

FENCES TOPPLED

Fences in the city took a beating last night as roving youths vented their energy on wooden picket fences and other objects that could be moved. Dr. Thomas Johnston, Humane Society Inspector reports that his fence kissed the ground after a terrific battering from a passing gang. At the foot of Sheridan street another fence in front of Charley Holland's home also collapsed from gentle pushing of several husky boys.

Kinsmen Carnival Held At Gardens

A gay throng crowded the Brock Street Summer Gardens last night for the annual Hallowe'en Frolic of the Kinsmen Club but officials estimated the total was not more than half of last year's crowd.

Fully 98 per cent of those attending were from the city and the six major prizes went to city people. Mrs. Hy Woods took first prize for the best fancy costume and Miss Margaret Breckenridge was second. Bob Paris and Jack Watson won the awards for gent's fancy costumes. In the comic section, Harry Yeates and John Laidley were placed in that order. Prizes this year were cash.

Gerry Wooll's orchestra provided the music and the dance floor was well patronized, but the games between the main entrance and the dance did not get much attention. Jim Wherry, Walker Jones, George Nicholls and Miss Muriel Hooten were the judges, and Kinsmen who headed committees for the affair were Don Scott, Alex Sollitt, Ken Smylie, Mac MacDonald, Howard Shimer, Ed Riley and Dave Hubbert.

The money raised by the Kinsmen Club at the annual frolic is used to finance eye clinic work among school children and other underprivileged children whose parents are unable to pay for proper eye treatment.

Imperial Army Veteran Receives Medals After Waiting 20 Years

FOR TWENTY YEARS J. W. Morris, 223 George street, formerly a private in the 3rd Battalion, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, an Imperial unit has been waiting for the War Office to send him, his service medals, the British War Medal and the Victory Medal.

Percy King, secretary of the Peterborough Branch of the British Imperial Comrades Association has made repeated efforts to obtain the medals, which are prized by the majority of the soldiers, and this morning they arrived from the Under Secretary of State, War Office London. Mr. King intends to hand the medals over to Mrs. Morris today, as her husband is at present confined to a hospital.

Alex S. Bristow Dies At Home On Burnham Street

The death of Alexander S. Bristow, for more than half a century a farmer in Cavan township, occurred at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Mabel Winslow, at 318 Burnham street, this morning. He was in his 86th year.

Born in Surrey, England, he was a son of the late Thomas Bristow and Elizabeth Lucas. He came to Canada as a young man 66 years ago, settling in Cavan on the 4th Line. He married Anna Lang, who predeceased him 13 years ago. To them were born thirteen children nine of whom are still living. They are as follows: seven daughters, Mrs. George Todd of Toronto, Mrs. Wesley McMahon of Burchill, Saskatchewan, Mrs. Ed. Boyler of Peterborough, Mrs. Harry Blue of North Bay, Mrs. Mabel Winslow of Peterborough, Mrs. Norman Dunbar of Peterborough, and Mrs. Lewis Lebarr, Jr., of Peterborough; and two sons, William H. Bristow of Cavan and Leslie M. Bristow of Peterborough.

Took Walk Every Day

For the past ten years except for short periods, Mr. Bristow has lived with his daughter, Mrs. Winslow. He kept fit by walking and almost every day he crossed Hunter street bridge to the business section and back home. An inveterate reader, he kept abreast of the times by reading the daily newspaper thoroughly, without even use of glasses. He took great pleasure in the radio.

A firm believer in farm life, he thought that despite the fact many farmers are going to the cities, he could still have earned a living on a good piece of land if he had been young again. The great advance in farm implement quality made farming now an easy task as compared with the handicaps that existed half a century ago, he once said.

Mr. Bristow was a member of the Salvation Army.

His funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Mabel Winslow, 318 Burnham street, Major Neil Warrander of the Salvation Army officiating. Interment will be at St. Paul's Anglican Church Cemetery, Cavan.

Asks Magistrate To Name Lawyer

Arraigned for the third time in police court this morning on a serious charge involving a female member of his own family, Pierce Nicholson was still not ready this morning to go ahead with his trial.

"I haven't been able to get a lawyer," he told Magistrate Langley "and I want to apply to the court for one."

"The court has no power to provide a lawyer for you," the magistrate informed him.

"I was told to ask the crown for one," replied Nicholson.

"The crown has no money to engage counsel for you," Magistrate Langley stated.

Finally Nicholson who has not yet been asked to plead on the charge elected to be tried by judge and jury and a remand was ordered until Tuesday, November 8, when the magistrate intimated the preliminary hearing must go on.

Girl Is Showing Definite Signs Of Recovering

Myrtle Irwin, 19-year-old Emily Township girl who was shot in the neck with a .22 rifle by her estranged sweetheart on Sunday night, was reported this morning to have had a good night, and to be showing definite signs of recovery.

The bullet which was fired through the kitchen window of the girl's farm home two miles north of Fowler's Corners, struck the girl behind the left ear, between the mastoid bone and the point of the jaw.

Dr. Earle of Omemee, after examining the injury by x-ray on Monday decided it would be the wiser plan to leave the small leaden pellet in the girl's neck. "It would do more harm extracting it, than the bullet itself made going in," he said.

Leonard Bacon, 24-year-old Ops Township farm hand and native of Lindsay, who is alleged to have fired the shot, later committed suicide at the home of his sister in Lindsay, by placing the barrel of the .22 rifle in his mouth and pulling the trigger. He died instantly before Constable Reeves, who was knocking at the front door of the house, could reach him.

The story as related by the girl's parents was that Myrtle Irwin and Bacon had gone together for two years until last July 12 when they had a quarrel and separated. They had not seen each other since that time. Bacon evidently still loved the girl and brooded over the separation until Sunday night when he apparently decided to end it all. Myrtle was sitting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Irwin and six sisters and brothers in the kitchen of the farmhouse when the glass was splintered by a .22 bullet, and Myrtle fell to the floor wounded.

Rumors are rampant in the district to-day, and one in particular indicates the young couple quarrelled because of a story told by a woman in the district. This tale is said to be substantiated by a note found on Bacon after his death.

Second Offender Is Given Month

Pleading guilty as a second offender under the Liquor Control Act, William Saunders, 27, a Sault Ste. Marie Indian, was sentenced by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C. in police court this morning to a fine of $50 and $3 or a month in jail. He intimated that he would take the latter.

Saunders was convicted here exactly nine months ago, on February 1, of being drunk and admitted the fact so that he had to be treated as a second offender.

On another charge of assaulting two men who had been in the police station during last night as lodgers Saunders also pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 10 days in jail, the sentence to commence at the end of the month imposed on the other case.

Chief Constable Newhall told the Magistrate that Saunders had been creating a disturbance on Water street and after being arrested had caused trouble in the cells by assaulting the two lodgers.

"I don't remember anything about that," Saunders stated before sentence was passed on him.

Transients Blamed For Fire In Barn

Possibility that transients had set fire to a barn at 515 Parnell street, early this morning, was suggested by Fire Chief George Gimblett. The barn, owned by Carmen Asta, and located at the rear of his house, was burned to the ground.

The call came into the Fire Department at 6.16 o'clock this morning and when fire fighters arrived on the scene they found it to be a mass of flames and they were unable to do other than check its spread. The barn had been empty and the door wide open, so that transients might have gained access easily, Chief Gimblett said. He estimated the loss at about $75.

Woman Recalls Passing Mexican Money After Reading News Item In Examiner

A news item in Monday's Examiner brought joy and some profit to one main street store this morning and loss and grief to another. In its effect it was an advertisement, although it appeared in the Main Street column, and its brightest reflection was the honesty of some persons as contrasted with the dishonesty of others. The nugget of news related that a George street fruit store had taken in a Mexican five dollar bill in the rush of business Saturday night, for a small purchase, and received only twenty cents for it at the bank Monday morning.

A clerk in Northam's bakery reading the item concluded that the almost worthless Mexican bill must have been the one with which she had made a purchase at the fruit store Saturday night. She had been asked to do so by the proprietor, and simply took the bill out of the register without scrutinizing it, although she remembered that it wasn't of Canadian currency. But, they handle American money and sometimes French bills, and at the time it escaped suspicion. The little transaction was entirely innocent because the bill had been taken at Northam's for the purchase of some of their cakes.

Mrs. Northam decided imemdiately on reading the item that there was nothing else she could do but send the young clerk back to the fruit store this morning with a Canadian five dollar bill, And the ultimate result was that Northam's were the victims of the original deal instead of the fruit store, and somebody has five dollars that were simply stolen if the worthlessness of the bill was known to them when they bought goods at the bakery.

Hallowe'en Pranksters Build Barricade Across Highway

Although fifty-three calls were received by the police department between 7 o'clock and midnight Monday night, the majority of them complaining about undue activity on the part of Hallowe'en revellers, the celebration passed without a great deal of property damage reported and there were no arrests.

The nearest thing to it was when two boys were brought into the police station early in the evening because it was alleged they had started to roll garbage cans down an East City street. The youngsters were turned loose again at 10 o'clock.

All the city police were on duty, reinforced by the provincial traffic officers, and a number of specials and while they were busy investigating complaints in all parts of the city most of these proved to be not serious in nature.

The most dangerous prank was removing a couple of manhole covers, leaving an accident hazard. On Highway No. 7A near Monaghan Road a barricade was built across the road composed of corn stooks which had to be removed by the police and at another point a number of large stones had been placed on the highway. Fences here and there were torn down and wooden steps moved from their usual position while the city's tourist sign at George and Lansdowne streets was pushed over. Revellers took a boat trailer from the rear of the Johnston store at McDonnel and George street and the owner afterward located it on top of the hill on Park Hill Road.

This Was a New One

On Charlotte street a number of youngsters pulled a new one by stretching a strip of wallpaper across the road. Some motorists plowed right through but occasionally a cautious driver slammed on his brakes and pulled his machine to a halt and then the plotters had their laugh.

Citizens who put their garbage cans and ash receptacles out Monday night paid for their lack of thought by having the contaners pushed over and their contents scattered.

It looked as if every child in Peterborough was out in Hallowe'en masquerade engaged in the profitable game of "Shell-out" for houses in all parts of the city were repeatedly visited by the young folk who took toll in the form of candy and apples.

The beverage rooms apparently did better than average business and the dance spots were crowded with revellers. Costumed folk wandered around the down town streets until an early hour this morning and there was plenty of noise and occasionally some music but very little damage done.

Expecting 300 At Cheese Board Dinner

The executive of the Campbellford Cheese Board expect more than three hundred men and women at their dinner Saturday night. At the last week-end one hundred and sixty-eight tickets had been sold, and apparently the affair promises to be one of the most notable dairy assemblies in this district in many years.

R. H. Mayberry, vice-president of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association, will be the chief speaker. He was a delegate to the Empire Trade Conference last spring. George Elliott of Norwood, president of the Peterborough County Cheese Patrons, told the Examiner to-day he is hoping for a large delegation from this area of the district whose cheese is sold on the Campbellford Board. Those who expect to go should arrange for tickets as early as possible.

Alex Elliott, M.P.P., will have as his guests the president and the cheese makers of each of the two leading factories in Peterborough county, and their wives. The two top factories on October 20 were Selwyn and Trent Bridge. Harold A. Carr, M.P.P., Campbellford, is inviting to the dinner the entire executive of the highest scoring factory in Northumberland county. W. A. Fraser, M.P., is giving a silver cup to the outstanding cheese maker in Northumberland, and J. J. Duffus, M.P., is providing the same reward for the best Peterborough cheese maker. These trophies are to be competed for annually, and are part of the promotional plans of the Patrons toward the advancement of their industry. Rork Ferguson, M.P., is expected to attend the dinner, and is also taking along leading cheese makers in the eastern section of the Peterborough area.

Harold Woods is president of the Campbellford Board on which he represents the Trent Bridge factory. The dinner will be 7.30 p.m. in the Masonic Hall at Campbellford.

Boat House Fire At Young's Point

Provincial Constable David Silvester was in Young's Point this morning investigating the fire which destroyed a portion of the boat house owned by F. Young of that village on Monday night. The blaze, obviously of incendiary origin burned a considerable portion of the roof of the structure but was fortunately discovered in time to permit saving the building from being totally destroyed. The flames were extinguished with buckets of water.

Constable Silvester stated that the fire might easily have caused a lot of damage by spreading to other buildings nearby and he is determined to find if possible, and prosecute the guilty parties.

J. J. McFadden 20 Years At Lakefield Lock

J. J. McFadden is to-day celebrating the twentieth anniversary of his commencing his duties as lockmaster at Lakefield. It was on November 1, 1918, that he took over the post, after returning from overseas, and he has carried on ever since, although at present he is confined to his home through illness.

Mr. McFadden has come in contact with a lot of people who have used the lock in the last two decades and has made a host of friends, as the cards and presents he receives during the Christmas season from folk in the United States and Canada show.

The lockmaster says he looks forward every year to meeting these friends on their annual summer trip. It is a pleasure, he says, to do little favors for such people, outside altogether of the regular duties of the position.

When asked about the other class, the cranky type, Mr. McFadden says that while they are given the same service because they are entitled to it, it is not given with the same spirit.

Easy to Forget.

"You forget those fellows after you lock them through," said Mr. McFadden, "they just disappear from your memory."

"You are bound to get such people occasionally. For instance, I have got out of bed at all hours to lock folk through who said they wanted to get an early start, and yet you would find them still around the lock at 10 o'clock the next morning."

Mr. McFadden, whose home was in Lakefield, enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion, and was connected with the military police in Peterborough and afterward in England. He went to France in the first draft to join the 5th C.M.R.'s, and was serving with that unit when he was wounded and invalided back to Canada. For some time he was a patient in the Kingston Military Hospital, and after being discharged from that institution was appointed to his present position.

During his twenty years on duty at the Lakefield Lock he has seen a Government dam, two bridges, and the Cement Company power house built, and in all these operations his services were required in maintaining water levels.

Transient Is Given Three Days In Jail

After he had pleaded guilty to begging Ralph Granger, a transient, whose home is in Fort William, told Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning that he had begged because he was hungry and wanted something to eat.

"This man says he was hungry," he remarked, "yet this morning when he called at a house in the west end and was offered sandwiches he refused to take them because he said he wanted something better and he grew abusive.

Granger told the magistrate that he was on his way to Ottawa looking for work and said that he had visited the Chatham and Wallaceburg district hoping to get employment picking sugar beets but was unsuccessful and then he had tried to get a job picking apples in the Meaford area but had the same luck there.

"Not many apples?" queried the Magistrate.

CHAPTER 36

"I HAVE ASKED a certain party to meet me here," Ronald explained to Judy when he entered the long, low living room, gay and comfortable with its cushions, flowered chairs, and books and lamps. "Mind if I slip a plain white card over your name on the door bell?"

"No, Ronald." Odd what implicit trust she had in anything this tall man with the unafraid gray eyes might do.

He was under fire. He was being watched. He had asked for the secrecy of her apartment. Why, she did not know and did not think to ask. It was enough that he had come to her, trusted her.

He paused at the top of the stairs, turning back as he spoke slowly.

"You're a real person, Judy Rogers. You may wonder—but you don't ask." For a moment his face was high-lighted with the quickness of the brilliant smile that had flashed when she first knew him.

Then she heard him running down the steps, noted the space of seconds that it took for the transfer of the card, heard him coming back.

She went away then to wander down to Eighth street, cross over to Sixth avenue, and buy Italian bread and some pressed meats and black olives. She hummed softly, throwing her brown head back to let the spring-haunted breeze stir her curly locks. She stopped at a flower vendor's cart and bought red roses.

The elevated rumbled overhead as she walked up the avenue where the weary old trains still follow a noisy steel path through the air. Boys and girls passed, carrying briefcases or portfolios, taking in rapt tones about stories that were "slanted" for this magazine and that, the value of Van Gough's paintings, the portraits that were showing at this gallery or that.

Judy smiled in the violet darkness.

No one mentioned parties unless they were parties where young people, imbued with the spirit of endeavor and creation, would talk and talk of those who had achieved, where they themselves only strived. But so long as one held a cord to the vision, and kept eyes on the distant gleam, life was good.

Judy wanted to fall in step with some of the young people and tell them she belonged. She was their age, but she felt so many years older. She had lived so many more lives in her brief span of years, she explained to her questioning self, and then wondered if after all, she had. What did she know of these other boys and girls?

She saw herself reflected in a plate glass window as she passed. She might have been any school girl with her plaid skirt revealing slim, shapely legs and ankles; her brown hair blowing under the suede beret whose green matched her suede jacket. It was an ensemble she had designed for Cordelli which the great courturier had publicized.

So she came to her own doorway. The lantern lights at either side of the entrance were blinking sleepy eyes. Two people sat on the wide white steps, eating peanuts from a big brown bag.

"Hi, Judy," Bob Cushing said. "Want to join us on the stoop—the peanuts are good— or would you rather ask us up?"

But Ronald Had he finished his business and left? If he hadn't, what would Marjorie and Bob think when they found him upstairs? But she could explain that—she could say that she ran out on an errand.

She wished for an moment that Bob wasn't a newspaper man. If he got wind of the fact that Ronald had met someone here tonight, he might scent news. A good reporter had to be loyal to his sheet. She couldn't ask him to close his eyes. She couldn't explain that whatever happened was all right because, after all, she had only her own faith to support her words.

But Ronald—had he waited?

She slipped her key into the lock. The lamps still shone. The fire crackled. The room was empty.

But pinned to a lamp shade was a note written in large letters that flashed across the room to the three who had entered.

"Thanks for the use of the room, Judy. Sorry I can't wait to see you. RONALD"

There was a studied quietness in the room. Each one of the three people knew that the other two were searching for some word that would restore the easy comradeship of three months ago.

Simultaneously they realized there was no such word. The import of that message, scrawled across a sheet of drawing paper with a stick of black charcoal, had to be faced.

It was then that Bob drew an evening paper from his pocket and tossed it to Judy.

"Have you read this, Judy?"

She took it to the low hassock near the fire and read, the green beret still on her brown curls. When she finished she looked up a little line of worry between her eyes.

"The New York Bar association is investigating? Is that true, Bob?"

He nodded. "Only formality, Judy. Birrell is mighty well liked. Nobody wants him to be guilty."

"Then why do people act as though he is?" persisted Judy tossing the beret across the room where it lay like a green ball on a window seat.

Bob sat down, too, and cracked another peanut. "Nobody wants him to be found guilty as I just told you. Nobody is acting that way. Don't you see, my dear Miss Rogers, that it is just as important to clear him as to convict him?"

"Yes, yes, I suppose it is."

"Now that we've stumbled on a secret, Judy, is there anything you can tell?" the newspaperman continued. "We might help, you know."

It was evident as the old brass and irons on the hearth the brass platter above the fire on the smooth wooden shelf, that Ronald had used the room for a conference. No use denying that. So Judy answered:

"There isn't anything to tell except what you know. Ronald asked to use my room for a little while."

"You didn't see who came, who went out?" Bob was leaning forward, his brows drawn, his eyes narrowed in thought.

"I didn't watch."

"You might have helped. If someone is trying to frame him and he met that man—"

"I never thought!"

The fire began to go down and Bob tossed another log on the low blaze. Marjorie declared she was hungry, took the bundles Judy had brought from the delicatessen, and began to make sandwiches. Bob helped her.

Judy did not move from that hassock. Why hadn't she kept her eyes opened? She could have lurked in the shubbery. She might have helped Ronald. But she had thought of nothing but obeying him—leaving him a free field.

"White or rye bread, Judy?" Marjorie called.

As if anyone cared—when Ronald's honor was at stake! But she answered steadily enough: "Rye, Marg, and no mustard."

Through the screen that mention of Ronald's troubles had thrown across her mind, a new thought presented itself—Marjorie and Bob seemed to know each other pretty well on such a few weeks' acquaintance. Marjorie and Bob—well, why not?

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, November 2.

A rather negative day, as far as business or occupation is concerned, is indicated by the astral operations. Probable anxieties, delays, difficulties or a bereavement seem to afflict the personal life. There are omens of difficulties, vexations, or even financial loss or litigation, which is connected in some manner with writings, documents, or contracts. Be cautious with these. Bad judgment and distorted views may menace, precipitating adverse situations.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves confronted by a year in which a personal affliction or misfortune may upset business calculations or cause bungling or confusion in every day affairs. There is danger of anxiety, vexation, delays and difficulties, even a deep sorrow, and at the same time papers writings, contracts or documents have power to cause loss or litigation. Unsound judgment or exaggerated views may be at the root of this distress, so be careful and conservative, and don't jump at conclusions.

A child born on this day may have a mild, friendly and sympathetic nature, but it may be prone to jump at conclusions, lack clear judgment, and so invite irritating and disagreeable contacts.

DOROTHY DIX

Fathers Should Exercise Extreme Caution When Attempting to Pick Out a Husband for Their Daughters, for Romance Rather Than Practicality Rules Most Girls

DEAR MISS DIX—My complaint is this: I can't make may daughter marry the man I have picked out for her. I have a young girl who is inclined to run around and stay out late, and I think she would be better off married. Now, Miss Dix, I have picked out a promising young business man as a suitable match for this wayward young daughter of mine. He is in the plumbing business, which is a legitimate and honest profession, and I can't see her objecting to him, as he is old enough to be level-headed and keep her in line. But she will not consent and I want your advice on how to make her see that marrying this man is the best thing to do.

MR. H. R. B.

Answer:

I am afraid I cannot help you in this matter. Mr. H. R. B., because I don't believe in parents as matchmakers. If your daughter was thinking of marrying a man whom you knew to be immoral or drunken or lazy and good for nothing, you would be justified in moving heaven and earth to break off the match and save her from the wretchedness that would be sure to be her portion if she had for a husband a sot or a roue or a man who wouldn't support her.

But making a match is an entirely different proposition, for, while you can tell with mathematical exactness the kind of husband that will make a woman miserable, nobody knows the sort of husband that will make her happy.

You see, Mr. H. R. B., the fact that a man is moral and upright, sober, industrious and a good provider doesn't necessarily make him a desirable husband in a woman's eyes. It doesn't make her love him or enjoy being with him. It doesn't fill her days with contentment and make her feel that just being his wife is the finest thing in the world. There has to be something in the man that appeals personally to a woman.

Perhaps she doesn't even know what it is herself, but it is there, and it is something that is stronger than life or death, poverty or riches that makes her willing to work for him, sacrifice for him and stick by him through thick and thin just because he is her man.

That is why no father, no matter how wise and clever he is or how good a judge of men he is, can pick out a husband for his daughter. It is purely a matter of individual taste, and fathers' and daughters' tastes seldom run along the same line. The very qualities that would lead you to choose a particular candidate are the ones that would have no weight with her.

You have practicality on your side. She has romance on hers. You want her to marry a settled, sober man who will boss her. She wants a playmate; somebody of her own age, who will dance with her and run around with her and who will perhaps fight with her, but who will not dream of trying to control her. To ask her to change her demands in a man for yours is as unreasonable as to offer much and milk to one who craves caviar.

Undoubtedly, your man is the safer chance. But if the girl doesn't want him and doesn't like him, if he does not come up to her ideal nor fire her fancy, and if she has no taste for him, how could you expect her to be happy with him? And, after all, isn't it better for the girl to marry the man she wants and the man who pleases her than the one who pleases you? It seems to me that the one who has to live with a husband or a wife has the right to pick him or her out.

• • • • • •

DEAR MISS DIX—I am past 30, considered good-looking have never been in love and have never had a real proposal. I am in the business world, but lead the kind of life so many girls of my type do, socially manless. Dancing is the only thing we miss out on, as our salaries amply supply us with all other amusements My life is full of interests and really quite satisfactory. But I sometimes wonder if I have become old and cynical, and if I am making my independence a fetish. Is there a danger of that?

BACHELOR GIRL.

Answer:

Yes, I think there is a very real danger of the woman who enjoys her independence making a god of it and sacrificing too much to it. We women are likely to run to extremes, you know, and we are a bit crazy now with the joy of having broken the fetters that have bound our sex so long with our first experience of freedom.

It seems so wonderful to us to know that we are standing on our own feet and are independent human beings, free to come and go as we please without asking any man's permission. With our own money that we have earned with our own heads, that we can spend as we like without giving an account to any one, we feel that independence is the greatest thing in the world; that it is better than love, better than husbands or children, better than anything.

. . . . I know more than one woman who has refused to marry the man she really cared for because she loved her liberty better and preferred to go a lonely way through life rather than submit to the shackles that family life would put upon her.

This, I think, is a mistake, for while the wife and mother is the most bound of all women, her bonds are silken fetters. It is true that the woman whose arms are full of babies cannot go where she will as can a single woman, but she finds at home interests and joys that more than compensate her for any pleasure she would find in society or globe-trotting. Sacrifice becomes sweet when made for those we love. The woman who gives her life to her family does not lose it, but finds it.

That is one side of the question. The other is that freedom is a compensation for many of the things that a woman who does not marry loses, and it is good to hear from one woman who has intelligence enough and philosophy enough to realize that no lot is without its drawbacks.

The successful business woman has much to be thankful for and little to grouch over. She is one of the darlings of the gods and has drawn one of the prize packages in life.

By MAX TRELL

"Now," said father when dinner was over, "we'll go out into the garden and look through our new telescope. We'll look at the moon."

The children were delighted. So were the children's shadows, Hanid and Knarf. They all went out into the garden together. There was a fine full moon in the sky.

"I can see the man in the moon without a telescope," Knarf said to Hanid. Neither father nor the children heard the shadow-boy talking. It is very difficult to understand shadow-language, even when you can hear it.

He'll Find Out.

Father was talking about the moon. "You might think that there was a man in the moon, just from looking at it without a telescope. But there's no man in the moon at all."

"Just like father's face."

"What is it then?" Knarf asked. But Hanid turned to her brother and said: "Sh-h! You'll find out in a minute."

Father held the telescope while one of the children looked through it. "Oh, the moon is full of mountains!"

"And it's full of deep valleys, too," said the second of the children. "The mountains are light and the valleys are dark."

"Yes," said father. "And it's those light mountains and dark valleys which make the light and dark spots on the moon. And that's what you think is the face."

"Humph! said Knarf. "I still think it's a face. Let me look through the telescope," he said loudly.

He tried his best to get near it while his master was looking through. But his master didn't know that his shadow was trying to get a look. He wouldn't move aside.

But finally, when all the children had looked and it was time to go to bed, father started walking back to the house, holding the telescope in his hand with the top part of it pointing up. Then Knarf, seeing his chance, darted forward and took a look.

"The moon has a face!" he exclaimed excitedly. "I've just seen it. And do you know what the face looks like?"

"What?"

Now do you suppose that when Knarf looked through the telescope it was pointed at father's face instead of at the moon, H'mm . . . . perhaps.

SEVEN GIRLS FOR CHORES

We Noticed

. . . Under the light of a pale half-moon, hobgoblins and witches came down to earth last night on their broomstick vehicles and joined the company of strange, fantastic forms which glided along Peterborough streets from six o'clock, (when baby ghosts were out), until after midnight.

❖ ❖ ❖

. . . These goblins, witches, and ghosts which, according to old Roman legends come out in full force on the Eve of All Hallows, must finally have been driven away by the noisy fun-makers en route to gay Hallowe'en masquerades.

❖ ❖ ❖

. . . And among the prettiest of the costumes at the Kinsmen's Ball was a period frock with high puffed sleeves, tight waist and bouffant skirt. The material was of fine voile, flower-sprigged, and the pretty maiden; her hair powdered and piled high, peeped coquetishly from behind a gorgeous, ostrich feather fan.

Enquiry Column

Conducted by
Mrs. MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I have been a silent reader of your page for some time and seeing someone asking for the recipe for beet wine I am sending my way of making it:

Beet Wine

(sent in by Mrs. A. P.)

Six lbs. beets cooked in enough water to make 1 gallon. Cool and strain. Add 4 lbs. white sugar, 2 handfuls raisins, 1 cup wheat, 2 tablespoons cream of tartar. Let work 21 days, strain and bottle.

Dream Cake

One-half cup butter, 1 cup flour, rub in crumbs and pack in tin and bake in moderate oven 10 minutes.

Filling: 2 eggs, well beaten, 1½ cups brown sugar, 2 tablespoons flour, ½ cup walnuts, ½ cup cocoanut. Mix in order given. Spread over the other mixture in tin and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven. Cut while warm.

ANSWER: Thank you for your kindness in sending in these recipes. Write again when we can help you.

QUESTION: I would like to ask you for a recipe for preserved ginger in syrup like the kind imported from China.

I have tried soaking the ginger root and changing water for 2 weeks and it is still hard. Is there a special process to soften the root? Also a recipe for Ginger wine would be appreciated.—H. C.

ANSWER: Thank you for your patient letter.

Preserving ginger is a long and painstaking process. The following method is from an old English cook book, and was given by a cook to a British ambassador to China. It should be authentic.

Preserved Ginger

Put the ginger regularly every night and morning for two weeks into fresh boiling water. Remove the outside skin with a sharp knife. Boil it in water until it is quite soft and slice it in thin slices.

Syrup: One lb. loaf sugar to ½ pint water. Boil it and put the ginger in it and boil it very slowly until the ginger is clear. Time required is 14 days.

Ginger Wine

Three gallons cold water, 9 pounds loaf sugar, ¼ lb. whole ginger bruised, ¼ lb. raisins, strained juice and finely grated rind of 4 lemons, 1½ tablespoons brewers' yeast. Stone and chop raisins and place in enamel or tin lined kettle with the water, sugar and ginger bruised, boil for 1 hour, skimming frequently. Remove from heat, let cool to lukewarm (body temperature) and stir in the yeast. Next day strain into clean dry cask and add lemon juice, and bung lightly. Stir the wine every day for a fortnight, then tighten and bung. Let the wine remain undisturbed for 3 or 4 months, when it may be bottle for use.

We hope both of these recipes turn out successfully for you and that we can help you again. I think peeling the ginger root may facilitate the softening process.

QUESTION: For the first time that I write you but I don't know if you will understand me because I am French (this reader goes on in quite understandable English to ask for tomato jelly moulds, in which peas and carrots are jellied as served in one of the large department store dining rooms.) Signed Miss A. B.

ANSWER: Thank you for your letter.

Tomato Jelly Moulds

Two cups canned tomatoes, 1 small onion, 1 stalk celery, ½ teaspoon salt, 3 peppercorns, ¼ cup finely diced celery, ¼ cup small canned peas (drained), ¼ cup ¼-inch dice cooked carrots, ¼ cup baby lima beans (canned and drained), 1 tablespoon gelatin, 2 tablespoons cold water, 1 hard cooked egg sliced.

Combine the first 5 ingredients and simmer together for 10 minutes. Soak the gelatin in the 2 tablespoons cold water 5 minutes. Strain the tomato mixture over the soaked gelatin and stir until dissolved. When the gelatin is cool add the diced vegetables and peas and beans (all cooked and drained, except the celery). In the bottom of individual moulds place 1 slice of hard cooked egg, then pour in 1 tablespoon of the jelly mixture and let set. Keep the remainder at room temperature so that it will still pour. When first amount is set fill cups with remainder, seeing that some of the vegetables get in each cup. Let set. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

The spider's most attenuated thread is cord, is cable, to man's tender tie
On earthly bliss; it brtaks at every breeze." —Young.
And Goldsmith tells us this in The Deserted Village:
"And e'en while fashion's brightest arts decoy,
The heart distrusting asks if this be joy."

Dear Friends:

Yes, our hold on happiness is very frail. When I see a person not taking care of it when they have it, I think of the sore heart they are laying up for themselves, and I wonder they do not seem to realize what they are doing.

We seem a mass of contradictions. What we should take seriously we take lightly, and what we should let go with a careless laugh, we sit ourselves down and mourn over. Even when we habe happiness we seem inclined to pick it to pieces to see what it is made of, and in the picking we lose it.

The other day as I was going down George St., I overheard two ladies talking. One asked the other if she was happy, and the other replied that she was so happy it made her afraid. Ever been like that?

We feel it a natural thing when we have something or someohe to worry about, but we feel it un-natural when deep happiness comes to us. One lady I know had had hard sledding for years when her children were young, then later inlife she had a nice income.

One of her friends asked how it felt, and she replied that it did not seem possible that she could pay all the bills when they fell due, without robbing Peter to pay Paul. She went on to say that she did not know if she were happier now than she was then.

Sometimes we strive and strive for something, then when we get it we find we had more fun trying to get it, than we do in enjoying it. There always seems to be a canker in the heart of the apple of happiness somehow, so that as soon as it comes we worry about the time we will lose it.

Another time I heard a lady on the street (you never know when I shall be passing) and she was telling another vehemently that she never had had a happy day in her life. I felt like saying, "what, not one?" But I sashayed right on.

It takes so little to make some people happy, for they are happy in themselves, and radiate it wherever they go. Grand people to meet up with, especially when life seems to have got you down and means to keep you there.

And it takes so much to bring joy into some other people's lives, for they are determined to look for the crumpled rose leaf, no matter how much is poured into their lap. To them, far grass is green, distant days hold more promise than the day they are living in now.

Some seem to have it handed to them all their lives, never having to strive in the least, and yet do not appreciate it at all. And some others have to snatch and grab every little bit, yet how they savor and enjoy it.

We cannot examine it too closely for, like health, just as soon as you realize it's there, off it goes. Just like last week when a friend asked me how I was, and I told her I felt pretty good, and next day I had a heart attack which hasn't quite left me yet.

So I phoned her when the worst spasm was over and I had taken my little pill. I said, "Did I tell you I was feeling good last night?" She said yes, so I told her I took it all back, and we had a laugh over it. What's the use of weeping, a laugh makes you feel better.

So hang on to your happiness and tell abou it to

Your Friend, ROBERTA.

Lakefield Is Presented Movie Film Of Scenes In And About The Village

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 1.—"O wad some Pow'r the giftie gie us—To see oursels as others see us."

Bobbie Burns when he expressed this wish in the early eighteenth century could scarcely have forseen its fulfillment event after a century and a half had rolled around. And yet if the immortal poet had been living last week he would have had the honor of sharing with 1,300 other Lakefield inhabitants a fulfilment of his wish for on Friday night last Dr. Carlton presented to the residents of Lakefield a motion picture of themselves which he, assisted by Michael R. Carlton, had taken of the town during the past two weeks.

But even the poet could not fail to appreciate the great amount of local interest provided by a picture of this kind; nor could he fail to admire the scenic views of the village, or the beautiful water scenes taken on Lake Katchewanooka of the striking study of moonlight playing on the waters of the Otonabee as it sweeps along between the limestone banks just below the local dam. Studies of the large shovel in action at the Nepheline Company's dock, and of a local boat company's staff hoisting sails on a dinghy of their own manufacture were pictures which could scarcely have failed to hold his attention; and views of John Blakely's dairy farm with his beautiful herd of Jersey cattle, and the prosperous looking farm lands would surely have inspired the famous one to a further "Poem on Pastoral Poetry" or to a new version of "The Ploughman."

Views of a parade staged here on Friday last, showed a number of good floats which were planned and arranged on very short order and which made a nice showing. The parade was led by the Boy Scout Troop, the Canadian Legion, and the local fire trucks, and included a number of school pupils and many private citizens in automobiles and even one horse drawn buggy which looked decidedly unique in the procession of motor-driven vehicles.

In addition to the motion picture of Lakefield, Dr. Carlton presented a good variety concert, which included piano solos by Miss Aileen Young, dancing by Miss Jean Millar, who appeared in a striking costume of white satin and performed in her usual fine fashion, and a skit by Dr. Carlton and Mr. Michael Carlton which was well received by the audience.

A prize for the school child taking the best picture was won by Keitha Pearson; and the prize for the screen favorite went to Percy Edwards, affectionally nicknamed "Snow Ball" by the master of ceremonies.

One interesting event was the presentation to Reeve C. S. Tanner representing the village, of the roll of film of "Our Town" which was made by Dr. Carlton. The film is now the property of the village and may be shown at any time by the residents.

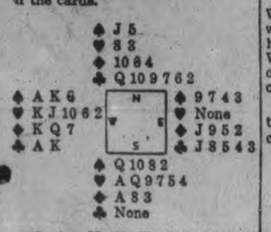
MANNA FROM HEAVEN

GETTING DOUBLED INTO a game when you have a weak hand is just like receiving a windfall. Careful use of your meagre resources can give you one of the best thrills the game affords — more points than were dealt to you 'n the cards.



(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable)

After passes by North and East, South began the bidding on this deal with 1-Heart and West bid 1-No Trump. Both North and East passed again and South ventured 2-Hearts, which West doubled.

West cashed the spades K and A and then led the club A, which South ruffed with the heart 4. The spade Q was then cashed and the diamond 4 discarded. When the spade 10 was led, West ruffed with the heart 10 and the diamond 6 was thrown from dummy. West led the diamond K to South's A. The diamond 3 was ruffed in dummy and followed by ruffs of a club in the South hand, the diamond 8 in the North hand and the club 7 in the declarer's hand with the heart 7, which West overtook with the heart J.

The heart 6 was the only return West could make and this was won with South's 9. He then cashed his heart A and gave the last trick to West with the heart K. As a result only five tricks were lost and the contract made.

West was amazed that he failed to prevent South from making his contract.

International Fishing Zone Suggested

LEONARDVILLE, N.B., Oct. 26 — (CP)—Observers believe great prosperity will result for New Brunswick and Maine fishermen in the Passamaquoddy Bay district if a proposed "twilight custom zone" is made effective at the Canada-United States border in this bay region.

The zone was suggested by George R. Lockie, fish importer and exporter of Eastport, Me., at a tariff hearing held at Jonesport, Me., in connection with the pending reciprocal trade agreement between Canada and the United States.

Before a committee headed by Congressman Otis Bland of Virginia, Lockie, former fish exporter of Halifax and a native of Santo Domingo, urged that ground fish (pollock, cod, haddock and hake) caught within 20 miles of the border be admitted to the United States duty free and that such catches be treated as having been caught inside the border.

Such an arrangement would mean an immediate revival of business at Eastport and other Maine towns, Lockie declared. Thousands of quintals of fish would be salted and large quantities filleted, smoked, dried and shredded.

The scheme also would be greatly advantageous to fishermen of Grand Manan, Campobello and Deer islands on the New Brunswick side of the border. Maine newspapers have referred to the proposal as "sound and logical."

Lockie states that the total amount of fish caught in the suggested zone would be insufficient to affect larger fishing centres like Portland, Gloucester and Boston but would be large enough to result in an inestimably valuable industry for eastern Maine, whose interests "are now being and have been for years ruthlessly sacrificed for those of other fishing ports, chiefly those referred to."

It was said Lockie received an attentive and apparently sympathetic hearing. He maintained that the function of any government was to promote the prosperity of its people and that under the present duty on fresh fish Eastport and other border communities were being penalized and impoverished by exclusion from contact with natural resources in its district.

His plan could not be objected to reasonably by anyone, he said. In a way it was already in effect, as customs regulations permit sardine herring caught in Canadians waters to be admitted into the United States duty free. There would be little danger of bootlegging fish from districts outside the "twilight zone" because the dealers themselves would guard the arrangement jealously from any abuse or infractions. Congressman Bland expressed keen interest in the proposal, saying it was similar to one being advanced in the Great Lake area.

Consensus of business men on both sides of the border is that the plan would be mutually advantageous to Canadian and United States residents in the proposed 20-mile zone. An Eastport man formerly engaged in the wholesale fresh fish business when there was no duty on fish imports from Canada said that his firm in a single year had bought $150,000 worth of fish from Passamaquoddy fishermen. Another said he could get hundreds of customers for boneless cod if the Charlotte County fisheries were made available in the manner suggested.

Coupled with the suggestion that groundfish caught within 20 miles of the border in Canadian waters be admitted free was a possibility that if such a concession were made the Canadian fishing grounds in this area might be opened to United States fishermen of the Passamaquoddy district. The number of these fishermen is comparatively small.

Imposition of a duty on Canadian lobsters entering the United States also was urged upon the Bland committee.

Daladier Begins To Draft His Decree Laws

PARIS, Nov. 1—(AP)—Premier Edouard Daladier called the first of a series of cabinet meetings today to draft decree laws which political sources expected would exact heavy sacrifices from rich and poor alike in an effort to solve France's financial problem. The cabinet was scheduled to meet at 5 p. m. (noon EST).

With a blank cheque from the governing radical socialist party in his pocket to do what he would with France's financial, economic and social life for two weeks, Daladier was expected to have his decrees ready for President Lebrun's signature before the end of the week.

The Premier returned last night from Marseille, where he won the approval of his party's national convention for his shift away from the people's front toward conservatism, and began consultations immediately at the war ministry on his new program.

Extraordinary rumors circulated in political and financial quarters that the program would include measures to redistribute wealth by a capital levy, high inheritance taxes and conversion of government bonds.

23,000 Polish Jews Fate In Balance

BERLIN, Nov. 1 — (AP). —Approximately 22,000 Polish Jews are awaiting details of an agreement between the German and Polish governments which will determine their future residence.

Some already have been deported to Poland. (The Jewish relief committee in Warsaw estimated that 13,000 had reached Polish soil.) The greater number, all resident in Germany until Friday, still are somewhere in camps, barracks or prisons along the German-Polish border to which they were hastily shipped by Germany after a roundup by police and storm troopers.

Agreement was reported near Sunday and some of the deported Jews started back to Germany. A trainload of 700 that had been held at the border since Saturday night was returned to Munich.

Germany started the deportations because of a new Polish citizenship regulation, requiring certification of all Polish passports issued abroad. Germany feared, officials said, that the thousands of Polish Jews residing in Germany were about to lose their Polish citizenship under this regulation and thus become persons without a country.

The race for the leadership of the Ontario Conservative Party was thrown wide open following the announcement of Leopold Macaulay, House leader of the party and considered the most likely candidate for the leadership, that he definitely would not be in the field. Unconfirmed rumors have circulated that the leadership race might now be contested by six entries: W. J. Stewart, former mayor of Toronto, and recently elected to the provincial house; Morley MacKenzie, Wilfrid Heighington, Cecil Frost, Mayor William Morrison, of Hamilton, and Hon. G. France's Top Astrologer Finds Comfort For Most Of World

By Gladys M. Arnold
(Canadian Press Correspondent.)

PARIS, Nov. 2 (C.P.).—Maurice Privat, France's celebrated astrologer and star-gazer, whose prophecies the French people have found come true in the past, has assured them 1937 Mr. Privat announced firmly: will be lots of difficulties, he says, plenty of "alerts," big expenditures of armament, but Europe generally will continue to enjoy the peace promised by the conversations at Munich.

It is recalled that some time in 193 Mr. Privat announced firmly: "On the 10th of March, 1938, Germany will deliver a fatal blow to Austria." Hitler's troops marched. Austria became a Nazi state on March 11.

Plenty of Alarms.

Being a Frenchman, Mr. Privat is most interested in his home country but he casts an astrologic eye over the rest of the world and keeps an ear open for heavenly secrets dealing with America and Japan, too. His idea of the "general prospect" for the next 15 months: "No war, plenty of alarms, hard work and higher salaries for the diplomats, financial, parliamentary, economic, military and international tremors, but no earthquakes—with the end of all regimes of force by the end of 1940."

For France he predicts bigger and better armaments, great change in composition of government, panic on the bourse, speculation, higher cost of living and social disturbances.

There will be crises and war menaces, Privat says, naming crisis dates —April 21, June 14, September 5, and December 14, and menace of war May 21, July 6, and November 21.

News for the dictators: "Great crisis brought on by the interior terrorism in the totalitarian states which will cause revolt of the people. Germany, Italy, and Japan." Mr. Privat calls for civil war in Germany. At the beginning of 1939 there will be apparent success for Nazi regime—advantages gained to detriment of French colonial Empire—but not for long. He predicts internal revolt brought on by fear of general war, terrorist methods will bring the end of Nazi regime and fall of Hitler in 1941.

Troubles for Il Duce.

Italy's troubles begin earlier — November 22, 1938. The astrologer predicts ruin of Italy's credit and increase in influence of Italian royal family. After August 3, 1939, Italy will have legally-elected government, he says, and an "end of religious quarrels and return to liberalism at the beginning of 1940."

Soviet Russia, Privat says, will return to a parliamentary system within a Socialist organization, though military dissensions. There will be continued unity of Soviet Republics, however, with growth of mysticism and evolution towards nature worship or pantheism. For Japan he predicts reverses, humiliation, and end of war with China. The United States will have a fight against German propaganda and influences. Roosevelt will offer a plan for reorganization of the League of Nations.

The stars have confided to Mr. Privat that Great Britain will spend a great deal of money on social enterprises at home and will have trouble with the colonies abroad.

The astrologer predicts the death of the Pope in 1939 and declares his Holiness' successor will "become a refugee."

No Inquest Called In Flier's Shooting

BARRIE, Ont., Nov. 1—(CP).—Dr. W. A. Lewis, Barrie, chief coroner of Simcoe County, announced today no inquest would be held into the death of Corporal Albert Edward Laing.

The 28-year-old senior non-commissioned officer in charge of the Royal Canadian Air Force canteen, Camp Borden, accidentally shot himself as he was returning from a hunting expedition late yesterday.

The full charge of the shot entered his head and he died instantly. It appeared as if he was placing his shot gun in the front seat of his automobile when the trigger caught in the seat and discharged. Three hunting companions found him lying on the ground with his feet on the running board of the car.

A native of Halifax, N.S., Laing had been a member of the R.C.A.F. for the past nine years. Active in sport, he won the handicap championship of Barrie golf club last year and was a member of the executive of Camp Borden hockey club. He belonged to the Barrie Lions Club.

Looking Back
On This Date

One hundred years ago today (Nov. 1, 1838) the silken glove of mercy and diplomacy of Lord Durham was replaced in Lower Canada by the armed fist (only partially concealed) of Sir John Colborne. With the departure of the great conciliator, whose mission had seemingly failed, came a revulsion to the military rule which had governed the province before Durham came. As Durham left Quebec that first of November on the Inconstant (what a suitable name to typify the British policy in Canada!) he must have wondered what would follow his departure. Sir John Colborne, whose duties had been confined to command of the army for a year, told the earl that the situation called for the heavy hand of the soldier and that the best advice he could give Durham was that he should hurry home and so inform the British government.

Durham had hinted that he would propose union of Upper and Lower Canada as a step toward confederation of the British provinces. The very idea was anathema to the people of Lower Canada, and when Colborne's martial law followed Durham's departure there is little wonder that there was a revival of the rebellion not only in Lower Canada but also in the upper province where, in December, came the raid from Detroit. The first week of December saw the execution of Von Schoultz and his companions in the raid on Prescott; the last day of the year, a double political hanging at Montreal, when two notaries died on the scaffold as "a lesson to others." That was Colborne's policy.

Was it any wonder that the next 12 months were filled with trouble all through the two provinces? Spies were everywhere; the fear of betrayal to the soldiery for the slightest offences was general. It was indeed a dark year for the two Canadas. But within a year came the union of the provinces and the arrival of Poulett Thomson, later Lord Sydenham, with his gift of concessions.

The end of an era was reached. Responsible government had arrived, though few recognized it. But within a few years came Elgin and true self government. Colborne returned to England, hated by the French Canadians and many others. Durham's memory grew more precious as the years rolled on, even among those in Lower Canada who had feared that responsible government meant absorption.

Alderville Church Marks Anniversary

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, Nov. 1. — Rev. T. M. Wesley, United Church pastor on the Camborne Circuit, was the guest speaker at Alderville anniversary services on Sunday morning and evening. Mr. Wesley's text for the morning service was "Which was borne of four," the latter portion of verse 3, chapter 2 of the Gospel of St. Mark. Application of the text was made in three ways by the speaker, first, those who carry the four corners of Canada, the farmer, the laborer, the tradesman, and the professional man; second, those who carry the four corners of the church, the men, the women, the young people, and the children; and third, the home, with the father, mother, boys and girls carrying the four corners of the home. The sermon stressed team work and unselfishness, not each class or person for himself, but all as a team carrying the nation, the church and the home to the feet of the Master.

The choir under the direction of Mrs. Earnest Crowe, organist, sang two numbers, "Sing Praises to God" and "Work On."

Mr. Wesley's discourse in the evening was based on Psalm 103. The theme was "Thankfulness," and the true value of things not possessed was stressed. The choir again rendered music appropriate to the occasion, singing two numbers, "God Is Love" and "Forward Go."

SYNTONA A SENSATION AS OVER 400 BOTTLES SOLD IN FIRST FEW DAYS

"Never Saw Anything Like It," Say Hundreds Who Are Now Using This New Plant and Herb Compound.

The new Syntona medicine, now being introduced here in Peterborough has become a sensation almost over night, as more than 400 bottles of this new scientific medicine were sold in the first few days that it was available.

The unprecedented demand is growing daily and scores of local men and women have already come back to say that even in the first few days it had done everything that was claimed for it.

Some persons suffering from stomach distress, indigestion, gas, etc., say it has given them the first real relief they have had in years. Others tell of relief from kidney weakness permitting them to sleep undisturbed at night, rheumatic pains backache, and constipation. These persons are loud in their praise of this new scientific medicine and are now recommending it to their friends and neighbors who suffer from similar troubles.

This great success of Syntona is by no means accidental, for this new medicine is vastly different from any ordinary preparation. Hundreds of tests were made in perfecting its formula and upon perfecting a perfectly balanced formula it was further withheld from the market while many tests were being made in actual cases. It is this pains-taking care in its preparation that has produced in Syntona a REAL MEDICINE, and hundreds who are now using it marvel at the effective way it gives relief from ailments from which they had suffered for years.

Every sufferer in Peterborough and vicinity is invited to put this medicine to the test and the chances are that you, too, will agree it is the very best medicine you have ever had the good fortune to use.

Ottawa Plans To Make Heavy Arms

Cannon, Anti-Aircraft, Torpedo Launches In Proposed Scheme

TORONTO, November 2—(CP).—The Toronto Globe and Mail to-day in a special dispatch from Ottawa says the Department of National Defence is "reported to be considering a long-range program for the manufacture of heavy arms in Canada," and Ottawa authorities "are hopeful they will receive the close co-operation of the British War Office."

"The program would include manufacture in Canada of cannon, anti-aircraft guns and torpedo motor launches," the dispatch says. "All three classifications of armaments are said to be urgently needed to replace coastal defence on an adequate scale."

The dispatch adds that a policy of nationalization of the arms industry is now under consideration, and will soon be debated at council on Prime Minister Mackenzie King's return from his southern holiday.

Dispatch adds: "An announcement regarding nationalization is anticipated for the next session of Parliament, but the question is tied up with the great problem of financing of arsenals, requiring many millions of dollars.

"If there is no interruption of present plans, the Government may be able to announce at the next session of Parliament that a start has been made on the armament program.

"British co-operation is being sought, it is understood, on questions of patent rights, and at the appropriate time—when Canadian industry is ready—some British arms contracts may be sought so that through joint manufacture the cost to Canada would be reduced."

"I was cleaning up some debris on the street when eggs came flying at me from all directions," he said. "My uniform was polluted with the stuff."

Blood Test Gets Driver 8 Days As Drunk

WHITBY, Ont., Nov. 2—(CP)—Ruling that a blood test showing 3.8 parts alcohol per 1,000 parts blood was evidence of complete intoxication, Magistrate F. S. Ebbs registered a conviction on a charge of driving while intoxicated against Thomas J. Maguire, of Waterloo here, yesterday. He was sentenced to eight days in jail. His car was impounded.

Prof. Joslyn Rogers, provincial analyst, in giving evidence for the Crown, overcame an argument by the defense that accused had absorbed the alcohol content in his blood stream from working under conditions where he was subjected to fumes from large quantities of liquor.

The Professor stated he knew of only one means by which alcohol could get into the bloodstream, and that was through the stomach by digestion.

An attempt by T. F. Hall, defense counsel, Cobourg, to challenge the method of securing the blood sample, was unsuccessful.

Provincial officer Arthur Runciman, Pickering, told the court he had stopped a car being driven erratically on highway No. 2 between Whitby and Oshawa, on the afternoon of Oct. 7. He had considered Maguire intoxicated and had driven him to the Whitby jail, where he summoned Dr. R. T. Maclaren, Chief Coroner of Ontario county, to examine, accused.

Fried Kidnap Mystery Is Solved

Victim Shot, Cremated By 4-Man Gang 2 Other Jobs Bared

NEW YORK, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—The mystery of Arthur Fried, young business man who vanished 11 months ago, was cleared to-day with the disclosure by the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation that Fried was kidnapped, held prisoner four days, then shot to death and cremated.

J. Edgar Hoover, F.B.I. chief, in a statement last night, laid the death of Fried, 32, head of a Bronx sand and stone compony, at the hands of a four-man "kidnap syndicate," which tried for weeks afterward to collect a $200,00 ransom.

Hoover said "certai nones" of the quartette also had confessed they collected $14,900 in two hitherto unrevealed Brooklyn kidnappings, and said they are under suspicion in two other kidnap cases and three hold-ups.

The men, Hoover said, shot Fried to death in a lower East Side apartment and burned his body in a furnace.

He named the suspects as Demetrius Gula, 30, a pinball operator; William Jacknis, 27, a playground instructor; John Virga, 34, a clothes presser, and Joseph S. Sacoda, 27, now in Sing-Sing Prison for parole violation.

Hoover said all have police records and will be turned over to local authorities for prosecution. They were arrested over the week-end.

The Brooklyn Jobs

Victims in the two Brooklyn abductions were Benjamin Farber, 33, a coal dealer, and Norman Miller, 19, son of the head of a stevedore concern.

Hoover said the kidnappers seized Farber last April 18 in front of a Brooklyn branch of the National City Bank and released him unharmed shortly after his family paid $1,900 of a $25,000 ransom demand.

Young Miller, he said, was kidnapped last July 24 as he left a Brooklyn theatre and freed within 24 hours when the father paid the gang $13,000.

The F.B.I. head refused to name other kidnappings in which the men still were being questioned.

The chief case still confronting the agents is the disappearance of Peter Levine, 12-year-old New Rochelle schoolboy whose headless, wire-trussed body was found floating in Long Island Sound three months after he vanished last Feb. 24 on his way home from school.

Continuing a relentless drive against rebel Arab strongholds, British troops seized control of Jaffa when 2,000 picked troops entered the ancient city from all sides in a surprise raid. Spanish Steamer Shelled For Over An Hour In Sight Of England

Roar of Heavy Guns on Attacking Cruiser Rocks Houses Ashore, 7 Miles off As Flames From Victim Light up Sea

CROMER, Norfolk, England, Nov. 2—(AP)—An unidentified cruiser today directed fire at the Spanish freighter Carthagena for more than an hour within sight of watchers on the Norfolk coast.

The British steamship Monkwood sent out the following message: "An armed cruiser has been firing on the Spanish steamer Carthagena for over an hour.

"The steamer appears to be considerably damaged and the cruiser is flying flags saying, "hove to or I fire."

The Monkwood's message, which was addressed to the Admiralty, added that the attacking cruiser was a Spanish Government armed auxiliary.

Smoke poured from the Carthagena, which was discribed as being about seven miles off the Cromer light vessel.

(Lloyd's and other shipping registers do not list the Carthagena, but Lloyd's lists a Cartagena, 2,643 tons, owned by Robert M. Slowman, registered at Hamburg, Germany.)

In gathering dusk watchers on shore plainly saw the gun flashes, while the roar of the cannonading shook windows and houses.

Flames leaped from the Carthagena as a result of the warship's bombardment.

The Press Association said that in spite of the Monkwood's report it was believed the cruiser was an Insurgent vessel.

The Crack Shot

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 2.—(CP)—Lieutenant Richard Benyon, crack pistol shot in the Scranton police force, went hunting with a double-barreled shotgun and a neighbor's dog. Soon the dog routed the rabbit and sped in pursuit. Benyon aimed and fired. When the smoke cleared, the rabbit had disappeared. The dog lay on the ground—dead.

See Spanish War No Longer Threat To Peace

LONDON, Nov. 2 (CP Cable) — The Spanish civil war no longer threatens the peace of Europe, Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today when moving to bring the Anglo-Italian agreement into operation "as soon as possible."

To implement the agreement which has lain dormant since its negotiation in April is merely another step in the government's plan for general appeasement, Mr. Chamberlain said.

Six months' delay had been caused by Mr. Chamberlain's insistence that Italian troops be removed from General Franco's side in the Spanish war. At Munich Premier Mussolini had told him, the prime minister continued, that he would withdraw 10,000 men, representing half the Italian infantry there, and this movement had now been completed.

Anthony Eden, who resigned as foreign secretary because he opposed the negotiations which led to the Anglo-Italian pact, told the House "the essential condition set by the government for bringing that agreement into force has not been satisfied."

He said the time would come when British would have to face a crisis more acute than anything in the past.

Cadet Training In Public Schools Is Made Optional By School Board

CADET TRAINING in Peterborough public schools will in future be made subservient to physical education. A report to the board of education made last night by D. G. H. Melton, chairman of the supervision committee, stressed the importance of physical education and insisted that while cadet training may continue it must not interfere with physical education.

The report also provided that cadet instruction will be optional, not compulsory. The committee felt that in the past only a few of the pupils had benefitted by the cadet training and that there had not been sufficient instruction in physical training, Mr. Melton said. He asked that in future more emphasis be placed on that phase of the work.

Inspector Wightman told the board that during the past year a considerable effort has been made to increase the amount of physical education carried on in public schools. "We are anxious not to have that program interrupted, as has sometimes happened in the spring when cadet training commences," he said. The board adopted the report.

Police Before Doctors Cadi Declares

"In these cases I would rather accept the evidence of the average police officer than that of the average doctor," was the electrifying statement made by Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell in police court this morning in registering a conviction against an Otonabee youth for being drunk.

The magistrate's surprising remark was made when he referred to a complaint from the accused that when he was brought into the police station he had asked that a doctor be called and his request had been refused.

"I think, perhaps," said Magistrate Campbell, "that if he made that request it should have been granted." Then he added his statement that he would prefer to believe the average police officer to believing the average doctor.

T. J. Carley, K.C., who had been defending the accused and who was acting for another man charged with the same offence and mixed up in the same case immediately asked that the charge against the second man be adjourned to another court.

Request Is Granted

"I propose to call medical witnesses in this case," he declared, "and in view of what your Worship has just said I feel I am entitled to ask that the case be heard by another magistrate."

Magistrate Campbell consented to an adjournment and then proceeded to amplify his remarks in regard to policemen and doctors.

"I feel," he said, "that the decent straightforward policeman who has taken an oath to enforce the law and protect the public is under especial obligation to tell the truth," he said. "The doctor on the other hand is not bound by any such special obligation."

"The vast majority of doctors," he continued, "are straightforward, honest men but then I am not entirely persuaded that every doctor is —or every lawyer for that matter."

"Or every policeman," commented Mr. Carley.

Mother 77, Jailed as Vagrant by Son Dies in 3 Days at Mental Hospital

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 2 (C.P.). — John Baker, Petrolia, told an inquest jury here last night that when doctors failed to find his 77-year-old mother insane he had her arrested as a vagrant. The woman, Mrs. Agnes Reid, subsequently was committed to the Ontario Hospital where she died on October 26.

The jury in its verdict found Mrs. Reid's death was due to natural causes. Medical witnesses testified bruises and contusions on the body apparently were caused by a fall from bed. Dr. E. P. Johns, pathologist at the Institute of Public Health, testified that in his opinion death was due to bronchial pneumonia.

Under questioning by Crown Attorney Norman F. Newton, Baker said his mother, an old-age pensioner, "wandered around at night" and was "hard to look after." He complained to Chief Constable George Fowler and Mrs. Reid was taken into custody on a charge of vagrancy.

Dies in Three Days.

Mrs. Reid was taken on the day of her arrest before Magistrate C. S. Woodrow of Sarnia and was committed to the Ontario Hospital here for 60 days. She died three days after admittance. Chief Fowler testified none of the woman's three sons and one daughter was present at the hearing, in Magistrate Woodrow's Chambers.

The Chief Constable said it was upon his suggestion the vagrancy charge was laid. "Her mind, I could see, was gone," he testified.

Baker said he became alarmed when his mother on one occasion was found with a "bunch of matches." He said he feared she might injure herself while walking about alone.

Dr. S. B. Fraleigh of Petrolia, who attended Mrs. Reid from 1931 unti shortly before her committal to the institution, said that he had formed the opinion she was "insane."

Hubbell, Nurse Nabbed

TORONTO, Nov. 2 — (CP). — Albert James Hubbell, arrested yesterday at Portland, Ore., and wanted in Oshawa for passing a worthless cheque, will be brought back to stand trial in Ontario county and extradition proceedings will be taken if necessary, Attorney-General Gordon Conant said today.

"We are getting in touch with Oregon police immediately to ascertain whether they are holding him on any charge. He will be brought back as soon as circumstances permit. As to the young lady (Elizabeth Symes, held at Portland with Hubbell) there are no grounds on which the province could, or any reason why the province should bring her back."

The telegram, which was from the chief of police at Portland, also stated that Miss Elizabeth Symes, pretty 22-year-old graduate nurse of Port Perry, who disappeared at the time Hubbell left Oshawa, was with Hubbell and is also being held. Hubbell is wanted in Oshawa on charges of securing a new car by means of a worthless cheque. Chief of Police Friend stated that as soon as extradition is in order either a city or provincial constable will leave for Oregon to bring Hubbell back for trial.

Starting a Hospital

Hubbell hitch-hiked his way to Oshawa some six weeks ago and immediately made contacts through local physicians and business men. Claiming that he was going to start a private hospital in Timmins, Hubbell had Miss Symes, a graduate of the Oshawa Hospital this spring, recommended to him as a registered nurse.

The pseudo-doctor cashed a small cheque with a local physician and then purchased a new car from a local salesroom, giving a worthless cheque in payment. Under mysterious circumstances Miss Symes disappeared, leaving behind two new uniforms that she had purchased to wear upon taking over her new

Campbell Blames Banks For Slump

TORONTO, Nov. 2—(CP).—Hon. Colin Campbell, Ontario Public Works Minister, in a speech here last night blamed Canadian banks for depressed business conditions.

"Business is not buoyant here because of the Canadian banks. The banks have been a strength to the country in times past, but they have taken advantage of us because of the position the international bankers have placed us in.

It is the small taxpayer who is supporting the bank today. Whether it be private or public industry, we are paying toll through interest. We are not producing enough to pay interest. We continue to borrow money from the banks until we are approaching a state of chaos such as exists in certain European countries."

Banks were willing to lend money to municipal and other governments and were lobbying to lend it.

"We are rapidly reaching the position in Canada of taking from the haves and giving to the have-nots. Unfortunately in Canada the haves haven't enough to give to the have-nots.

"We're losing out on our capital investments. Owners of obsolete plants are unable to put them in first-class condition. The pulp and paper industries of this province are competing with those of other countries with inefficient equipment. They are nearly all in receivers' hands."

Japs Propose Strict Asiatic Lines For Reconstruction Of China

TOKYO, Nov. 2—(AP).—Japan announced tonight she intends to create a political and economic bloc consisting of the Japanese empire, Manchoukuo and China in carrying out her "immutable policy" for Asiatic reconstruction after the war with China.

A formal government declaration left a loophole for possible peace with the present government of China "if it were to come forward to join in the establishment of the new order."

The statement expressed gratitude to those nations "which are in sympathy with us"—presumably Germany and Italy, Japan's allies in an anti-Communist pact. Other western powers were not mentioned.

The declaration was issued in commemoration of tomorrow's national holiday, birthday of the Emperor Meiji, grandfather of Emperor Hirohito and considered the founder of the modern Japanese empire.

Born Nov. 3, 1852, Meiji reigned from 1867 until his death in 1912, his reign covering the period during which Japan emerged from isolation to become one of the great powers.

Previously the foreign office spokesman had declared Asiatics "can hardly accept as fair treatment" the existence throughout Africa and Asia of colonies of western nations.

Asked about Prime Minister Chamberlain's prediction in the House of Commons that Japan would need British credits when the Chinese hostilities are over, the spokesman said Japan would certainly need money, but not necessarily British money, Japan never begs, he said.

Britons Are Urged To Work For A Greater Nation

Newport, Wales, Nov. 2.

RT. HON. R. B. BENNETT, former Prime Minister of Canada, yesterday urged his hearers at a businessmen's lunch to "work harder for Great Britain and for a greater Britain...."

Declaring that if Britain perished today she would be remembered not for her battles "but for her administration among subject races and for her ideals of fair play." He asked: "Why do we not capitalize on those achievements. Why should we be half ashamed to express ourselves?"

Mr. Bennett concluded: "Let's say this empire will continue to be what it has been—the greatest force for good the world has ever known."

Secret Of Shakespeare's Dramas Sought In Grave Of 1599

The doors of historic Westminster Abbey were locked, dim lights flickered inside and a policeman kept the curious away as an exploration was conducted near the "Faerie Queen" tomb of Edmund Spenser in the Abbey's Poets' Corner.

Spenser died in 1599. An Elizabethian historian William Camden said contemporary poets wrote "mournful elegies" which were buried "with the pens that wrote them," in Spenser's grave. If a specimen is found among them by William Shakespeare, scholars and experts hope by comparing handwriting to settle the age-old controversy whether Sir Francis Bacon might have written the Shakespearean works, as many have believed.

Lawrence Tanner, librarian of Westminster, said the tomb was not yet actually opened, but that preliminary survey work had been finished.

The digging is taking place in the sand of an old Thames River bed. It is a climax to a 20-year effort by the Baconians who contend Bacon or Lord Verulam was the real author of the works in question.

Noted Most for His Poems.

The spearhead of the movement to open the tomb is R. L. Eagle, an insurance man and convicted Baconian.

He believes Shakespeare may have been among the contributing authors at the burial. Shakespeare was better known then for the poems "Venus and Adonis" and "The Rape of Lucrece" than for his famous dramas.

If legible poems are found, with one by Shakespeare among them, their handwriting in the brown ink of Queen Elizabeth's regime can be compared with a known Bacon manuscript.

Shakespearean disciples are not so enthusiastic about the digging. They say if Shakespeare proves to be Bacon half the population of the bard's birthplace, Stratford-on-Avon, will go on the dole.

Few Shakespeare signatures on legal documents exist, but a Bacon manuscript is available.

The searchers realized the chances of finding legible writing are meagre even if Camden is proved correct. Eagle suggested the poems may have been written on durable parchment. There is the additional possibility that they were enclosed in metal cylinders.

Cornwall Drops Police Inquiry

CORNWALL, Ont., Nov. 2.—(CP)—Cornwall township authorities have dropped the proposed investigation into alleged maladministration of the township police department, it was revealed here yesterday.

Police Chief Wilfrid Bertrand, under suspension since Oct. 17, and Constable William Malyon, under suspension since Oct. 3, were reinstated and returned to their jobs. It was decided not to reimburse them for loss of pay during suspension.

An appeal to the Ontario Police Commissioner for an inquiry was refused. The township council, in a statement outlining reasons for dispensing with any further action, said that "most of the charges are petty and should not be the subject of an investigation."

Here's That MAN Again!

Who? Why, you remember that jolly old fellow who visited our city almost a year ago. That's right—SANTA CLAUS! Well, word has been received that this year, too, he wants to see the children of Peterborough and District.

Except on Christmas Eve, Santa, just like everyone else, has to have travelling expenses. So, all the business men in town got together and decided on a plan which not only would provide Santa's expenses but would give a host of people a lot of fun and a lot of worth-while gifts as well.

Now here's their plan. In the first place each one donated a prize. One gave a ½-cord of wood. One gave an old English silver comport. Another, a fine wool pullover. Others gave smart shirts and ties, snow suits, 3 months' subscription to The Examiner, an auto fog lamp, a coffee table—in fact, more than 100 presents valued at over $300. They are on display in Hall's window till Friday, when they will be taken to the Capitol Theatre to be presented by draws during the Midnite Frolic to those in attendance.

Much like an old-time Christmas Tree Party, this Frolic is a show no one should miss. There'll also be Vaudeville, Comics, Cartoons and a Feature picture. The show starts at 11.15 This Friday Night. The Tickets are only 50 cents, at almost any store or here at The Examiner. Come to this party and make sure that SANTA CLAUS can come to Peterborough.

Lloyd George Sees Premier Acquiring Dictatorial Airs From Associations

London, Nov. 2 (CP)

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE in a caustic reply to Prime Minister Chamberlain's implied rebuke for his recent broadcast to the United States said today "the prime minister seems to me to be acquiring dictatorial airs from his associations."

The speech to which Mr. Chamberlain was believed to have referred in his remarks in the House of Commons yesterday was made before the Free Church Federation and broadcast to the United States Oct. 26. In it he predicted the Munich peace would lead to a "war without friends" for Great Britain and said Britain had descended the "ladder of dishonor rung by rung."

Mr. Lloyd George took exception to Mr. Chamberlain's remarks in a statement to the press, although he said he was not sure whether the prime minister had referred to his speech or to a previous address by Winston Churchill Oct. 16.

Declaring the broadcast was only incidental, he said: "I was not delivering a speech to America but to the Free Churchmen and I do not withdraw one sentence or one phrase of it."

"It is new doctrine for democracy," he said, "that you cannot criticize a government without being open to a charge that you are fouling your own nest."

Sally Frankland Wins Movie Test As Marmora Is Presented Film Of Activities In "Our Town"

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Nov. 2.—Marmora Town Hall was crowded to its doors on Tuesday evening on the occasion of the presentation of an entertainment by Dr. Frank Carlton with the assistance of Michael Carlton which included the showing of the film "Our Home Town" scenes for which were taken by the Carltons in this village about two weeks ago.

The program commenced with the showing of films of Havana and the launching of the Queen Mary.

Then Dr. Carlton mentioned that views of local children would be shown on the screen of which seven had been selected by the Booth Film Company of Toronto for the Marmora audience to declare by applause the winner, the best screen expressions to decide.

Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell and H. W. Sabine were asked by the doctor to join him on the stage to decide as to which child received the most applause.

The children whose individual pictures were flashed on the screen were Yvonne Quackenbush, Sally Frankland, Betty Leonard, Dorothy Nayler, Helen Nayler, Billie Curtis and Bobbie Sanderson. After it was announced that Helen Nayler who received most applause was not eligible as being under the age limit, decision had to be made between Yvonne Quackenbush, Sally Frankland and Betty Leonard. Sally Frankland was eventually declared the winner.

The showing of the remainder of the film followed proving interesting and amusing as congregations and gatherings were depicted besides juvenile pranks.

A comical skit by Dr. Carlton and Michael Carlton ended the program after which there was a second showing of the film.

All Italians To Go?

Mr. Chamberlain disclosed Mussolini will withdraw all Italian troops as soon as the non-intervention committee's withdrawal plan goes into effect. In addition Mussolini had promised to send no more men to Spain to compensate for those withdrawn.

At Munich Chancellor Hitler and Mussolini "assured me they had no territorial ambitions in Spain," the prime minister recounted. He was combatting arguments that the dictators hoped eventually to establish a fascist state in Spain.

Mr. Chamberlain also announced Great Britain will take immediate steps to recognize Italy's conquest of Ethiopia. This was not part of the Anglo-Italian agreement but had been considered a corollary. It would leave only Russia among the European nations refusing to accredit its ambassador to the "king of Italy and emperor of Ethiopia."

Mr. Chamberlain said the prime ministers of Australia and South Africa had cabled their approval of the government's plan to bring the agreement into effect. He had received no reply from Canada and New Zealand.

"Justification for the recognition of Italian sovereignty in Ethiopia is to be found if we feel that recognition constitutes an advance toward general appeasement," he continued.

"If the non-intervention plan (in Spain) is not in operation to-day, it can not be said that it is the fault of Italy."

The Anglo-Italian accord, signed at Rome the day before Easter, was designed to be a comprehensive settlement of all conflicts of interest of the two powers in the Mediterreanean, the Near East, Africa and Spain. It has been held in abeyance pending fulfilment of one prerequisite, "a settlement" in the Spanish civil war.

"When I was at Munich I spoke on the subject of the future of Spain with Herr Hitler and Signor Mussolini," the Prime Minister said. "Both of the massured me most definitely that they had no territorial ambitions whatsoever in Spain.

"I am convinced the Spanish question is no longer a menace to the peace of the world, and there is no valid reason why we should not now take the step which would obviously contribute to general appeasement.

"If any justification is required for the policy of the government in closing our difference with Italy, it surely can be found in the action of Signor Mussolini when, at my request, he used his influence with Herr Hitler in order to make time for the discussion which led up to the Munich agreement.

"If the House approves this motion, then prospects for peace will be improved, let it put an end to the idea that any state should be kept at arms length."

Wife, Paramour Arrested In Shooting Case

ROUYN, Que., Nov. 2—(CP).—Provincial police held a man and woman as material witnesses today while they continued an investigation into the shooting of Joseph Miroslovic, 45-year-old resident of Arntfield, Que.

Miroslovic's body, shot through the head, was found early Monday sprawled in the bedroom floor of his home in the little village, nine miles from the Ontario border in northwest Temiskaming county.

Police, who held the victim's wife along with Joseph Falardeau, said the woman was asleep in the bedroom when the body was discovered. A .22 calibre rifle, slugs and shells for examination to Dr. Rosario Fontaine, provincial medico-legal expert.

Mrs. Miroslovic, known also as Mrs. Angeline Houle, told a coroner's jury after the body was found that she was "very drunk" and was unable to recall occurrences in her home after 10.30 o'clock Sunday night.

She said she heard Miroslovic, either before or after the shooting, say "that's for you, Angeline," but, "all I know is that after he shot himself I was alone with him in the room."

Falardeau, ordered jailed with the woman when they admitted intimacy to Coroner C. G. Rioux, said he had been chased from the house at 11 p.m. by Miroslovic when the latter heard him talking to the woman in French. He said Miroslovic brandished a rifle.

Provincial police constables Georges Lortie and Maurice Rheault who found the body, a pillow thrust under the head, said the gun was beneath Miroslovic's torso.

The inquest was adjourned pending further investigation.

Tried Number of tests

Witness testified Dr. Maclaren had conducted a series of tests with accused, and took a blood sample in the officer's presence and sealed it. It was given to Runciman, who took it to Prof. Rogers.

Dr. Maclaren stated accused was "certainly under the influence of liquor, yet he was not so far gone he did not know what was going on." He said accused was in a condition to consent to a blood test.

Prof. Rogers testified as to alcohol content of specimen brought to his office by Constable Runciman. "According to the accepted standards the man was in a condition of intoxication, somewhat advanced," witness declared.

Maguire, in his own defense stated he was an excise officer employed in a Waterloo distillery. His work subjected him to liquor fumes for eight hours, and often 10 or 12 hours a day. Three other employees of the same distillery are now under medical treatment for alcoholic poisoning, he said.

On the day of his arrest he had not had any breakfast or lunch, Maguire stated, but had stopped at Acton for one glass of draught beer.

Mr. Hall, in presenting argument for the defense, charged the evidence of a blood test was not generally followed throughout the province, and there is now a controversy raging with regard to the acceptance of a blood test as evidence of intoxication.

Magistrate Ebbs admitted it was unfortunate accused had got into such difficulty while hurrying to the death bed of his aged mother, and agreed to reduce the sentence to eight days taking into consideration one day spent in jail by Maguire.

Police Before

This case arose out of a police call on October 25 to the intersection of Simcoe and Bethune streets where Sergeant John Thompson and Constable Wm. Piercey found three men, all of whom were charged with being drunk.

Testifying against the Otonabee youth, who was a member of the party, Sergt. Thompson and Constable Piercey swore that he was leaning against a wall when they arrived on the scene but when he started to move off in response to an order he staggered and they discovered he was drunk.

Chief Newhall and Constable Gordon Puffer who said they saw the accused in the police station after his arrest also swore that he was intoxicated.

In his defense the accused claimed he was not intoxicated but had gone with the others to get a room for a member of the party who was very drunk. He admitted to having had four glasses and a part of a fifth glass of beer that afternoon and to having been warned several times by Chief Newhall about drinking.

Magistrate Campbell found the acused guilty and fined him $10 and costs.

Past Work On Ontario Highways Drop In Bucket To Job Ahead

WINGHAM, Ont., Nov. 2.—(CP)—Work done on Ontario highways "seems like only a drop in the bucket compared to the task ahead of us," R. H. Smith, Ontario deputy-minister of highways, told the newly-organized Wingham Chamber of Commerce last night.

"There was a time when it was a matter of expending the gasoline tax and certain other revenues set aside for roads," he said. "Now the amount collected in this way is small in comparison to what we have to do."

Mr. Smith said that several years 74 per cent. of all tourist traffic from the United States came to Ontario. In recent years it had dropped to 63 per cent.

"I believe that better highways will be the means of regaining that 11 per cent," he said.

Other speakers included R. J. Deachman, M. P., North Huron, and Charles Robertson, M. L. A., Huron-Bruce.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 2 (C.P.). — November and May Winnipeg wheat futures dropped to five-year lows in narrow trading to-day, but near the close revival of export and mill demand for cash wheat gave the market a strong undertone. Final values were ⅜ to ⅝ higher, November 57⅞, December 57⅝ to ¾ and May 61.

Canadian wheat export sales were moderate and much higher than during recent sessions. Brokers did not reveal the amount of business overnight.

Futures in the final hour were virtually unchanged. Precipitation in Western Canada failed to cause bearishness here. Chicago moved narrowly because United States Winter wheat crop-condition reports were mixed.

War On Cancer Gains Ground Banting Claims

TORONTO, Nov. 2.—(CP).—The Globe and Mail today in a news story says it learned from Sir Frederick Banting, discoverer of insulin and professor of medical research at the University of Toronto, that progress towards development of resistance to cancer in cases involving animals is being made.

Sir Frederick's most recent work in cancer research, says the Globe and Mail, was outlined in a paper before the Royal Society of Medicine in England. The work has been carried on by the department of medical research in the Banting Institute in Toronto since 1926. Sir Frederick is now back in Canada.

The Globe and Mail adds:

"While no specific medicine, serum or treatment for cancer has been developed, Sir Frederick stated that there is hope that eventually this will be the result. In various instances, recessions of experimental cancerous growths have resulted from the experiment.

"Sir Frederick Banting prefers to use the term 'resistance' rather than 'immunity' where cancer is concerned.

We Noticed

....You'd better dig up your mother's pearl-handled button-hook, girls, because that old flame, the high buttoned boot, has turned up again! Bright kid ones are shown for evening . . . black kid ones for day.

◇ ◇ ◇

....Evening gloves have gone "up" with the hair styles . . . and long ones . . . your mother called them "Opera" gloves, stretch almost to the shoulders.

◇ ◇ ◇

....And another nice dandyism from the past . . . the return of 1900 spats to warm your ankles. Personally, we're rather glad . . . now one can really be warm and still hold a place on the top rung of fashion!

Fashions

Dad will comment delightedly on mother and daughter dressed alike dirndls. He will be such a proud dirndls. eH will be such a proud escort to re-unions of family Sunday dinner and holiday parties in the best-beloved of all party dresses. Dainty snowy white ruching edges the demure square neck and the brief sleeves. Mother will like the little girl idea of this popular peasant fashion. Daughter will be thrilled to wear an identical dress of grown-ups. Clan plaid woollen is a gay and practical choice for these twin fashions for everyday and school. They're so simple to sew ....at a price that won't strain your budget.

Clever Debate Feature Of Social Evening

One of the most colorful events in a week of Hallowe'en parties was the masquerade parade and basket social in Braley's Hall, at which the Lily Lake Christian Endeavor Society entertained the young people of St. Andrew's Church.

Orange, yellow and black decorations introduced the Hallowe'en motif into the party setting and added a note of gaiety to the proceedings. Winners in the costume parade were Miss Alta Wilson, as an old fashioned lady, and Miss Greta Wilson, dressed as a young gentleman.

Mr. Archie Ackison was the auctioneer for the basket social, and baskets were handsomely and amusingly adorned with colors and motifs in keeping with the spirit of the occasion.

The outstanding feature of a well-arranged program, which was presided over by Mr. Archie Ackison, was a debate entitled "Rural Life Is Preferable to City Life," which was cleverly argued by both sides. The affirmative side, taken by Miss Alta Wilson and Mr. Harold Thompson of Lily Lake, was awarded first place. Speakers for the negative were Miss Frances Clark and Mr. James Harvey of St. Andrew's church

A brief and witty play on Hallowe'en was given by the Lily Lake school children, and a musical program included musical guitar numbers by Jean and Alva Grey, and by Rhea Wilson and Toots Dobson, with piano accompaniment by Allan Boate. An amusing reading "An Inventor's Wife" was given by Miss Audrey Hatherley.

DOROTHY DIX

DEAR MISS DIX—What chance of happiness is there in a childless marriage? MABEL.

Answer:

It depends altogether upon the individual. There are men and women who have the paternal and maternal instincts so strongly developed in them that they are utterly miserable without children. Life to them has no meaning without little arms around their necks, baby heads snuggled upon their breasts. No love from their mates, no tenderness, no kindness atones to them for the lack of children. Their houses are empty and lonely if there is no patter of little feet on the floor. There is nothing to strive for or work for if there are no sons and daughters on whom to lavish fruits of their success.

It is because children are such a necessity to the happiness of many people that the baby problem should be frankly and honestly discussed before marriage and settled as far as possible. No man or woman has the right to marry if he or she knows that he or she is unwilling to have children or cannot have children, if the other one desires a family.

There are many men and women who have no especial affection for children and who do not desire to be bothered with them. Other cases in which there are hereditary taints that they feel they have no right to pass on to their offspring. Still others who are so poor that they feel it would be an injustice to bring children into the world to whom they could give nothing but starvation and hardships. These cases automatically settle themselves, but they should be threshed out before marriage instead of afterward, so that neither party may feel aggrieved or defrauded.

But if a couple only discover after marriage that their home must be childless, certainly the only thing for them to do is either to reconcile themselves to the situation, or else to adopt the baby fate has denied them. Many persons do this and seem to feel an affection for the child as warm and satisfying as if it were their own.

Unless either the man or the woman has an actual obsession about children, there is no reason for them to be unhappy. Nor, as a matter of fact, are they unhappy as a general thing. On the contrary, the old theory that children draw a husband and wife closer together does not always work out in real life. In most cases it has the opposite effect. Particularly are women so likely to become absorbed in their children that they lose interest in their husbands and cease to try to make themselves attractive to them or to amuse them.

In many and many a case the first baby puts the father's nose permanently out of joint and sends him roaming in search of some woman who isn't so much taken up with listening to the baby coo that she hasn't time to step out with him or doll herself up for him.

The childless woman, having nothing to mother but her husband, devotes herself to spoiling him and making a fuss over him, and the childless father babies his wife, and so all goes well. You will find that most childless couples are very devoted to each other and that they play together and chum together much more than do the couples who have children.

DEAR MISS DIX—What do you think of joining the matrimonial bureaus or clubs looking for friendship or matrimony? Also, what is your opinion of answering blind ads of individuals who want to marry? Do you think these offer a proper way to get acquainted with one of the opposite sex? Do you think that it is a reliable way of coming in contact with individuals of good standing and character? A. B. C.

Answer:

Don't you ever read the newspapers, A.B.C.? If you do you must recall that every now and then there is a story about a woman who represents herself as a good-looking widow with a nice home, who advertises for a husband with a little money and who murders the poor suckers who rise to this bait. There was one such case in which the bodies of seven men were found buried in a cellar of the woman's house.

Or you may read of men who have advertised for wives and who have sometimes married thirty or forty girls whom they rob of their savings and either desert or kill. So it seems to me that any man or woman who had a grain of intelligence, or a drop of caution in their systems would be leery of answering any advertisement of an individual who was seeking a mate in that way. Possibly there may be decent and honest men and women who advertise for husbands and wives, but the chances are too great against it to risk it.

And, anyway, the thing doesn't make any sense any way you look at it. Certainly in any community in which you live there are just as many good-looking, intelligent, amiable, charming men and women as there are in any other community, so why go far afield in seeking a husband or wife instead of looking about for one close at home?

Certainly you have a better chance of happiness if you marry some one you know instead of a stranger that you have to identify by his or her wearing a white carnation in his or her buttonhole. If you know 'em, you can avoid tying yourself up for life with Sally's temper or Mary's bad cooking or Emma's extravagance or John's shiftlessness or Tom's drunkenness, but you have no such protection against the faults and vices of a mail-order husband or wife that you contract for, sight unseen.

Marriage has enough risk in it without taking one on a total stranger. So don't do it. It is playing with TNT.

Deaconess Describes Work

With the vice-president, Miss M. E. Elliott, presiding in the absence of the president, Mrs. W. Harris, the November meeting of George Street Women's Association was held in the church parlors on Tuesday afternoon with a splendid attendance.

The meeting was opened with the church's 103rd anniversary in mind, and hymn with prayer by Miss Elliott.

A past president of the association, Mrs. H. S. Foote, gave a reminiscence of the Women's Association work of past years, stating that it was in 1875 that first mention was made of the Ladies' Aid of George Street church and it was at this time that cushions were put in the church pews by the society.

Mrs. J. H. Rowe was in charge of the worship period, and read the scripture lesson, the topic being "Temperance." Prayer was led by Mrs. H. W. Ballard.

Miss Elizabeth Walker, deaconess of St. Paul's church, was guest speaker, and opened their remarks with a few words of congratulation to the church on the celebration of its 103rd anniversary. Her talk, given in an interesting manner, was of deaconess work, and she was extended a vote of thanks by Mrs. F. Mather and Mrs. J. Spencer. Two delightful piano solos were given by Mrs. J. Smith, for which appreciation was expressed by Miss Elliott.

Encouraging reports were given by the secretary, Mrs. G. C. Staples, and by the treasurer, Mrs. T. Hetherington. Mrs. W. McGee, corresponding secretary, reported several letters written and several letters of appreciation received. Reporting for the look-out committee, Mrs. Hetherington reported fourteen calls and for the sick and visiting committee, Mrs. Sarah Armstrong reported forty-four calls, and several bouquets of flowers sent to the sick by Miss L. Morrow.

It was reported by Miss Miller that Mrs. H. S. Hagerman, who recently moved from this city to London, Ontario, had been presented with a life membership certificate by her W.A. Group, which is the first life membership ever made in the local society.

A nominating committee was appointed to bring in a slate of officers for 1939, and is as follows: Mrs. Richard Parnell, Mrs. L. M. Richardson, Mrs. Ida Fanning, Mrs. H. W. Ballard, Miss S. Miller.

An announcement was made of the W. A. annual presbytery convention to be held on November 23 in Millbrook. Mrs. G. C. Staples and Mrs. James M. Spencer were appointed as delegates. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

Local Delegates Attend Meeting Of Hospital Aids

At the annual meeting of the Women's Hospital Aids Association, Province of Ontario, which was held Tuesday, November 1, in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, Mrs. C. W. Rhynas of Burlington was re-elected president.

In her official address, Mrs. Rhynas credited the steady and quiet growth of the organization since hospital aids were founded in 1865, to the fact that unity of purpose, careful study of problems and enlarged vision has characterized their activities. The advantages, opportunities and contacts afforded by the annual gathering of women interested in the vital problems of hospitalization, are endless in spiration and knowledge and only limited by the individual's power of absorption.

Among the youngest affiliated groups received were the Women's Hospital Aid to the Nicholl's Hospital, Peterborough, the Women's College Hospital Auxiliary, the Cradle Club of the Women's College Hospital, Toronto; the five groups of hospital aids to the Mount Sinai Hospital Aid, Toronto; Women's Hospital Aid to St. John's Convalescent Hospital, Newtonbrook.

Delegates representing thousands of voluntary hospital aid workers, from Windsor to Ottawa, were present. Peterborough delegates were as follows: Mrs. James Wharry, President of the Peterborough Women's Hospital Aid, Mrs. Ivan Lillico Miss Evelyn Morrow, Mrs. J. K. Hughes, Mrs. Jacob Low, Mrs. C. L. Upper, Mrs. Joe Detcher, Mrs. Walter Blackwell, Mrs. V. Morphet, Mrs. S. J. Graham.

At the conclusion of the session, the Peterborough group met with Mrs. E. M. Leeson and other delegates to view the exhibits of hospital equipment on display.

High Heels No Aid To Longevity

The doctor said it is possible to live 100 to 120 years, but "no one has a right to expect it if she will wear high heels, eat pie, stay up later than 10 p.m. and drink less than 10 glasses of water each day. We have no right to ask for years if we are unwilling to take care of the body."

A brisk woman of spare build, Dr. Janson said she was born in a log cabin in Southern Minnesota and learned to handle an axe and a saw as a small child. Hard work never killed anybody, she believes.

SNAILS CAN FAST

For Bad Winter Coughs, Mix This Remedy at Home

Quick Relief. Big Saving. So Easy. No Cooking.

This well known recipe is used by many thousands of housewives, because they have found that it gives them a much more dependable remedy for distressing winter coughs. It's so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a compound containing Norway Pine, in concentrated form, well known for its effect on throat membranes.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. It's no trouble at all, and takes but a moment. No cooking needed.

Put the Pinex into a 16 oz. bottle and add your syrup. This gives you 10 ounces of cough remedy, unusually quick-acting and dependable, and you get four times as much cough medicine for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be surprised by the way it takes hold of severe coughs, giving quick, satisfying relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please in every way.

May Be The Reason

Premier Chamberlain announced that he intended to bring the accord with Italy before the House of Commons at once and make it effective as soon as possibly. By the terms of that understanding Britain recognized the Italian conquest of Ethiopia, and it has much to do with settling affairs which were in dispute regarding the Mediterranean.

There is probably a good enough reason why Premier Chamberlain desires to have this accord settled. It has been in existence several months but it has never been made operative. If there is urgency at the moment it is undoubtedly on account of the situation which has been developing in Palestine and that situation is not at all pleasant nor is it an easy one to handle. The Arabs at the moment are plainly anti-British in their outlook and in their plans, and if possible they would turn their feelings into a holy war. They resent the plan sponsored by the British for bringing more Jewish people into Palestine; they regard them as their age-long foes and believe Britain is giving them the best of it.

If Britain is going to be able to handle that situation it is much better that she have a thorough understanding with Italy regarding the Mediterranean and the Suez canal route. That may be the very reason why Premier Chamberlain has stated his intention to bring the matter before the House of Commons. And as reasons go it looks like a sufficiently strong one.

Rather a Coincidence

Rather strange that two editors should write about the same thing—one in Chicago and the other in London. In the most recent issue of Everybody's Magazine, London, which has a circulation close to one million copies, the suggestion is made that it is time Col. Charles Lindbergh went home.

In Chicago the Daily News speaks of Joseph P. Kennedy, the United States ambassador to London, and suggests it is time for him to come home.

The feeling of the English editor about Lindbergh is that he has become somewhat of a sore spot and a trouble maker. While the recent crisis was brewing he visited Germany, France, Czechoslovakia and Russia. It is recalled that he returned to England and informed the Cliveden set that Germany was superior in the air and that Russia was a confused place, and the Englishman concludes my saying "Though we have no wish to be rude we would feel happier if he went home."

In the case of Joseph Kennedy the editor of the Chicago News fears he has succumbed to the British view. He has been making speeches and the Chicago man notes he is not talking like a real son of the American revolution, but his utterances are such that they smack too much of what is currently accepted as the view of the British government.

And that of course is not a new complaint. It has been urged against others who went to London to represent United States. They may have started from Washington fortified by love of country and well filled even to the point of saturation that all men are born free and equal, and they may have been determined that they would represent true democracy in a land of a modified form of royalty. But old London has its own way of dealing with these U. S. ambassadors. It does not rush at them by way of frontal attack; rather it engulfs them slowly but surely. It has a charm of its own and the spinal column of the man from Washington is inclined to lose some of its rigidity. Possibly he is even made to feel that he is actually helping to run the British government as well as represent the views of official Washington.

Mr. Kennedy's latest offence in the eyes of the Chicago paper is that he made an address which sounded too much like something which Premier Chamberlain might have said so the government at Washington ought to call him back. So it is in one day we have an Englishman writing that Col. Lindbergh really ought to pack up his traps and go home, and an editor in Chicago advising that the U. S. ambassador in London should be called home. And possibly both gentlemen will have the extreme effrontery to stay just where they are.

Rather a Nice Way

Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett who resigned as leader of the Opposition in the Canadian parliament has not accepted his monthly cheque for that post since August, and each month the cheque for $833 has been made payable to Dr. Manion, his successor in office.

Dr. Manion, according to ruling is not yet a member of the House of Commons because he has not yet taken his seat for the city of London, but at Mr. Bennett's direction the salary as leader of the Opposition has become his property.

And that is rather a nice way to do business. It might be argued that Mr. Bennett is a wealthy man and does not need the salary, but that hardly covers the situation as it has often enough been found that those who were possessed of considerable wealth were keen enough to keep on increasing their holdings. Possibly the most pleasant thing about the situation is that Mr. Bennett made the arrangement himself.

The Slow Driver

A correspondent submits the following:

"Will you settle a dispute by saying whether or not there is any section of our laws which says a person is guilty of an offence when driving a car slowly. Just how slow would one have to go before coming under a penalty?"

There are a good many slow drivers who never come under the penalty because it would require evidence to show that the driving had been done at such a rate that it was blocking the reasonable movement of traffic. There is no speed limit named which can be termed "slow driving range." The wording in the Highway Traffic Act is:

"No vehicle shall be driven upon a highway at such a low rate of speed as to impede or block the normal and reasonable movement of traffic thereon except when such slow rate of speed is necessary for safe operation having regard to all circumstances."

We believe our correspondent will agree that prosecutions and court sentences under that clause would not be frequent. A heavy truck going up a long hill may be proceeding at a rate of not over 10 miles an hour, and it will be holding up a line of traffic, but we doubt if a charge of slow driving could be launched successfully because the claim would be that the truck was doing all it possibly could in the way of speed. There are few operators of cars who have not found themselves in a long line, the pace for which was being set by some slow driver. The result is that there is an effort on the part of all the other drivers in that line to start cutting in to try and get ahead of the slow driver. And right there is where danger starts.

Losing a Customer

L. H. Dingman, president of the St. Thomas Times-Journal, was in Vancouver doing some visiting, and when it came time to go home he found he could leave in the evening and after spending four nights and three days on the train he would be back once more in the old home town. A little more questioning produced the information he could be home in 24 hours by plane. The plane apparently looked all right with two motors a weight of 12 tons and capacity for 21 passengers. So in he went and the St. Thomas newspaperman was home in a day.

We record that as showing that air travel must be winning its quest for traffic. L. H. Dingman is somewhat of a pastmaster at going places. He would feel at home in London, Berlin, or elsewhere abroad and there are not many sections of this continent with which he is not familiar. He always feels better when there is a train or a liner ticket in his pocket, but he has always gone by train. He has a car of course but we doubt whether he ever drives it himself. And now he has found how to hop from the Pacific coast to St. Thomas in a day. The rail men will have to sit in conference for they may lose a customer whose total mileage with them must by now have reached into impressive figures.

A Girl of 10 Married

It is hard for people in our district to understand the wedding of a man of 34 years to a girl of 10; hard also to believe that the girl's mother was a party to it by swearing that her child was 14 years of age. That happened in Kentucky, and when officers went to make an arrest they found no person at home. In this instance home is a cabin in which there are no windows and where the bride and groom live with three other relatives in two rooms. Shocking of course.

But that is in Kentucky and we dare say there have been hundreds of similar cases of which nothing has been heard. The law of 14 years is only of recent vintage and people resent it. Early marriage has been the order in that strange land for a long time and they do not have divorces there. Like a good many other people who do strange things they want to be left alone to live their lives as their folk did before.

Passing through the hill country it is possible to gather some idea of what life is like there. The houses which cling to a spot on a hillside are crude things; they appear to have a chimney at one end and the house has been built around that. There is no beauty in the house or in its surroundings. Dull barren, and ugly the whole thing seems. There is a small patch of corn and most of that goes to a still which is secluded some place in the mountains. The family may own a couple of hogs but they are probably out in the bush rooting for acorns and a living in general. If there is a cow it is thin. If there are children around—and that is generally the case—they are also thin and often enough sick.

If officers failed to find the bride of ten years and the husband when they called at the cabin they may look a long time because the mountain folk in Kentucky do not like officers and they have their own system of sending out warnings when any of them enter the district. There is no desire on the part of these people to work and accomplish anything in particular. The man has a good time when he takes his long-barrelled shotgun and spends the day in the bush and manages to shoot a squirrel. If they ever come out of their hidings to go to town it is when there is a court case about some boundary dispute and that lasts for days as the boundaries are poorly marked.

And yet strange as it may seem the people who inhabit the hills in Kentucky are descended from some of the original stock which pioneered United States. A strange, sullen and uncommunicative people they are; they resent the coming of a stranger; they are poor and they apparently want to stay that way; they are lazy and shiftless and they have no desire to make a change. Regardless of what the law says and what social conventions of civilization recognize as proper standards, the people of the Kentucky hills will see nothing wrong in a girl of ten years getting married to a man of 34.

NOTE AND COMMENT

After all modern plumbing has taken a great deal of the fun out of Hallowe'en.

Premier Hepburn says he fears Canada may become another Ethiopia, and that set us to wondering who is going to play the part of Selassie.

Woman in Berlin 107 years of age reads newspapers without glasses, and says she has always read newspapers. So she's getting her reward now.

One hears a great deal about the way in which sweepstakes support the Irish hospitals, but the truth is that only 13 per cent of all the millions taken in ever reaches the hospitals.

Pittsburg man was arrested by police because he was wearing a three-foot snake for a necktie. He was described as a tall man but of course there would not be much from the necktie up.

The brand of weather this province has been enoying makes it difficult to believe that Christmas is less than two months away and the professional hockey schedule starts this week.

Unemployed Toronto veterans who fished with a net in one of the lagoons were allowed to go on a one-hour sentence. We have an idea the magistrate who presided has a very large heart.

London man managed to escape from prison and had liberty for three weeks, for which he will pay by serving two years. As investments go that was about as poor as any we have ever seen in the board room of the broker's office.

It is surely not given out as a matter of news that the Government and opposition members of the committee which investigated the Quebec power contracts have failed to agree on their report.

As soon as news goes out that auto plants in Detroit are taking on men there is a movement toward that city. Mayor Reading warns people to stay away as there are 18,000 unemployed in his city. Whether people pay attention to wornings we do not know, but there is good reason for Detroit's chief magistrate saying a word in season.

The suggestion was made at a gathering of educationists that the government should pay the entire cost of schooling. Now there is an idea worth exploring and the exploration leads to the belief that if the government paid the bill it would proceed to take the money from the people. And that is the way school costs and all else are paid now.

CHANGED

(By A. R. K.)

¶ Long Jonas loved to agitate, and chant aloud his hymn of hate, for those he called oppressed; his heart was burdened so he said, for those who lived in fear and dread, and he was much distressed.

¶ Long Jonas talked each chance he got, he'd really rather talk than not, he covered quite a range; the system that we had was wrong, it hurt the poor and helped the strong, there'd have to be a change.

¶ And Jonas talked that way so grand, he found himself in great demand, as busy as could be; they got out bills both here and there, and it was quite a big affair, and Jonas charged a fee.

¶ We must divide the wealth he said, so all could have their hocks and bread, likewise a place to sleep; the poor folk had to have their turn, his words would kindle fire and burn, and make the people creep.

¶ Long Jonas had an Uncle Steve, who on his death had wealth to leave, in cash and many homes; of Jonas and his wife he'd thought, they say the share that Jonas got, was forty thousand bones.

¶ Long Jonas seemed to change his view, on sharing wealth that others grew, forgot each noun and verb; he's living on his interest now, and owns a home, a brindle cow—and never says a word.

Many dairymen paint their barn walls with aluminum paint to repel flies; experiments, however, have shown that the procedure has little or no value.

THE BREN INQUIRY.

(I. N. S. in Ottawa Journal)

THE CASUAL OBSERVER of the Davis Royal Commission's inquiry stands as much chance of learning what it is all about as he would if he stood in No Man's Land with all 7,000 of the Bren guns in question popping at him.

Mr. Justice Davis took the words right out of our month when at one point he said there were so many committees and councils involved that he was becoming confused. He proceeded to get them cleared up to his own satisfaction but we were left in contemplation of the drab surroundings and the people therein.

There was a minimum of what venerable Mr. Hellmuth called "dog-fight" that morning as Col. Ralston had the floor and a mass of documents through which even the aggressive Col. Drew was able to penetrate only on rare occasions. As we left the Commission's secretary, Paul Belcourt was listing the 279th exhibit and the Government's counsel showed no signs of fatigue. Col. Drew has a strong suspicion much of this stuff is "utterly unexplainable" padding, and says so at frequent intervals. But Col. Ralston has a way with him and a secretary, Miss Watters, at his back who is apparently able to produce these things so long as there's anyone there to read them.

ESTRANGEMENT GROWING

At the growing rate of estrangement between the Roman Catholic church and the Nazis, it will not be long before the followers of that church, all over the world will be aligned against the Nazis, a condition already present with the Jews.

A WORKER'S VIEWS

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—I would like to make some comments on the Port Colborne Shoe Workers' strike. Everybody knows a strike is only caused when an employer refuses to pay his employees a decent rate of pay, and lately it seems to be the tactics among some plants to close up the plant when a strike occurs and after a time when they think the workers are at the end of the resources, to open up with the announcement, those who wish to work could do so under police protection.

Mr. Conant, the Attorney General, says no expense or effort will be spared to keep law and order. But why don't the government go further back and see what causes the strike? The low wages. A minimum wage was supposed to come through several months ago, but as usual nobody has seen it yet. The government won't spare any expense in suppressing strikes, but when it comes to establishing sound legislation, no money can be found. About interference on the part of the strikers I admit that is against the law and should not occur, but that is only human nature for people to lose their heads when they see a minority group of workers returning and thereby breaking the strike.

When a strike occurs the Government should step right in and set up a board of arbitration, and make a settlement of some sort, thus saving both sides loss of wages and business. The only thing that will help the workers is a labor government. Such as in New Zealand that guarantees all classes a fair living. Unemployment is cut down to a few thousand throughout the whole country, and while over here it increases.

Every day you can find crowds of young people at the factory gates trying to get a job and make a decent living. In the States a good set of labor laws have been put in effect in favor of the workers. Labor is already gaining. And signs are encouraging out West, and the day will come when Ontario will fall in line, and all of Canada will have a working-man's government.

THE ARABIAN CRISIS

Edtor Examiner:

Sir,—Whatever the British Empire proposes to do for imperial defence must be done now. It is not a question of the defence of anyone part but of all. The Arabian crisis is something that has been developing for a long time and the efforts of Mr. Chamberlain to engage the support of Italy, Germany and France in a consolidation of European and imperial thought and action will yet stamp him as the greatest British statesman since Pitt. Had the recent crisis developed into war the Arabs would have sprung upon Britain's back and have early destroyed her across. Asia connection with India by air and auto, have left the Suez canal an impossibility and have destroyed British and imperial interests in the East. At one blow the British Empire would have been shattered. The clash of the Arab race extending from India to the Atlantic as it does.

With Britain is soon to be a war of the first magnitude and it is feared will be something dangerous if not disastrous. The friendly support of Italy and Germany is a matter of vital necessity and even if it goes no further than at present, releases Britain so that they can grapple with a most menacing situation.

• Any Chance To Save China?

FOLLOWING a formula which oddly enough imposes itself upon public utterances of every chief of state — including Herr Hitler and Signor Mussolini as well as Japan's militarists—the President committed the United States to strength of arms for defence of the Western Hemisphere. But he resolutely denied any reliance upon militarism, or any aggressive designs.

The world to which Mr. Roosevelt spoke saw Japan take the two last strongholds of Chinese resistance in coastal China. Canton's rapid capture at the end of last week severed Hankow's lifeline of supplies. The capital quickly succumbed. Japanese troops entered Hankow on Tuesday, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek fled inland to organize new lines of defense.

Japan controls every major Chinese city, from regal—and unbombed—Peiping in the north to Shanghai, Nanking, and Hankow along the Yangtse River and more than 500 miles inland, as well as Canton, the southern metropolis. In addition, all of Manchuria and Jehol, and most of Chahar, is under Japanese occupation.

An Island Empire of 60,000,000 population says the Christian Science Monitor, has extended its reach since 1931 over 34,000,000 in Manchuria, 28,000,000 in Formosa and Korea, and potentially over China's 450,000,000. An island Empire of 148,756 square miles area in 1894 has expanded at China's expense to include 602,078 square miles of territory already welded into the Empire in Formosa, Korea, and Manchuria. Another 500,000 square miles in China Proper is under military occupation, but not yet consolidated for permanent government.

Already this makes Japan's empire equal in area to half of the United States and in population to half of the British Empire. Should Japan succeed in controlling all of China by strategic organization, another 2,000,000 square miles would be added to the Empire, a grand total of 3,250,000 square miles. The continental United States has 3,026,789 square miles.

Old China hands said Japan faces an insuperable task. Others, admitting that China has absorbed all past conquerors, admitted also that Japan, as an Island Empire, may be astute enough to keep its directive centers at a safe distance. Former conquerors made the mistake of moving their courts into China.

Also, the instruments of imperial control were never before so highly developed for use against a people whose sole means of defense is personal resistance by boycotts or non-co-operation. Destruction of the unifying influence of the Chinese Nationalist Government would leave no agent in sight to organize secret boycotts, guerilla warfare, and passive resistance. This explains War Minister Itagaki's statement that the war against Chiang Kai-shek will be carried to a finish.

THE IMPORTANT PART.

(Owen Sound Sun-Times)

HOW OFTEN one notices that a good story is told—and the most important part left out!

Henry Farrell, of Windsor, wanted to collect $5 which he claimed Mrs. Marie Bruder owed him. He went to her office. No results. So he went outside and sat down on the running board of her car. Her son jumped in the car and drove "all over town" at 70 miles an hour, swerving from side to side, trying to shake him off, and at one time coming so close to another car that Farrell's shirt was torn off. The ride ended in a fight.

In police court a charge of assault against Farrell was dismissed and young Bruder was punished for reckless driving.

That's all the story we get. Not one word to say whether Henry collected the $5.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

IN THE BEGINNING God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form, and void: and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. And God said, Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters. And God made the beast of the earth after his kind, and cattle after their kind, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness.... So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them....And God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good....

But there went up a mist from the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground. And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul. And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed. And out of the ground the Lord God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air; and brought them unto Adam to see what he would call them: and whatsoever Adam called every living creature, that was the name thereof.—Gen. 1, 1, 2, 6, 25, 26, 27, 31; ii, 6-8, 19.

CHAPTER

BOB AND Marjorie had been gone for an hour when Ronald telephoned. The spring tone of the air had yielded to rain and great drops were falling rhythmically on the dormer windows. Judy was certain that it would be Ronald's voice that would say "Judy?" when she picked up the phone.

"I wanted to wait for you," he said, "but I had an engagement uptown. Some day maybe I can show you how grateful I was for your trust and hospitality tonight."

"You've shown me long before this how important faith is," Judy answered. "Was everything all right? Did your—visitor find his way up the mountainside to the fourth floor?"

Ronald hesitated. "He didn't come."

"Oh, I'm sorry."

"It doesn't matter. Maybe it's better."

Judy spoke quickly. "Ronald isn't there any way that I can help? I'm not afraid, you know."

"Just keep on believing in me, won't you, Judy? That counts most." His voice was troubled.

"Ronald, your friends are with you en masse. You know that!" She emphasized her words to force them into his consciousness.

"If you are, I won't miss those who are dropping out," he answered.

He did not ask her to meet him for lunch. There was no suggestion of dinner. Alone in the quiet room, with the dead telephone in her hand, Judy felt a heart-sick pang because she had refused his invitation that day he was so tired. But there had been Abbey—Where was she now? How was she taking this?

Ronald's flowers came in the morning. There was a cool green box, and in the green misty paper within there were old-fashioned flowers— marigolds, jonquils, pinks, pansies, violets and yellow roses. There were enough for a low vase and two bowls.

Sorting them, before she drank her fruit juice and coffee, Judy remembered that Bob's flowers had stopped. She stood still, hands filled with blossoms, trying to remember when last that small red box had made its morning appearance. Until now she had not missed it.

You could let one man glide out of your life and never know his ship was speeding down the harbor until someone told you about it. Yet, if another man turned a corner—oh, any corner—and walked a block out of your path, you knew it and your heart trailed him feverishly.

What was love? Was it only chemistry, a divine chemistry, that made one person infinitely dear?

The clock was striking 8:30 and she was due at 9, so she hurried, she would call Ronald later and thank him for the flowers.

But it was late afternoon when she did. Ronald was not in. He would call her, the secretary said. She asked Judy to wait a moment, and presently the warm tones of Mr. Heaton came flowing across the wire.

"Judy, your father is anxious to have an interview with you," he explained. "Could you make it at my office some time tomorrow?"

"Is it important?" Judy asked. "Couldn't he write me?"

"Judy, you mustn't be too hard on him. He's had a great worry on his shoulders. He's done a monumental feat in making such a swift comeback. You have a father of whom to be proud."

A father who gave my governesses checks to buy me dolls that could walk and dolls that could talk; a father who sent me to the best schools and camps but never once took me hiking because he liked being with me; no, that wasn't quite fair. Before Sarita had come along, when she was only six and seven, he had taken her fishing and told her stories.

After that he had changed. Oh, a women could do a great deal to a man, especially a man who was not strong enough to follow the way he charted when his eyes were wide and his path clear!

She might have weakened but Mr. Heaton was saying:

"People are talking, Judy. They wonder why you have broken your relations with your parents. Your father is deeply hurt. Sarita is being censured, and that pains your father greatly."

Not, am I lonely? Am I hurt? Sarita is being censured. The moment was gone. Mr. Heaton had lost his cause with his own last argument. Judy smiled a little Not a happy smile. Not a young smile. An old tragic, cynical lifting of the lips. Mr. Heaton was a lawyer. He should have known better than to overplead his case.

"Won't you tell my father that I'm well and happy and fairly successful? I appreciate his interest —but I mustn't trouble him."

She hung up.

Judy had been able to obtain a job for Coralee Myers in the fitting department. Coralee, deeply grateful, came by as Judy sat at the desk.

"Miss Rogers, are you ill?" she asked quickly.

"No, I'm fine. I was just thinking how nice it must be to have a family." She smiled wanly.

Coralee hesitated. "You've always said you wanted to meet mine. Would you come out some night for dinner?"

"I love to. How soon?"

"Tomorrow night?"

"I'll be waiting for it to be tomorrow."

Coralee hesitated. "Our house is poor, you know. My father has a queer kind of job. He can do it at home while his leg heals. He's a penman. I mean he does fancy writing for diplomas and things for some company." She was apologetic and proud both.

"That's splendid," Judy said gently. Men who couldn't make an intelligible scrawl, but who had gone through a process of training to achieve that scrawl, wrote their names on limitless checks. Coralee's father could cross his t's and round his o's and had no papers of his own on which to put the perfect copy.

In a burst of sympathy for Coralee Judy went shopping when she left the studio. She knew how many small children there were in that New Jersey household.

She bought a yellow sweater, two strands of beads, some dolls and an electric train and a box of candy. She asked to have the packages delivered to the studio the next day as she could go directly home from work with Coralee. But on the subway she remembered that the poor are proud.

The Myers family was offering its hospitality, graciously and happily. If she came with her arms filled with largesse which could not be repaid with a pork chop and a baked potato, they would be hurt.

There was no way to explain to them that they were giving her more than she brought them. That they let her share a home, that they taught her that families did live together. She would take the candy to them, and cancel the rest of the order.

Some friends had invited Judy to join them at the theatre that evening, and she was nearly ready when her doorbell rang.

Thinking that the people were early, she went to the button which released the door. The bell rang again. Apparently the latch had not released. She pressed hard, and went into the hall to look down but behind her came the insistent ringing.

Oh, of course! She was stupid. They were waiting for her to talk through the speaking tube, something she seldom did. She said: "Yes?"

A strange masculine voice answered: "Is Ronald Birrell there?"

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

The two children—and Knarf and Hanid, the shadows of the children —were sitting on the grass under the old oak tree. It was a very old oak tree was growing. It had thin wide. On the ground, just under the end of the farthest branch, a little oak tree was growing.: It had thin little branches and only half a dozen leaves.

Just then a breeze came along. The next moment the leaves in the big oak began rustling and, to the surprise of Knarf and Hanid, they distinctly heard the words: "And how do you feel this morning, my child?"

"Listen " Knarf whispered excitedly to Hanid. "The big oak is speaking to the little one."

"I feel very well, Mother," the little tree answered, rustling 's leaves in the same way. "I think I've grown an inch since last night. Do I look any taller?"

"Yes, my dear, you look quite a bit taller."

"Will I soon be as tall as you, Mother?"

Not Very Soon.

"Yes, but not very soon."

"Oh, Mother!" the young tree cried at that moment. "The breeze is trying to pull away my leaves. Look how it is tugging at them! And last night, as the wind blew past, I heard it say: "Soon, little oak I will grow cold and sharp. I will tug all your leaves off no matter how hard you try to hold them.' Will it do that, Mother Oh! I am afraid."

"There is nothing to be afraid of,"

"Listen! The big oak is speaking."

said the old oak in a low, gentle voice. "The wind will indeed come and tug the leaves from your tiny arms. Then the snow will fall and cover you up. The birds will go away. The butterflies will be gone, and you will not hear the crickets chirp. But you must not be afraid. You must close your eyes and sleep. And then one day the sun will shine brightly again. The snow will melt. You will wake again. There will be little green buds on your arms. Then the buds will open and become leaves. And you will be happy again."

"I'm happy now, Mother. I'm not afraid any longer....not afraid any longer...."

Then the breeze died down and the old oak and the little oak were silent.

Looking Back On This Date

"Sweet William," the only "Cockney" to ever be premier of Canada, died on this day (Nov. 2) in 1877. He was the Hon. William Henry Draper, chief justice of Ontario. He had been for 10 years practically the last general in command of the political forces arrayed against full responsible government.

In 1837 he was called by Bond Head to aid the Family Compact in its flight against W. L. Mackenzie and the moderate Reformers. Both were alike to him. He was a Tory and wanted no reform. During the rebellion year he was solicitor-general aiding Attorney-General Hagerman but two years later himself was the legal officer of the crown and as such prosecuted those arrested for participation in the rebellion.

It was he who presented to the Upper Canada Assembly the proposed terms of union of the provinces, and it was he who, when the union was accomplished, became the head of the first ministry under Lord Sydenham. In that latter capacity he had a difficult task, with a strong Reform opposition from Upper Canada under Baldwin and Hincks and a solid block from Lower Canada.

Within the two years of his administration he passed useful bills as to education and municipal government, which had, however to be amended by the Reformers to be workable. In 1842 he abandoned his office and made way for the first LaFontaine-Baldwin ministry, retiring himself to the Legislative council. But in 1843 he resumed office and made the last attempt of any public man to govern this country without the aid of the French Canadians. Failing in this he retired to the bench, where he sat for 20 years.

He has been described as "a man of great ability, eloquent and persuasive of speech, skilled as a parliamentary manager and dexterous in the game of politics." But even his dexterity could not confine Canada to the swaddling clothes of governments by a governor. In the end he had to accept government of the people by the people. As a judge he was eminent and some of his judgments are regarded as classics by the bar of Upper Canada.

A Help To Those Past Middle Age

When men and women get past middle age their energy and activity, in many instances, begin to decline, and their general vitality is on the wane.

Little sicknesses and ailments seem harder to shake off than formerly, and, here and there, evidences of a breakdown begin to appear.

Now is the time when those who wish to maintain their health and vigor, and retain their energy unimpaired should take a course of Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills.

They brace up and invigorate the system, and help stall off the decrepitude of advancing years.

Assessment Appeals Reviewed By Court Of Revision; Few Requests Are Allowed

An appeal of Dominion Woollens and Worsteds, Limited, for revision of the assessment of their Auburn Mills and general property was adjourned by the Court of Revision last night.

The present assessment of the Auburn plant is $7,000 on land and $88,000 on buildings, total $95,000, plus $57,000 business assessment. The members of the Court are John A. Harstone, chairman, Thomas C. Ephgrave and Fred Finnie, W. F. Huycke, K.C., city solicitor, and W. J. Henry, Assessor, and Max R. Sloan, assistant assessor, represented the interests of the municipality.

Business assessment of Canadian Ventilation Shades, Limited, was reduced from $5,100 to $4,730 because of the fact that the company did not take over the Reid Street premises in the old William Hamilton building in effect of business until March of this year.

Sell for Assessment.

H. C. Allison, 526 Bolivar Street, assessed at $2,730 on his house and $320 on the land, said he would sell the property at the assessed value, although he paid $3,150 for it eighteen months ago. Mr. Harstone said he did not consider the house and lot was over assessed at $3,050. Mr. Allison replied that nearby houses were assessed for $2,600 and $2,700. He felt his assessment was too high in comparison with them. The court confirmed the assessment.

W. J. Clancy, owner of the house at 281 Townsend Street, which rents at $15 a month and previously $14 a month, claimed that his assessment of $1,450 was too high. The assessment was confirmed.

T. H. Waller informed the court that his house at 479 Sherbrooke Street was listed as being occupied by a Separate School supporter. The children of the tenant early in the year attended the Public School and at the time the assessment was made he had a notice to move in May. Mr. Waller asked that his house, occupied by a Public School supporter, be so listed in the assessment roll. His request was granted.

Water from Armour Hill seeping into and around his house that cost $3,400 and is assessed for $2,250, was the reason advanced by P. G. Dinesen for a reduction of his assessment. Water had damaged his house, Mr. Dinesen said. His request was not allowed.

Allocation of school taxes was associated with the appeal of Miss Phoebe Fife, Aylmer Street North, who said she occupied five of the eight rooms of her house. The other three are let to R. K. Loescher. Miss Fife said she paid all taxes, but according to the rolls the assessment was proportioned on a fifty-fifty basis. The court revised the proportion to 75-25 in compliance with Miss Fife's appeal.

Appealed Too Soon.

Reginald Harran decided when he received his assessment notice for 1939 that he wouldn't delay in filing his complaint. It seems, however, in a strict regard for the regulations that his petition should have been sent to the court during the period from October 1 and 14. Because of the customary practice of hearing appeals that predate October, the court proceeded with Mr. Harran's case. He said he was overcharged at $600 for land bought last December for $425. Assessment was reduced $100 to $500.

Bought House at Auction.

Benjamin Johnston said he paid $600 at a public auction for the house at 415 Bethune Street a year ago. He spent more than $100 on it, and "I'd sell it to-day for $1,500." To Mr. Henry he admitted that he had listed at $2,000 with a real estate agent. Three families occupied it when it was assessed, and at that time the rent was $30 a month. The income, however, declined because of its intermittency.

The property was assessed at $2,500, and Mr. Henry reduced it to the present valuation of $2,200.

Mr. Johnston also requested that the assessment be credited to the Public Schools. This phase of the appeal was allowed, but on the count of over-assessment it was dismissed.

Of the former assessment of $8,500 the Charlotte Street property owned by J. T. Braund, Loblaw Groceterias were assessed, by agreement, $5,345 and Mr. Braund $3,155 as the result of Loblows' purchase of the 37-foot strip adjoining their present store.

The application was allowed on the terms of the agreement.

Clinton (Mick) Magee of the "Orfuns" scored a touch in appealing on behalf of his mother for a reduction of the assessment on her seven-house terrace 146-158 London Street. Each house is assessed for $1,200, total $8,400, and the rent has been $16.50 a house. The court granted a reduction of $55 on each house, and on the whole property from $8,400 to $8,015.

George A. Rowbotham, 584 Bollvar Street, considered that the $2,700 assessment of his new house was too high in comparison with other properties on the street. The house about $3,200. His lot is lower than the others and entailed some drainage costs.

The court declined to alter the assessment.

War On Cancer

Chickens in Leading Role

"Chickens have played a large part in Sir Frederick's experiments, and between 1928 and 1934, 1,768 birds were used. Of these, one bird in 164 had become resistant. A resistant bird was one in which a well-established tumor regressed; if a second tumor developed when more cancer tissue was transplanted, this also regressed.

"Further transplantations of cancer tissue did not result in the development of tumors, and the birds did not die.

"During the past 10 years, according to Sir Frederick, one bird in 50 showed 'some signs' of resistance. Experiments on mice showed that one in 14 proved resistant to a certain type of tumor, and one in 114 to another type. It was too early to predict results, Sir Frederick emphasized, but even this degree of resistance was sufficient to encourage research workers in their efforts."

Battle Front Widened

New measures aimed at control of the cancer scourge in Canada—by poplar education and setting up of medical study groups in all large hospitals—were on the way to realization today as the specific outcome of two meetings here yesterday.

A concerted program of informative publicity and education as to early symptoms and possibility of cures was determined upon by the grand council of the eight-months-old Canadian Society for the Control of Cancer.

On the purely scientific side, directors of the Board of Cancer Control of the Canadian Medical Association proposed organization of study groups in all hospitals with 100 beds or more (there are 127 in Canada) for the detailed study of the records of cancer patients throughout Canada, to shed light on symptoms and treatment.

May Commit Child Bride To Orphanage

PRESTONBURG, Ky., Nov. 2.—(AP)—County attorney F. Short sought today to commit Rosie Columbus, jailed child bride, to an orphanage.

As Short prepared to institute proceedings, authorities sought Fleming Tackett, 34-year-old coal miner, with a warrant charging him with the rape of Rosie, his bride, shown by medical records to be 10 years old.

In jail with the frail mountain girl was her 200-pound mother, Mrs. Grace Columbus, who told authorities when she got a license for the marriage of Rose and "Flem" that her child was 15 years old.

"I'm not married, I'm not married," Rosie said today. "My old man run off and left me."

Archie Tackett, Fleming's brother who is married to Fleming's former wife, volunteered that "I don't blame Flem for runnin' away the way things been stirrin' with everybody comin' around and askin' questions and makin' pictures."

The girl and her mother were jailed on warrants issued by county judge Edwin Hill. One charged Mrs. Columbus with conspiring with Tackett "in the crime of rape upon the person of Rosie Columbus." The other charged Rosie with being a delinquent child growing up "in idleness and crime."

Film Colony Mourns Robert Woolsey

Death came to the elder member of the Wheeler and Woolsey team at his Beach home here yesterday, after an 18 months' illness which had forced his retirement from pictures.

Bert Wheeler broke off a personal appearance tour at Chicago and flew here early to-day to attend the funeral services Friday.

Woolsey, 49, when he died, was a jockey at 15. But when Pink Star, later Kentucky Derby winner, fell with him and broke Woolsey's leg, he turned bellboy, and met actors who helped him get a start in vaudeville and stock.

He rose rapidly, playing in the Antipodes, South Africa, India and the Orient, as well as in the United States. His big chance came when Florenz Ziegfeld, who had used him in the Follies, teamed him and Wheeler in "Rio Rita" in 1928.

They were brought to Hollywood to do a movie of this musical extravaganza, comedy, which resulted in their being starred in "The Cuckoos," "Half Shot at Sunrise," "Peach o Reno," "Kentucky Kernels," and other comedies.

Newspapers Advocate Sir John Anderson Be Made Minister Of National Service

LONDON, Nov. 2—(CP-Havas).—Regret that Sir John Anderson, named to the Cabinet yesterday as Lord Privy Seal, will not bear the title of Minister of National Service, "and so enjoy the authority which such a title connotes," was expressed to-day by the Daily Telegram (Conservative).

"It may make no difference in practise," the newspaper said, "but on the other hand, it may, and the difference may affect the thoroughness of measures the Government is prepared to take to meet what is a national emergency.

"There is no reason to suppose the people of this country to-day would refuse to accept any demands that were made on them for better security of their homes and families, and that is why it is so much to be desired that the Government's demands should not be delayed."

"The real question is the performance of the Government in supplying us with means to protect ourselves against hostile attack," said the Daily Express (Independent). "Mr. Chamberlain can bring the confusion to an end by declaring that he means to equip us with weapons for defence and by disclosing the methods he means to adopt for securing the desired result."

Not Definite Enough.

According to the News-Chronicle (Liberal), "in itself Sir John Anderson's inclusion is a first-rate appointment, but the official appointment leaves it quite open what his duties are to be. Several problems call for solution by a man of his calibre—the proper organization of the nation's resources in men, materials, arms and so on. It is essential he be given proper authority for dealing with whatever task is assigned to him."

The Daily Mail (Independent) said: "Sir John is the right man in the right place. The country will wish him success in the formidable task awaiting him. The Government is pledged to speed up rearmament. The public will leave him to devise the best method of accomplishing it—as long as they are certain the job will be tackled without delay."

Windsor Bread War Has Loaves 5 Cents

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 1.—(CP)—Windsor bakers said today they have been unable to end the bread war here and bread continues to sell at five and six cents for a 24-ounce loaf. Negotiations between large and small bakeries here will continue this week.

The bread war started October 21, a month and a half after large and small bakeries here agreed on a price level of 12 cents for delivered white, wrapped bread of 24 ounces produced by the large firms and 11 cents for similar bread produced by small firms.

Three large firms reduced their price to nine cents on Oct. 21 for a 24-ounce loaf. Other large firms retaliated with production of a six-cent loaf October 23. The small bakeries of several days maintain their price of 11 cents a loaf, but when their efforts to reach an agreement with the large bakeries failed, several of the small bakeries produced a five-cent loaf on October 24, and more followed suit October 26.

Large and small bakeries said today their five-cent loaves and six-cent loaves, while weighing the same as their previous 11-cent and 12 cent loaves, were inferior in quality. They are continuing to produce loaves selling at 11 and 12 cents.

The Essex Couty Barkers' Association is continuing efforts to end the price war.

Britain Prepares For Armistice Day

LONDON, Nov. 2.—(CP-Havas).—Greart Britain prepared to-day to observe the 20th anniversary of the armistice as an occasion of thanksgiving for peace. The official program for the Nov. 11 celebrations was made public as follows:

At 10.30 a.m. war veterans, British Legion commanders and representatives of all armed and auxiliary branches which served in the Great War will march to Whitehall and range themselves on both sides of the raod.

Contingents of the regular and territorial armies, the Royal Air Force and the navy will also be arrayed in Whitehall, forming with the veterans' delegations an immense square around the Cenotaph.

Within the square will be placed the choirs of the Royal Chapel and Westminster Abbey.

Shortly before 11 a.m. the King will lay a wreath at the foot of the Cenotaph. Similar tribute will be paid by other members of the Royal family and representatives of the Dominions and Colonial governments and the armed services.

As Big Ben tolls the first stroke of 11, an artillery salvo will be fired in the court by the Horse Guards, and the United Kingdom will observe the traditional two-minute period of silence in homage to the Great War dead.

Afterwards a second salvo will be fired and R.A.F. trumpeters will sound the assembly call. The choirs will sing the hymn, "O God, Our Help in Ages Past."

A brief religious service will be celebrated by the Bishop of London, Rt. Rev. Arthur Winnington-Ingram followed by a reveille and the singing of "God Save the King."

More Nazi Business

QUEBEC, Nov. 2 (CP)—Larger exports to Germany next year "than ever before" are predicted by J. C. McGillivray, Canadian Trade Commissioner to Germany.

Here to confer with Quebec government officials on the province's eel shipments abroad, MacGillivray told reporters the "more Canada will take of German goods, the more Germany will open her doors to Canadian products."

Since 1935, he said, value of Canadian exports to Germany had climbed from $5,000,000 annually to $12,000,000.

DOURO

Poet Is Dreamer In World Today

(Examiner Correspondence.)

DOURO, Nov. 2.—A literary treat was given an appreciative audience in Harmony Hall on Friday evening when Rev. Dean O'Sullivan of Immaculate Conception parish, Peterborough, gave a lecture entitled "Poetry, the Hand-maid of Religion."

Prefacing his talk with a few introductory remarks, Dean O'Sullivan stated that poetry is not very popular in the modern world. The world of today is a very practical one and the poet is a dreamer, though "the poet lives forever but the toiler dies in a day." Also the world has lost its sense of the superhatural—it has lost its sense of physical security and its sense of spiritual security. Thus it has no heart for poetry. Beautiful passages from works of many poets were recited feelingly by twelve young ladies, Misses Isabel Towns, Evelyn O'Brien, Mary Leahy, Mary Walsh, Madeline Sullivan, Marcelle Leahy, Zita Kennedy, Frances Leahy, Mary O'Leary, Bridget Sheehan, Rita Heffernan and Agnes Hayes, forming a splendid finale to a scholarly and extremely interesting address.

Rev. J. J. McCarthy briefly introduced the speaker to the audience and at the close a hearty vote of thanks was rendered the speaker.

Child Genius Often Finds Handicaps

NEW YORK, Nov. 2—(AP). — A woman psychologist today warned parents not to be too pleased if their children show signs of precocious genius.

Professor Leta Hollingsworth of Columbia University's Teachers College said that children with an intelligence quotient above 150 —normal is about 100—are menaced by loneliness, an inferiority complex and a cynical attitude toward life.

"Happily gifted children are typically endowed with a keen sense of humor, and are apparently able to mature beyond cynicism in a majority of cases," she added.

Professor Hollingsworth said children with intelligence quotients between 130 and 150—indicating mental superiority but not genius—were best assured of health, personal happiness and leadership among their fellows.

Burning Buggy Prank Costs Funster $10

HAMILTON, Nov. 2 — (CP). — Hallowe'en cast a gloomy shadow for William Barlow, 27, in magistrate's court today when he was convicted of obstructing Constable Goddard in the execution of his duty last night, and fined $10 or 10 days in jail.

"Half the things done on Hallowe'en are unlawful," said Magistrate H. A. Burbidge, "but because of the occasion they are overlooked."

Constable Goddard testified that on King street east Hallowe'en celebrants set a four-wheeled buggy on fire, menacing autos parked on the south side of King street.

"It was overturned for the purpose of making a bonfire," the constable said. "I righted the buggy and drew it to the curb and told the crowd not to drag it around because of the danger of cars catching fire. The accused grabbed the shafts of the buggy and started to run off with it."

Husband Is Charged In Wife's Murder

UXBRIDGE, Middlesex, England, Nov. 2 — (CP-Havas). — Sydney G. Paul, accused of slaying his wife, Mrs. Claire Paul, at their villa in the Ruislip suburb of London a fortnight ago, appeared in police court here for the third time today.

Prosecutor L. N. Evans, countering Paul's declaration that a masked intruder committed the killing, announced police had found a blood-stained hatchet near the garage of the villa and alleged Paul's contention was fictitious.

Mrs. Paul, a 39-year-old Belgian woman, was found on the veranda of the villa Oct. 16, suffering from head wounds. She died a few hours later in a hospital. When he was arrested the husband said wounds he bore on his head had been inflicted by the alleged masked killer.

Faces Three Charges

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPELLFORD, Nov. 2.—Facing charges of breaking and entering, theft and reckless driving Gerald Dinghman, Campbellford youth appeared in Cobourg Tuesday where he was remanded. He is alleged to have stolen a car from T. E. Hall and Son's used car garage on Rear street on Sunday evening and when returning along highway No. 30 from his joyride early Monday morning the car left the road crashing into a culvert. Neither Dinghman nor his companion were injured. He was placed under arrest by Provincial Constable D. G. Campbell and latter taken to Cobourg.

Farmer Forgives Wife's Baby Hoax

CALGARY, Nov. 2—(CP).—Ferdinand Steiner says he forgives his 33-year-old wife her attempt to pass off as their own child a baby girl she sought to adopt.

"We both wanted a baby." Steiner told pilce and he gave her $600 for medical care when she came to Calgary a week ago, purportedly for confinement.

Steiner received a telegram last Wednesday at his home at Retlaw, 175 miles southwest of Calgary, saying: "Your wife gave birth to twins Oct. 24. Boy stillborn; girl survives. Wife's condition grave."

He came to Calgary but could not locate his wife and appealed for police assistance. She was found yesterday in a rooming house with a 10-day-old baby girl she claimed was her daughter. "There was no boy baby," she said and denied knowledge of the telegram.

The child was taken from her late yesterday and placed in a Calgary nursing home.

W. L. Arnott, Alberta child welfare department inspector, said Mrs. Steiner sought to adopt the baby under an assumed name but adoption papers had not been completed.

Asked if he would adopt the baby now, Steiner replied: "I don't know." Mrs. Steiner, mother of a 14-year-old boy by a former marriage, married Steiner a year ago.

"R.B." Sends Manion His $833 Cheques

OTTAWA, Nov. 2—(CP). — Since last August, Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett has turned over a $833 monthly cheque received as leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons to Mr. R. J. Manion, his successor as National Conservative leader, it was learned here last night.

Mr. Bennett acted entirely on his own volition. The annual salary amounts to $10,000. Dr. Manion was chosen Conservative leader at the party's national convention here last July, but not being a member of the Commons was not legally entitled to receive the salary of the Opposition leader. However, Mr. Bennett took immediate steps to have his cheque endorsed in Dr. Manion's favor.

The new Conservative chief is seeking a seat in the Commons and will contest the London by-election next Nov. 14.

Warsaw's Parsonage Committee Decides To Wire Church

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARSAW, Nov. 2.—At a meeting of the parsonage committee in the parsonage on Saturday evening last it was decided to wire the United church parsonage for electricity as the ladies of the congregations had sent word they would undertake the job.

Carmel was not represented, nor were members of the board present, but all had sent word they were quite willing to have it done.

Pupils' Party

Warsaw school children observed Hallowe'en on Monday afternoon in the school from three to four p.m. Several visitors were present. The windows were decorated with black and yellow cross stripes and black cats, all the pupils' work. The parade was splendid.

Those in costume were: George Payne, tramp; Gordon Tucker, hobo; Barbara Payne, old woman; Marion Davis, maid; Irene Sidey, folk girl; Joyce Digweed, rose; John Wilkinson, clock; Stanley Thompson and Keith Thompson, bride and groom; Mary Hendren, K.K.K.; Ruth Wilkinson, nurse; Dora Payne, Chinese girl; Shirley Sloan, fancy lady; Marion Sloan, fancy lady; Jimmie Sloan, Little Boy Blue; Allan Bell, Miss Muffett; Donalda Payne, old woman; Howard Darling, farmer; Mae Gollogher, pumpkin; Pearl Tucker, farmerette.

After the parade Everette Payne led in singing of the National Anthem. A short program followed for which Lenore McIlvena announced and Kenneth Drain gave the first number, a mouth organ selection. One of the numbers was Campbell's poem, "Indian Summer" and among the pictures on the wall were crayon pictures of the homes of early settlers, done on slightly mottled wallpaper, also there were pictures of the maple trees in Autumn, all the work of pupils.

Mr. Sloan spoke of the stencilling on the top of the blackboards, all done by pupils, the designs blocked by one of the boys.

Word has just been received that the baby born to Mr. and Mrs. Stanley iLttle last Friday has died. Mrs. Little is with friends in Havelock.

Mrs. Davis, Peterborough, and daughter were Sunday guests of Mrs. Davis' mother, Mrs. Mary Thompson.

Mrs. Olive La Porte is spending a few days at her mother's.

Three ministers, Rev. Mr. Kennedy, Rev. Mr. Williams and Rev. Mr. Murray have preached in the Presbyterian church for calls. Mr. Murray has just come from an hospital where he had been for some time. All were fine speakers. Dr. Munro and Mr. James Greystock are to attend a meeting of representatives from Westwood and Keene this week to decide on arrangements for a call.

Drew Life Sentence

BRANTFORD.—Cecil Courneyea, prisoner in Brant County Jail, drew a life sentence yesterday, but not for the crime that sent him behind the bars. Police disclosed to-day Courneyea, awaiting sentence on a reckless driving count, was married in jail.

Arena Project Shelved

SARNIA.—Sarnia's $75,000 arena project has apparently been shelved for this year, it was learned to-day. At a meeting of a citizens' arena committee last night, it was decided to withdraw the application to the City Council to submit a by-law to the ratepayers at the December election.

Civilized Humanity Sponging On Church, Enjoying Benefits Dr. Stuart Parker Declares

"It is high time the Christian communities broke out of their reticence and told the plain facts to those countless numbers of people who have a callous disregard for what Christianity has done for the world, and remind them of the debt they owe to the church," Rev. Dr. C. Stuart Parker of St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, told members of St. Paul's Men's Association on Tuesday night.

Introduced by Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr as an outstanding leader since coming to this country from Scotland several years ago, Dr. Parker declared that the greater part of civilized humanity not only to-day but in the years gone by was "sponging on the church, enjoying the benefits that Christian influence has wrought."

Given Sense of Security.

The speaker mentioned electric lights, motor cars, radios as only a few of the many achievements that have been created because religion gave the people a sense of security.

"The early history of the British Isles is a history of British religion. The major portion of the Imperial history is bound up with the church and the extension of the British Empire can be traced to the belief," Dr. Parker asserted, adding that it was the zeal of religion that sent Livingstone into unknown places.

The British constitution, that unwritten code under which we live, is an example of religion entering and swaying political life. It is nowhere written down that democracy shall be the principle under which we shall live," the speaker said, declaring that despotism—monarchial and baronial, under which our forefathers lived in the British Isles, was much wore than the iron-fisted rule of Hitler and Mussolini because those in control then were not as learned as the dictators of to-day.

Statesmen and politicians were not needed until democracy's battle was won for the people and democracy was something the church brought into being, the speaker asserted, recalling the good the introduction of the Bible into Britain had done and the fact that most of Cromwell's soldiers carried a version in their pocket as well as the teaching in their heads.

Evident in Education.

"Nowhere is the influence of religion more evident than in education. Education owes its encouragement and origin to religion," Dr. Parker declared, reminding his audience of how, 370 years ago, John Knox held the contention that part of the huge revenue of the Roman Church which was being superceded should be allocated to the education of the people. "The poor as well as the offspring of the nobility must receive learning," John Knox said, and it was the church that fought until this came about, the speaker reminded those present.

He cited India as a modern example of religion and the church, saying that it was the missionary schools rather than the Government institutions that were really educating the people.

Slavery was abolished through British religion, and other marks were left on the British character, namely, tolerance and the well-known British fair-play.

"It seems strange to foreign residents that we in Canada should provide police projection for propagandists practising and preaching sedition, but to begin by suppressing any thing or person will only result in bitterness. Suppression always leads downward."

"There is no sustained animosity in our nationality. When the enemy is down we are the first to help him up and bind his wounds. More and more are we treading the path of conciliators even until just the other day when Chamberlain was insulted in Munich."

Owe Everything to Religion.

The able speaker concluded his address by saying that in inumerable ways could it be proven that all we have to-day we owe to religion and the church, and that it is the duty of each person in Canada to stand solidly behind his religion.

Decorated in Hallowe'en colors and ornaments, the Sunday School Hall was well filled by members of the association and their wives, as well as a number of the Young People's Association who came upstairs to hear Dr. Parker.

Seated at the head table along with the speaker were George Macdonald, D. B. Faulkner, Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, and the president, Dr. J. J. Craig.

Following some community singing, a quartette composed of Messrs. Hope, Hall, Anderson, and Coleman sang an Irish medley, while George Coleman sang a solo to close the musical entertainment.

Reduction Asked In Assessments

Assessed at $34,950, two George street properties occupied by Fashion Craft and R. Simpson Co., Limited, can be bought for $26,000, W. C. Dawson of Toronto, representing the Toronto General Trust Corporation, administering the D. J. Lundy estate, told the Court of Revision Tuesday night.

W. J. Henry, assessor, replying to Mr. Dawson, said he took into consideration in the valuing of property for assessment purposes, the sum it might sell for.

"Do you think $34,950 could be got for those stores today?" Mr. Dawson asked.

If any purchaser wanted them, Mr. Henry said he thought they would bring that amount. One firm had recently paid $10,000 for a thirty-seven foot lot on Charlotte street.

"I don't know whether the two stores could be sold for $34,950 or not," Mr. Henry finally said, and added, "I think the property is well worth the money."

"Well, I'll sell it for $26,000 right this moment," Mr. Dawson concluded. The Court reserved judgment.

Business assessment on Agnew-Surpass Limited was reduced from $1,680 to $1,120 because the premises had been occupied for four months by the Buck shoe shore.

Mrs. Irene Henry was granted a reduction of $200 on the vacant lot adjoining her residence on Brock street. Parking of cars along the street was mentioned as one reason for appealing from the assessment of $1,470.

Assessment of $3,400 on the house at 51 McDonnel street owned by J. B. Horn was confirmed. W. P. Hetherington appeared for the owner.

Lakefield Man Is Bailed For Trial

Alfred Hudson, Lakefield second-hand dealer, was bailed for trial by consent this morning on a charge of manslaughter arising out of the fatal accident at the Water street crossing of the C.N.R. last week when Joseph Meagher, C.N.R. yard foreman received injuries in a collision between a motor truck and a C.N.R. tender, resulting in his death.

The preliminary hearing took place in police court before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell of Port Hope and only two witnesses were heard. Hudson was released on $4000 bail to appear for trial at the next assizes.

T. J. Carley, K.C., was defense counsel while Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., prosecuted.

Andrew Clegg, engineer of the C.N.R. yard engine and Ross Burt, yard helper, who rode on the rear of the tender with Meagher the night of the accident and who escaped injury by swinging off the tender before the crash, gave evidence along the same lines as at the inquest.

As Seabiscuit Raced To U. S. Turf Crown

Here is a picture made as Seabiscuit, brilliant son of Hardtack, crossed the finish line to win the "Horserace of the Century" from War Admiral, greatest son of the great Man o' War, at Pimlico racetrack, Md. Fifty-five thousand fans watched Seabiscuit beat War Admiral by four lengths.

Plan To Curtail Sunday Sales

Determined to curb Sunday sales in tobacco stores on the strength of eating-house licenses, and generally to revise the regulations applying to restaurants, the legal committee of the Council, with Alderman Gordon presiding, gave a prospective new by-law a preliminary survey Tuesday night. They will go over it again within another week or two, and probably have it ready for the Council at least for the December meeting.

"No refreshment booth shall be allowed to carry on business on the Lord's Day," is a paraphrase of one of the proposed restrictions.

And a refreshment booth is defined as including any building or part of a building where, for pay, persons are served with food, or from a soft drink container.

Another definition is that of restaurant as an eating or victualling house which has a place for cooking and serving food, refrigeration satisfactory to the medical officer of health, sanitary conveniences and seating accomodation for at least twelve persons.

Permitted to Remain Open

Restaurants, of course, are permitted to remain open on Sundays. Hence, if the so-called refreshment booth aspires to the status of restaurant it will have to comply with the seating accommodation for 12 persons, sanitary conveniences and so on. Otherwise, it is just a refreshment booth and it shall keep its doors locked on the Lord's Day.

For instance, it was said, Dinty's Inn can provide seating accommodation, but it will also have to put in the sanitary extras or fold up on Sundays.

Should Be Crimped

Alderman Gordon said the tobacco store with a soft drink container, thereby qualifying for an eating-house license, remaining open on Sundays and selling tobacco, magazines and so on, should be crimped, and the amended by-law should definitely prevent continuance of abuses that also interfered with the business of full-grown restaurants.

Stalls will be reduced to 4' 6" in height, and other provisions of the by-law provide for some other changes, including the fees to be paid for licenses. There shall also be medical examination for all persons employed in restaurants.

Building This Year Totals $375,629

Building activity for the year continues to show a steady increase over the corresponding period of 1937, the first ten months of 1938 showing a gain of $56,011.

Building permit totals for the month of October just passed reached the sum of $62,516, more than twice the total for the same month in 1937, when the amount was $25,076. For the first ten months of 1937 the total building figures were $219,618.00 while this year the total has reached the fine total of $375,629.00, with a good prospect of continued activity until the first of January.

October totals were: Dwellings, $17,000; garages, $1,693; miscellaneous, $8,823, and 2 permits for stores and offices, $35,000. The two latter named projects were the stores being built on Charlotte street by Braund and Loblaw Groceterias.

650 INOCULATED.

School children to the tune of 650 bared their arms during the past month to receive innoculations against diphtheria, according to reports tendered the Board of Education Tuesday by School Nurses Deyell and Jory. Miss Deyell reported she had treated 19 minor injuries during October. The two nurses made a total of 853 visits during the month.

Main Street Topics

Jabs and Jottings as Picked Up By Examiner Reporters.

OUT OF HOSPITAL

Mary Boyle, Park street north, who was seriously injured on the Lakefield Road in a car accident about five weeks ago has left St. Joseph's Hospital and is now confined to her home. She is reported to be making splendid progress towards complete recovery.

OBEY TRAFFIC RULES

Pupils attending the rural schools in Smith Township have evidently been taught by either the teachers or parents to practise safety on the highways. It was noted that all pupils travelling the Chemong Road walked facing traffic and stayed off the travelled portion of the highway while traffic was approaching them.

CROP LOOKS GOOD

Fields of fall wheat in the district are showing exceptional growth and the crop promises to get well rooted unless frosts do some damage before the snow comes. There is said to be normal acreage planted in the district and weather conditions so far have been decidedly favorable.

GULLS ON THE RIVER

White gulls on the river this morning, patches of white on the blue surface and against the drab background of Chip Island, stripped of color for winter, offered a note of scenic beauty to those crossing the C.P.R. bridge. Others of the white birds could be seen down stream toward the lake.

A LONG SESSION

Herbert Tranter was the last appellant heard by the Court of Revison last night. The clocks were striking midnight as the Court wound up its first session, adjourning until Thursday evening and Friday afternoon. Fred T. Tuggey was second last on the list. They had sat in the council chamber patiently waiting their turn for a hearing, from 7.30 p.m.

TEN WINDOWS BROKEN

Ten windows broken in St. Mary's Convent Monday night were part of the local damage done Hallowe'en that had to be repaired Tuesday. Presumably something heavier than peas were used in that kind of vandalism and it was not the work of little children. One of the police officers remarked to the Examiner yesterday that too many "roughnecks" take advantage of Hallowe'en "make it look bad for the kiddies and should be driven off the streets."

PARCEL BOX DAMAGED

Postmaster Lacheur showed the Examiner today a parcel box that had been damaged by some hooligans Monday night. It had been pushed onto the road in front of the Ackerman building, and some adult had jumped on it deeply denting the side. Marks of two feet on the red paint were plainly those of some adult. The box was sent to Ottawa today for repairs. Mr. Lacheur said the minimum penalty for damaging postal property is three years in prison.

CURB IMPROVED

The recent work on the Board of Works in widening the road where Reid street runs into Charlotte from the north by cuttin gthe curb back has made a considerable improvement. This corner took considerable traffic and it was very difficult to effect a turn without cutting into the path of traffic coming south on Reid.

MAN OF THE HOUR

Dr. J. J. Craig, being a Westerner, is a man of action. Last night in the Sunday School Auditorium at St. Paul's Church while Rev. Dr. Parker was giving an address, a Hallowe'en lantern, sitting among the decorations, took fire. Dr. Craig who was sitting nearby smothered the fire with his handkerchief and without any fuss carried the smoking paper pumpkin from the building.

OUT ON BAIL

W. J. Nealon of Toronto, facing a charge before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell in police court this morning of drunken driving asked for a remand for a week "I have not secured counsel yet" he told the court. He was remanded until next Wednesday bail being fixed at $1,000.

STREET WASHING DAILY

City Engineer R. H. Parsons has ordered the operators of the street flusher to work in the daytime now instead of at night. It became so cold in the early hours of the morning there was a strong possibility that the streets would become skating rinks, so the change was made.

PLENTY OF MEXICAN MONEY

Mexican five-dollar bills, which have a Canadian value of about 20 cents, seem to be making the rounds these days. Yesterday another merchant, Ross Payne, was a victim. One of his waitresses took in the bill which had much the same appearance as Canadian currency.

TO VOTE IN SCHOOLS

The coming civic elections here on January 2 cast their shadows into a meeting of the Board of Education Tuesday night when Secretary G. H. Thompson read a letter from City Clerk Simon Armstrong asking for permission to use the school buildings for election purposes. Permission was granted.

POPPY DAY SATURDAY.

The continuing work of the Canadian Legion in assisting veterans of the war who are handicapped by their disabilities is the principal purpose of Poppy Day next Saturday. Poppies will be sold on the streets of Peterborough as usual, and it is hoped that citizens will contribute something according to their means.

HONORARY PALL BEARERS

Honorary pall bearers at Col. J. W. Miller's funeral on Monday included W. F. Green, G. A. Gillespie and C. H. Huffman, representatives of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, not the Independent Order of Foresters, as previously reported. Also included among the honorary pall bearers were Lt.-Col. E. Birdsall and Lt.-Col. C. H. Stuart.

POLL TAX INSTALLMENTS.

Although the poll tax is only five dollars a year, the city is willing to accept payment on the installment plan, anything to help the small fry taxpayer to square his account with the municipality, instead of turning a list of names over to the police in an effort to collect by means of court action. That is to be the last recourse, the legal committee decided last night.

OFFICIAL PHOTOGRAPHER

Lewis R. Parks, attending the International Convention of Photo Finishers at Cleveland, has been named official photographer for the convention. Lew writes that he has taken dozens of flashlight pictures and doubtless there are many victims who would say that their idea of perfect revenge would be to be in Lew's position, so that they might show photographers just how blinding the flash from a magnesium bulb really is.

SHOOTS RARE DUCK

Clyde Ashby bagged a rare specimen of the duck family while shooting at Pigeon Lake a few days ago. It is commonly known as the Chinese duck, but the proper name is the Mandarin duck, and it is the most beautiful of all the duck family. This particular type belongs to the river duck family which includes the common domestic fowl and the wood duck. The bird is being mounted in the museum in Toronto and the owner will have it back within a few weeks.

Committee Is Named To Enquire Into Disposal Of Old Hunter Street Bridge

"Somebody stole the old Hunter street bridge, and I think we should try to trace it up and see where it did go," Alderman Gordon asserted to the legal committee of the Council last night.

"Oh, no, they didn't," Mayor Hamilton said. "It was used in parts. I know I got some of it."

"We know you'd pay for it, but my information is that a lot of it was loaded on two flat cars and shipped to Toronto. Possibly the contractors got it," Ald. Gordon remarked.

Mayor Hamilton said he doubted that statement very much. The Council had talked of re-erecting the bridge at London street, but some commission had stepped in and ordered them not to, possibly because it was worn out or something. At any rate the girders and stringers were piled up, and it was evidently sold piecemeal.

"You'd better let sleeping dogs lie." Ald. Stocker suggested.

Mayor Hamilton moved, seconded by Alderman Dutton, that a special committee composed of Alderman Wilson, Alderman Cotton, City Engineer Parsons and the treasurer and auditor enquire into the disposal of the old bridge.

Work Started On Waterfront

Twenty-five men started work this morning beautifying the waterfront at Lakefield from the dam to the wharf along the east side of the river. Plans call for a concrete retaining wall, a five-foot concrete walk and a riprap section about the walk, built from Credit Valley stone. Above the rip-rapped portion the ground will be graded and levelled so that it may be seeded in the Spring.

Ken Sine of Peterborough is general foreman and the work is being done by the Department of Public Works as an employment project for the Village of Lakefield. The sidewalk will be six inches above the high water level mark of the river and will be five feet wide and 1400 feet long. It will provide a perfect walk for anyone wishing to stroll along the water, and will probably be properly guarded. The riprapping rises gradually from the sidewalk.

Several men and teams have been busy during the past few days doing the preliminary work of grading and preparing a base for the concrete wall. Forms have been built and concrete pouring will start Wednesday morning.

On Tuesday a large boathouse owned by Chief Constable Wallace Hendren, which had been situated on the east shore of the river for years, was removed on rollers to a lot on Water street, without much difficulty.

The shoreline for many years has been in a rather shabby condition and its appearance detracted somewhat from the beauty of the drive along the river which many motorists, particularly strangers took. Completion of this work will make it one of the beauty spots of the Kawarthas, and will at the same time relieve the unemployment situation in the Village of Lakefield.

Hallowe'en Frolic Held In Lakefield

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 2.—Hallowe'en the evening of witches and ghosts, is a perfect night for a party and gives ample scope for persons with imagination to use their talents in the getting together of costumes suitable to the occasion. It is not surprising then, that the masquerade party held by the Young People's Society of Lakefield United Church on Monday evening was a most successful one, for everyone present entered into the fun and frolic with an enthusiasm typical of the spirit of Hallowe'en.

The costumes were most original, prizes going to Mrs. G. F. Kelly, who gave a most grotesque portrayal of a witch; Miss Freda Webster, who appeared as the "Mad Hatter" in "Alice in Wonderland"; W. F. Munro, as a Chinaman; and Ernie Knut, who as Mae West, swept the men off their feet.

Special Hallowe'en games were led by Rev. G. F. Kelly, assisted by Robert Spence, with Mrs. Kelly providing musical accompaniment.

Refreshments were served in cafeteria style.

An interesting event of the evening was the presentation of a silver cake plate to Wallace Hendren, a past president of the society, whose marriage to Miss Pearl Walker took place this summer.

A short worship service led by Robert Spence brought the evening to a close.

Only 67 Pupils Found In School Whose Teeth Required No Dental Attention Board Told

The bad state of neglect of Peterborough school children's teeth was revealed once again as the board of education met last night and heard a report on two additional schools from Dr. J. C. Green, school dentist.

Last month Dr. Green presented a report on the dental condition of pupils at King Edward school, revealing hundreds needed immediate attention. This month's report covered examination of pupils at Central and Queen Alexandra school and showed them to be in even greater need of attention.

At Central school 80 per cent. of pupils were found to need some dental work done, while at Queen Alexandra 79.8 per cent. had faulty teeth. Dr. Green reported that among 487 pupils examined at Central school, there were 330 cavities in temporary teeth; 880 cavities in permanent teeth; 208 extractions of tempory teeth; 208 of permanent teeth, were required. Only 97 pupils in the entire school had teeth that did not require dental treatment. At Queen Alexandra school 331 pupils were examined, with the discovery of 201 cavities in temporary teeth; 595 in permanent teeth; 258 extractions of temporary teeth and 35 of permanent teeth, were necessary. Only 67 pupils did not repuire dental treatment.

Inspector K. S. Wightman reported to the board that he and the school nurses and attendance officer had made a survey of pupils at King Edward school following Dr. Green's report last month. They found that four parents refused to take any action; 27 pupils returned with cards from family dentists showing that the required work had been done; 103 brought notes from parents who said they would have family dentists do the work; and 138 parents requested that the school dentist do the work. Since the board of education pays for work done only in cases where parents are not in a financial position to pay for care themselves, the requests were investigated. Eighty-five were approved and 53 rejected, Inspector Wightman reported.

A similar check-up will be made on the schools on which Dr. Green reported last night, Inspector Wightman told the board.

Purchasing Coke In Dry Weather

The advantages of being a big enough organization to buy coal in large quantities—granted, too, you are financially as secure as this one—were seen at a meeting of the Public Utilities Commission yesterday afternoon.

The commission's treasurer intimated he intends to buy four carloads of coke, as much as the storehouse will hold, in the immediate future. Freight rates are soon to increase, he gave as one reason, but another was more important. In the present dry weather a carload of coke weights approximately 25 tons, while in wet weather such as in the approaching winter months, wet coke weight jumps to about 26½ tons, he said.

"Don't you cover the coke?" asked Chairman G. S. Matthews.

"We do, but the shippers don't usually," was the reply. "In wet weather we pay for a ton and a half of water in each carload."

CASE ADJOURNED.

Both sides were agreeable to a week's adjournment when a charge against Harry Carter of keeping liquor for sale was called in police court this morning.

Poppy Day In Schools

School children will buy poppies in their classrooms for a cent apiece, this year. Members of the Board of Education agreed to permit such sale to be made on request by Fire Chief George Gimblett, president of the Canadian Legion branch here. Fee of one cent for each poppy was not going to embarrass many pupils, was the opinion of the Board, and they agreed with W. A. Richardson that the project will be well worth the bother it may incur if only children learn the significance of poppy day. Hitherto only the Children's Aid Society has been permitted to make sale of tags in schools.

Reckless Driver Is Fined $15

Fred Walker of Toronto pleaded guilty before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell in police court this morning to reckless driving on the Lakefield Road on October 10, and was fined $15 and $5.50 costs.

Walker was defended by H. N. E. Curry of Toronto, who urged leniency, stating the accused young man was only making $15 a week and had heavy expenses arising out of the accident which had led to the charge.

Crown Attorney McElderry told the court that the car driven by Walker had shot off a level piece of road, run along a shoulder, plunged over a culvert into a creek and struck the far side with great force. The car was completely wrecked and several persons were hurt.

On a second charge of driving without a license, Walker also pleaded guilty and was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

Percy Shackleton, also of Toronto, a member of the party in the car driven by Walker and a son of the owner of the machine was also charged with reckless driving, but the charge was withdrawn by the Crown; $3 costs being charged against the accused.

Crown Attorney McElderry stated that when Traffic Officer Broughton was investigating the accident the boys had stated it was Shackleton, and not Walker, who was driving. He thought there should be a reprimand for giving false information to police officers.

Magistrate Campbell told the two youths that they were old enough to realize the seriousness of what they had done.

Loucks Seen 'Dream Team' Calibre As Wizards Of Rugby Cast Eye Over Squads For All-Stars

By Sydney Gruson
(Canadian Press Sports Writer.)

TORONTO, Nov. 2 (C.P.). — The open season on all-star football approaches swiftly and the experts soon to be called on to select the mythical "dream" teams in the annual Canadian Press poll will, as usual, have their jobs cut out.

Sprinkled among the East's 12 senior clubs are as fine a crop of plunging, kicking, running and passing backs as has performed in any recent season. What the selectors will put behind their wingline is a combination of the best that any coach would love to have.

None of last season's stars has slipped so they can not be overlooked and the job becomes increasingly difficult as some of the younger players reach the heights beside the accepted stars. There is not a team that hasn't at least one candidate for all-star honors.

As usual the Interprovincial Union, drawing as it does from the cream of college graduates and the best of minor city teams, provides an impressive string of backs for consideration. The best this season are from Ottawa Rough Riders and Toronto Argonauts, the union's outstanding clubs.

Some Mighty Men.

But a strengthened Ontario Union, with Montreal Nationals and Peterborough Orfuns lending balance, has Hugh (Bummer) Stirling, as powerful as ever with his kicking, passing and plunging, Johnny Ferraro and Johnny Atcheson of Nationals and Ab Box of Balmy Beach to rival such big four luminaries as Art West and Andy Tommy, the payoff running halves of Argos and Riders, respectively.

Tommy has been going strong all season, shining on the Rider halfline with Murray Griffin, a passing and plunging star, and Stan O'Neil, whose effectiveness in recent games has been dulled by injuries. West has received able support from Bob Isbister, Doug Macpherson, and Red Storey, converted from a plunging back to a runner.

Atcheson and Ferraro, with young Ray Mullins, have spared the furious drive of Nationals after Sarnia's championship, which appears to hang on Stirling's ability to continue his brilliant work. A sophomore, Sammy Sward of Beaches, has made his mark by fine relief kicking and good plunging and tackling.

The Intercollegiate Union features Herb Westman of McGill for his kicking and secondary defence work; Toronto's Bee Rowland and Cam Gray, both kickers and plungers; Jim Turner of Queen's and Lyn Thompson, Clem Faust, and Jim Farmer of Western. Rowland, a newcomer to senior ranks, has been particularly effective.

Loucks Looks Good.

Even such weak clubs as Montreal Cubs of the Big Four and Peterborough Orfuns of the Ontario Union present candidates. Gord Noseworthy's kicking has been a bright spot for Cubs and Ford (Mike) Loucks provides Orfuns with good running and brilliant tackling and placement kicking.

There has been quarterbacking of high calibre throughout the section, with Annis Stukus of Argos ranking as one of the best. Arnie Morrison of Riders, the veteran Box for Beaches, who also passes and kicks, Art Stollery of Queen's, Alf Hurley of Western, Ronnie Perowne of McGill, Ed. Barnabe of Naticnals, and Denny Whitaker of Hamilton Tigers all have been to forefront.

There still are few peers, if any, to Argos' Teddy Morris as a flying wing, a position where Ottawa's Joe Zelicovitz, Sarnia's Tony Golab, Ferraro, and Len Stevens of Hamilton have been working well.

MUSSING UP THE MAPLES

A 718 count by Art Morley of the Mercantile League set a pace for the 160 league bowlers last night. Miss Grant of the Merchants' group, chalked up 574, including a 245 single, to top the ladies' section from two leagues.

Fifteen heavy hitters from the big C.G.E. league went over 600. E. Guppy 710, S. Adamson 683, C. Whatley 658, A. Powell 651, G. Robertson 642, H .Mackey 641, T. McDonald 635, D. Penrose 625, J. Clarke 620, R. E .Layfield 618, J. Maudsley 615, E. MacDonald 615, N. Armstrong 614, Melhern 607, and N. Jobe 601.

In the Mercantile mixed group in addition to Morley's 718, Ken Lee smacked off 709; J. Price 632, and W. Callan 600. Mrs. Jeffries was again high for ladies with 538 (224), B. O'Toole 531 (226), Mrs. Hendry 505, Miss Wyllie 483, Mrs. Muirhead 436, and Helen McFadden 400.

Les Burton's 301 single plied up enough pins to put him ahead in the Merchants' with 689, Chas. Grant 688, D. Coughlin 649, Burford 634, and J. Field 611. Mrs. R. Penrose was runner-up to Miss Grant with 529.

Hallowe'en Social Is Held At Lifford

BETHANY, Nov. 2.—A Hallowe'en social was held in the Lifford Community Hall on Monday eve under the auspices of St. Mary's Circle of the Women's Guild. The program was in charge of the A.Y.P.A. and was as follows: Cornet solo, Ben Page; reading, Lawrence Staples, giving also a synopsis of the origin of Hallowe'en; song, Marjory Page; recitation by Muriel Hannah and Vera Strachan, and a skit composed by the president, Robert Reid, assisted by Ben Page and Jack Hannah.

During the evening a very beautiful quilt of the double wedding ring design was won by Scotty Stephens of Carleton Place.

A candy stall was in charge of Vera Strachan and Leona Lang. A masquerade procession was formed and prizes awarded to: Best dressed, 1 George Tims, 2 Marjory Page; best cimic, 1 Mr. Beal, 2 Harold Page.

Pupils Presented Hallowe'en Concert

(Examiner Correspondence.)

SELWYN, Nov. 2.—The pupils of S.S. No. 7 Smith held a delightful Hallowe'en party on Friday afternoon last under the supervision of their teacher, Miss Sharpe. Quite a number of the pupils' parents and friends attended and enjoyed to the full the following program presented by the children:

The Rabbit's Trick, a dialogue by Betty Hayward, Jean Preston and Myrna Northey. Contest, "Kings." Songs, "The Wood Fairies" and "Jack o'Lantern Gay," by the School. "Jack o'Lantern," Arnold Fitzgerald. "The Three Wishes," a dialogue by Mary Downer, Roleen Fitzgerald and June Wilson. Recitation, Dorothy Mortimer. Songs, "Autumn Leaves Are Falling" and "'Tis Hallowe'en," by the School. Short Skit, by all the punils, "Getting Over the Grip." Song, "The Crocodile," by Dorothy Mortimer. Contest of Riddles, by audience.

To bring the program to a close a few snappy games were played by both young and old; following which dainty refreshments were served by the girls consisting of sandwiches, cake, cookies, apples and candy.

The children then congragated outside and donned their Hallowe'en costumes and paraded into the schoolroom, where the costumes were judged and first prize awarded to Roleen Fitzgerald, who was made up as a clown. Miss Idell Northey was the only visitor who came in costume, therefore she was automatically awarded the prize for visitors. For the occasion the schoolroom was decorated with all the traditional Hallowe'en fixtures such as lighted Jack o'Lanterns, candles, etc.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

AT THE SOUND of the next musical note it will be exactly one dime less in Junior's bank. Bong! Please stand by for Station CJP. Ah, good evening, folks, we now bring you a medley entertainment with a skit in satire preceded by sports comments. A pugilistic program for the people of Peterborough is on tap Friday night at the Rue Brock. Bowling, basketball and badminton are beginning a heavy schedule, and hockey looms on the horizon. And there will—one moment, please. Silence. FLASH: A dispatch from No. 12 Glen Manor Drive, Toronto, has been received. It reads, quote: "Authorities are investigating with grave apprehension a disturbance in Eastern Canada today. The trouble, undetermined as yet, is thought to be of a military nature." Unquote. Correction: The word "military" in the dispatch should have been "militant." We now proceed with our program.

• • • • • • •

UP IN THE NORTHERN part of the province, a baseball association has been formed, and northern clubs will definitely pull away from the O.B.A. and E.O.B.A. before next spring. The reason—Sorry, folks, but another interruption is necessary, the following dispatch just being handed your announcer. It is from the tap room of the Chateau Windsor in Montreal. Quote: "A band of awesome giants were reported in this section to have emerged from Point Aux Charles and to be heading in a westerly direction. Of huge stature with fearsome faces, these creatures are attired in black and white uniforms under which appear to be bulging muscles on various parts of the body. Panic-stricken spectators claim they wear heavy nail-studded boots and have a murderous gleam in their eyes." Unquote. We will endeavor to ascertain more of this phenomenon, folks, which may be just the French equivalent of pink elephants as seen by inebriates. Meantime, our music will be heard—but wait!

• • • • • • •

More Of The Same

HERE IS A DISPATCH from Camp Massucci in Wstern Ontario. Quote: "FLASH: Two forces of giants are aproaching each other amid great preparations to battle. Huge figures in odd uniforms with muscles s[illegible]king out all over the body, they present a terrifying picture and damage, destruction and casualties are feared. More later." Unquote. Folks, we have just receivd a phone call from this city, stating reliable sources believe this invasion from the east will hit Peterborough before the end of the week and every precaution is being taken. People are warned to be ready for a terrific fight. Before proceeding with our dance music, we will give you the latest news flash.

• • • • • • •

IT IS FROM STATION ORFU in Toronto and—(Aside: Hundreds of 'phone calls have been pouring in to this studio and the newspaper office as panic-stricken citizens prepare to take their families and fly to Armour Hill)—here it is. Quote: "The rumored invasions of Peterborough from Montreal and Sarnia from Toronto are the senior O.R.F.U. grid games scheduled for this Saturday when Nats play Orfuns and Beaches meet Imps." Unquote. And so, folks, we conclude our "horror broadcast" of the evening, assuring you all that there is nothing to be feared and that the "giants and monsters" in the strange uniforms are merely football players. There is no reason for panic, folks, and kindly do not rush blindly with your families to Armour Hill. Goodnight, folks, this is Station CJP signing off. (And for the luvva Michael don't have this station banned from future program because of a realistic fictitious broadcast!)

Gone With The Wind

IT SEEMS that we have not the best senior gridiron in the province, according to the Sarnia scrivener, but certainly not the worst. At least we have no attar de garbage casting an alliaceous—boy, that's a pip!—odour on the air waves. Scribe Wilson doesn't rank the playing fields at Varsity Stadium, Peterborough or Montreal too highly, not to be compared with the sumptuous swards at London and Sarnia. But mainly he objects to the Point Charles park nestling 'mid the C.N.R. shops. Says the fields at Eton and Oxford (he apparently is well-educated or sees the newsreels) have buildings looking down on them, but not grimy buildings marred by trade. The big fellow adds:

• • • • • • •

"NOR HAVE the English playing fields a dump of prodigious proportions peering between the buildings. Off to one side is the Point Charles dump which, as dumps go, should rank as one of the very best in the country. It has length, breadth, depth and bouquet. The wind Saturday was blowing out to sea, and the 8,000 people did not catch a breath of the rich aroma. Montrealers who have been there when the wind blows across the St. Lawrence say it outsmells any dump smell they ever smelt. You will not find the C.N.R. playing field ranked among the places the Chamber of Commerce says you should see," Mais, oui, oui, m'sieu.

Says O'Meara Of Mike

AND THIS FROM the pen of Baz O'Meara, ye ed of the Mo'real Star: "Loucks is not likely to play for Orfuns Saturday and his absence will simply Nationals task. The latter are in a preferred position in the O.R.F.U. It is unlikely Peterborough can beat them without Loucks, who is one of the finds of the year. With him in action, Orfuns would still be long shots to topple Nats, who should settle all playoff doubts by victory. Beaches and Sarnia are playing a cut-throat game with the odds favoring Sarnia to win out, though observers who saw both clubs here consider Beaches a better all-around outfit. Even if Nats have a big overhead because Fred Porter is an open-handed executive, the Nats should at least break even this year." It'll hustle Orfuns to do this.

• • • • • • •

THE AIR will be full of flying fists in the Brock St. arena this Friday night and the rafters should take a beating when the fans loosen up the larynx and begin flinging cheers around. 'Tis the Riverview Athletic Club's amateur mitt show, a seven-bout card, with three classy Toronto pugs and the rest good local scrappers matched up. The list of events is in elsewhere, and we just want to remind fight fans to keep Friday p.m. open if they wish to see some lively boxing by a club that always puts on fine fistic cards. Ringside is six bits, reserve half a buck and general two bits. Also a quarter for ladies.

One-Two In Hamilton Race

One of eastern Canada's leading distance events in the track world is the annual Hamilton around-the bay race, won this year by Scotty Rankine, LEFT, of Preston, in the record time of 1:46.14. It was the second time in three years the veteran Rankine had finished in front. Second, 200 yards behind the winner, was Walter Hornby, RIGHT, Hamilton Olympic star.

Lure Of The Lucre Bringing Der Max Back To The Rink

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—Max Schmeling, whose hopes for bringing the world title home to the fatherland were painfully shattered within two minutes and four seconds under the Brown Bomber's hammering fists on that memorable night of June 21, has completely recovered from his spine injuries and has decided to make a third attempt for a "comeback."

On December 3, Maxie will make his first public appearance in the ring, to be introduced to the crowd filling the Hamburg Hanseaten hall, for Izzy Janazzo's bout with the ambitious German welter champ, Gustav Eder. After that Schmeling intends to gradually bring himself into fighting trim for a 12 or 10-rounder against Heinz Lazzek, young Viennese holder of the European heavyweight crown, sometime in January.

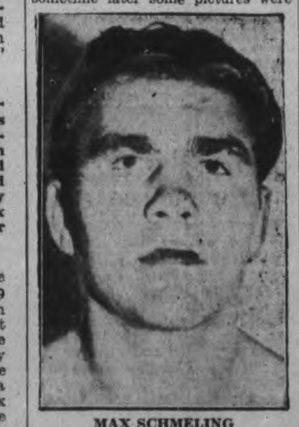
Disappeared After Defeat

For more than three months after he was brought home on a stretcher Schmeling completely vanished from the limelight, and fans were privately wondering whether the black Uhlan of the Rhine actually met his Waterloo on June 21 and chose not to run again.

On his arrival in Berlin there was none of the spectacular reception, and quietly, only accompanied by his wife, the blonde movie star, Anny Ondra, and his loyal friend Max Machon. Max had retired to his big country estate of Ponickel, way back in Pomerania. Only a few times did the public hear that there was still somebody alive answering to the name of Herr Schmeling. Occasionally the papers carried a short notice that Schmeling had sold his fashionable country villa on Lake Scharmuetzel near Berlin, and sometime later some pictures were just some of the questions recently discussed in German sports circles.

Those who have had something to do with Schmeling as a business man will rule out at first glance the suggestion that he will continue fighting just for the fun of it, or make the mistake of many fistic gladiators before him who refused to admit that they were through until their prestige was gone completely. If it were not for the financial side Schmeling might not fry again. But it's been an open secret to insiders that the Black Uhlan sacrificed a large portion of the big purses he made in American rings for building himself up again after losing his horizontally-won title to Max Baer.

Moreover Schmeling, although not actually a spendthrift, did not hesitate to put down the cash to live according to his own and to Anny's liking. Maintaining a city apartment, a summer villa on Lake Scharmuetzel and a big estate in Pomerania for hunting expeditions, in addition to supporting his mother and that technical staff hanging around every classy boxer, cost plenty. No matter how much Schmeling may have carefully laid aside while luck was with him, it takes a much bigger fortune than Schmeling ever made to keep atop at that pace. It might therefore be safely assumed that Maxie will not discard any possibilities of making some $50,000 in about three fights in Germany and possibly in England before he takes his final leave from the ring.



MAX SCHMELING

. . . man of destiny before those two minutes in the ring with Joe Louis. Will he be back?

published showing Maxie with his cute "Hausfrau" acceptin gthe greetings of their farmhands after bringing in the harvest down at Ponickel. But during all these months Schmeling seems to have convinced himself that he was not born to die a simple Pomeranian landlord.

"Are financial considerations or just the lure of the glamorous ring light responsible for Schmeling's decision to take the gloves down from the wall again—does he seriously believe he can play an important role in American rings again?" are False Teeth Wearers Are Worst Breath Offenders!

"Need More Than a Mouth Wash" say Authorities ... Recommend Polident

Plates and bridges soak up odors and impurities like a sponge! A thin dark scum collects on them. This scum holds germs and decay bacteria. It is so tough that ordinary brushing seldom removes it. And it gets into every tiny crevice where brushing can't even reach. Almost always it results in "denture breath"—probably the most offensive of all breath odors.

Yet there's a perfect way to clean and purify false teeth without brushing, acid or danger. It is Polident, the powder that dissolves away all scum, stains, tarnish and odor. Makes breath sweeter—and plates or bridges look better and feel better. Tens of thousands call Polident a blessing for comfort, convenience and hygiene. Long-lasting can costs only 40¢ at any drug store. Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau and dentists everywhere.

Cleans, Purifies Like Magic
Put plate or bridge in ½ glass of water. Add a little Polident powder. Leave in 10 to 15 minutes—rinse—and it's sweet and purified—ready to use!

Prevents "Denture Breath"

Boston Bruins Head For Toronto To Open National League Minus Eddie Shore—A Holdout

(By the Canadian Press.)

Boston Bruins headed for Toronto and the start of the National Hockey league season today without Eddie Shore, veteran king-pin of the defence. Shore is a holdout and, though the whole business has transpired quickly, it looks as if he plans to make a siege of it.

As the Bruins left Boston last night, Manager Art Ross startled hockey men with the announcement that Shore had rejected his "final offer." Shore explained from his retreat: "I was offered a slight raise and promised a share of the gate receipts, but I was not satisfied with those terms."

Jack Crawford, Boston-owned defenceman who was to have started the season with Providence of the International-American league, will play in Shore's place in Toronto unless the defenceman and manager can talk down one another's alley soon. Weston Adams, Bruins' president, will refer Shore's case to the league president, Frank Calder.

Men who know Shore and who have known him to hold out before believe Eddie will take more coaxing to come around. So the Bruins will start against the team that defeated them in three straight games for the league title last spring with one foot in the bucket.

17 Goals in 70 Minutes

The Maple Leafs polished up their offensive weapons for Boston with an exhibition in Midland, Ont., last night. Teams of blues and Whites, chosen from the big league team and its Int-Am club, Syracuse, scored 17 goals in 70 minutes. Bill Thoms got the odd one in overtime to give Blues a 9-8 victory.

Coach Dick Irwin put George Parsons on a forward line with Syl Apps and Gordie Drillon, in place of Bob Davidson, and the combination clicked for four goals. The line of Thoms, Buzz Boll and Harvey Jackson got the other five blue goals.

Montreal Canadiens laced Springfield Indians of the Int-Am 4-0 in an All Saints' day matinee at Quebec. Defencemen Babe Siebert and Ty Wentworth scored two of the counters and Rod Lorrain and Louis Trudel notched the others as Wilf Cude earned a shutout in the Habitants' net.

New York Americans, who open tomorrow against the Black Hawks of Chicago, are leaving Western Canada with a new amateur affiliate. They have completed a working agreement with Winnipeg Monarchs, Dominion junior champions of two seasons back.

Only player outside of the goalies to carry No. 1 on his sweater this winter again will be Babe Siebert, Montreal Canadiens' ploughing defenceman. The Babe was allotted No. 1 yesterday when team lists were announced, while Canadiens' goalie, Wilf Cude, was given No. 17 again.

IPSWICH SIGNS CURRAN

IPSWICH, England—(CP).—Ipswich Town, newcomer to the English Football League this year, has signed Patrick Curran, former Sunderland inside-right. Patrick was with the Roker Park team nearly three years.

SPORT SPICE

NEW YORK, Nov. 2 — (AP) — Henry Armstrong's injury is the McCoy . . . The little walloper couldn't do any more than limp around . . . but, as George Parnassus, Ceferino Garcia's manager, hollered, "why did he have to work out the day before a fight? . . .

Incidentally, Parnassus and Eddie Mead, Armstrong's manager, are having trouble about the whole thing . . both of them expected a big "pay day" this week, after the fight . . . now they'll have to ride along without the "ready" some more . . . but it wasn't too bad for Mead who made himself a nice piece of change on Seabiscuit—at 2 to 1, no less . . .

Joe Louis, in town for the fight, is pleasanter to the boys than ever before . . . maybe it's because of that new suit he won betting Hank Greenberg wouldn't hit 60 homers . . . our scouts report the crying towel Elmer Layden was waving early in the Fall was the biggest gag-eroo of 'em all . . . he told his staff as early as last Spring that he was going to have his best Notre Dame team this year—which was hitting the nail right on the well-known head . . .

For someone high up in the Cardinals' organization comes word that Ray Blades definitely has the inside track to manage the gasless gas-housers. . . .

Berger Chalks Up His 13th Victory

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(CP)—Maxie Berger, lightweight champion of Canada, today marked up consecutive ring victory No. 13—Charley Gomer of Baltimore—and looked about for consecutive victim No. 14.

The Montreal Hebrew, at 140 pounds, was aided by a 4½-pound pull in the weights and showed marked boxing superiority over the hard-hitting Baltimore battler last night in the eight-round main bout of a Broadway Arena boxing card. There were no knockdowns.

Foxx Comeback Nets Him Laurels For '38

NEW YORK, Nov. 2—(AP)—For the year's most gallant comeback in baseball, Jimmy Foxx to-day was selected the American League's most valuable player of 1938 by a landslide vote of the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Considered on the downward trail a year ago, and bothered all last summer by a sinus condition, the likeable "double-x" not only stayed in there for 149 games, but dynamited his way to the batting and runs-batted-in championships of the league.

It was his big bat, above all else, that enabled Boston Red Sox to finish in second place in the junior circuit campaigning after their pitching staff came apart at the seams. Thus, jarring Jimmy, who polled 305 points of a possible "perfect score" of 336, becomes the first player in history to win the most valuable award three times during his career.

Armstrong Bout Off For Month

NEW YORK, Nov. 2—(AP)—The Henry Armstrong-Ceferino Garcia welterweight scrap is off for a month and maybe much longer, depending how Armstrong recovers from a back injury received while shadow-boxing with himself yesterday. Nov 25 has been set as a tentative date.

The little negro fell twice in what was to have been his final training session for the first defence of his 147-pound title tonight, and now he can walk, but that's about all.

Promoter Mike Jacobs is gloomy, for it had looked like a sell-out of $120,000. Garcia feel seven golomier, for the Filipino had been confident of whipping Armstrong and finally cashing in on his long ring career. He is 29 and hasn't much longer to reach the big money.

Dr George Riley, the osteopath treating Henry's lame back thinks the champion might be able to work out again in a week and be ready to fight within a month.

Solly Krieger New Champ; Breaks Hostak

SEATTLE, Nov. 2—(AP). — Solly Krieger, a scowling bomber from Brooklyn, was the new middleweight champion of the world today after beating Al Hostak so savagely he sent the Seattle Slav to a hospital, temporarily blinded, paralyzed and without the use of one arm.

Krieger fought a cagey, crouching battle. He chopped Hostak to pieces with left and right crosses before 9,000 surprised spectators.

Hostak was a dejected and broken battler when he left the ring for the hospital. He was game to the end, staying the full 15 rounds even when he had only his right hand left for both offence and defence. When it was over his right eye was swollen shut, his left almost closed, his face bloody and gashed, his left arm welted and paralyzed, and his hands badly injured.

Hostak was rushed to a hospital where Dr. H. T. Buckner reported, after a superficial examination, that bones in both hands were broken. Hostak spent the night at the hospital and was to have x-rays taken today.

By his victory Krieger takes the championship back east for the first time since Freddie Steele of Tacoma, Wash., gained the crown for the Pacific coast by beating Eddie (Babe) Risko in July, 1936. Last July Hostak copped the championship with a one-round triumph over Steele here.

Amateur Boxers Here On Friday

Amateur boxing returns to Peterborough this Friday evening in the Brock St. arena when the Riverside A.C. stages a seven-bout card. It will have three classy Toronto boxers matched with three locals in a semi-final and two main events. Nick Orlando, local lightweight, tops the card against Ian (Scotty) McDonald of Toronto. Dutch McIlmoyle, hard-hitting 165-pounder of this city, goes in against Bill Amato of Toronto. The semi-final sees Harry Low, local welter, trading punches with Harry Kiel of Toronto. The prelims are: Kenny Roy, 147, vs. Eddy Curtain; Joe Hobbins, 135, vs. Bill Joiner; Buddy Redmond, 80, vs. Izzy McIntosh; and Gord Riel, 105, vs. Dan McGregor.

Every Riverview A.C. mitt card to date in this city has been full of action and has drawn big crowds. Another big turnout is expected this Friday night to see these experienced leather-pushers plying their trade, and it ought to be another first-rate fistic program. A trophy has been offered for the most crowd-pleasing local winner that evening. The local fighters are all in good shape, and the three Toronto pugs were picked for their crowd-pleasing style of fighting.

Argo Nominees

Members of Toronto Argonauts, dominion rugby champions, have nominated the two players above for the Jeff Russell Memorial trophy awarded each year in the eastern Interprovincial Rugby Union, to the player adjudged most valuable to his team and at the same time combining qualities of sportsmanship. Top, Jim Palmer, inside wing, playing his ninth year with the team; Lower, Wes Cutler, hard-tackling outside wing, in his seventh season with the Sculiers.

Master of Ceremonies

who will be Master of Ceremonies at the Midnite Frolic at the Capitol theatre on Friday night. The frolic promises to be one of the most amusing and profitable entertainments of the year. Over 100 prizes valued at $300 will be presented between the performances.

Hendrie Offers $1,000 Cash For Dopers

TORONTO, Nov. 2.— (CP).— Officials of the incorporated Canadian racing associations likely will meet again when a probe being conducted by police and special investigators, spreading over all Ontario, develops finds on which the associations may take action, it was understood today.

The body, which controls racing in Ontario, held a meeting Monday at which routine business was discussed and progress on the investigation into alleged doping of horses and a "jockeys' ring" was reported. It was considered likely another meeting would be held this month.

Progress has been made in the investigation into doping of George M. Hendrie's Storm Lass at Woodbine Park's fall meeting, reliable authorities reported. Hendrie, one of the country's most prominent breeders, has offered a reward of $1,000 for apprehension of the persons responsible for the doping.

Three riders are said to be involved in the jockeys' ring, through which mounts allegedly were held back on Ontario tracks so that others might win.

The associations have set May 20 as the opening day for 1939 racing. As usual, the season will start with the running of the King's Plate at Woodbine.

Winnipeg Hebrews Play Regina Dales

WINNIPEG, Nov. 2. — (CP).— Young Men's Hebrew Association of Winnipeg and Regina Dales, finalists in last year's western junior rugby football final, will meet again this year for the Prairie championship.

Y.M.H.A. last night stopped St. John's Roamers 9-4 in a sudden death Manitoba final and will play host to Dales here Nov. 11.

CLAYTON QUITS VILLANS

BURNLEY, England — (CP). — James Clayton, Aston Villa centre-forward, has been transferred to Burnley in the English Football League. He started his big-league career in 1932 with Wolverhampton Wanderers.

Los Angeles—Louis Flyer, 141, Los Angeles, stopped Babe Brandelli, 141½, Los Angeles (8).

Sea Biscuit Whips War Admiral By Good Three Lengths And Sets Up New Track Record

(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 2 (A.P.). —Seabiscuit, the hard-hitting little equine warrior from the West, stands unchallenged to-day as the king of the United States turf.

In as dramatic a battle ever decided over Pimlico's ancient turf, the five-year-old star of Charles S. Howard's stable yesterday settled his argument with Samuel D. Riddle's War Admiral.

Not only did the Biscuit whip the mighty Admiral by three lengths, but he created a new track record for 1 3-16 mile and left 40,000 fans singing the praises of the one-time selling plater, which Howard bought two years ago from the fashionable Wheatley stable for $8,000. Under a fine hand-ride, by George Woolf, formerly of Cardston, Alta., the son of Hard Tack reeled off the distance in 1.56 3-5, one-fifth of a second faster than Pompoon's track mark.

Experts and laymen figured War Admiral would go out in front and stay there all the way, and as the result made the Riddle ace the 1 to 4 favorite, while holding Seabiscuit at slightly better than 2 to 1.

Biscuit Sets Pace.

But it was the Biscuit and not the Admiral that was away in front. It was Seabiscuit and not his four-year-old rival that set practically all the pace and turned back every bid for victory by his rival. After trailing by as much as two lengths for nearly five-eights of a mile, War Admiral moved in and looked the Biscuit in the eye. He stuck his nose in front, and appeared headed for victory.

Seabiscuit hung on like a leech, took command again by the narrow margin of a nose to the mile post, and then bounded away, while Charley Kurtsinger punished the Admiral with his whip in an effort to catch the fast-stepping California bay. Not once did Woolf raise his bat as his mount drew away steadily in the final yards to win by three lengths.

Crawford Called As Shore Stalls

BOSTON, Nov. 2 (CP) — Eddie Shore, for many seasons the back bone of Boston Bruins, adopted his old role of "holdout" and remained in Boston today while his National Hockey League teammates headed for Toronto and their opening game of the 1938-39 campaign against the Maple Leafs.

Manager Art Ross described the veteran Bruin defenceman as a holdout last night after the hockey playing Alberta farmer failed to report to the train taking the team to Toronto for Thursday's opener.

As a precautionary measure, Ross called up Jack Crawford, a Bruin farmhand playing defence with Providence in the International-American League. He will join the Bruins in Toronto and if Shore is not on hand, he will fill the veteran's rear guard spot.

Fights Last Night

(By The Associated Press)

New York—Maxie Berger, 140, Montreal, outpointed Charley Gomer, 135½, Baltimore (8).

Toronto—Henry Hook, 119½, Indianapolis, outpointed bantamweight champion Sixto Escobar, 121½, Puerto Rico (10) (non-title).

Seattle, Wash.—Solly Kreiger, 160, Brooklyn, outpointed middleweight champion Al Hostak,, 159¾, Seattle (15) (title).

Houston, Tex.—Al Bernard, 157, New York, knocked out Les Morris, 1544, San Francisco (3).

Escobar Beaten In 10 Rounds By Henry Hook

TORONTO, Nov. 2 (C.P.). — The fight faithful thumbed the records to-day and what they found left them wondering if Sixto Escobar, world bantamweight boxing champion, was slipping just a little from his lofty perch. The Puerto Rican has been defeated three times this year in overweight bouts.

Hustlin' Henry Hook, the Hoosier Hurricane, inflicted the latest loss in the main bout of a boxing card here last night with a 10-round decision over the champion. A crowd of 5,000 agreed with the verdict.

Escobar, weighing in at 121¾ and making his first Toronto appearance, looked more stylish than the unorthodox Hook, who weighed 119½. But Hook's defence and unusual offence were problems the worried-looking champion couldn't solve. There were no knock-downs.

Hook, formerly of Indianapolis, Indiana, now of Toronto, split the first round while he tested the champion. Then, finding confidence he took every round but the final two. His hooks, swings, "loopers," and full length arm swishes from all angles found their target many times, and he rarely used a straight punch.

Does YOUR System Make Excess Acid?

Acid Indigestion, Colds, Headaches, Bilious Attacks, Constipation OFTEN START THIS WAY

Some people are what are known as acid-makers. They can't help it—and often they don't know it. The results of an excess of acid may seem just like ordinary stomach trouble — but they can't be put right by ordinary stomach remedies! Excess acid may be the reason why you wake up flat, sour, bleary-eyed, bilious — and the reason why fierce purgatives only leave you in the grip of a weakening habit and the same old symptoms.

But there's one thing that acid can't face. That's the neutralizing power of Vange Salts, the alkaline remedy with the natural mineral spa action. A teaspoonful in warm water surges through your system just like the medicinal spring water far away in England where Vange Salts come from. Excess acid is neutralized quickly, painlessly. Your blood is purified of poisons. Your sore stomach walls are soothed. And that mass of hard, poisonous waste matter lying in your intestines is softened gently, naturally, and passed out of your body. Then do you feel good! It's marvellous! But the most marvellous thing is that Vange Salts are only 60 cents a tin! At your druggist now—but if you're wise, on your bathroom shelf tonight! (Advt.)

IN MEMORIAM

RAPER.—In loving memory of our dear baby, Diane, who went to be with Jesus, two years ago today, November 2, 1936.

A bud that the Gardener gave us,
A pure and lovely child,
He gave her in our keeping
To Cherish undefiled.
But just as it was opening
To the glory of the day,
Down came the Heavenly Gardener
And took our flower away.

—Lovingly remembered by Mother, Father, and Carol.

RAPER.—In loving remembrance of our little granddaughter, Beverly Diane Raper, who passed away two years ago to-day, November 2, 1936.

Robbers Blow Foxboro Safe Open Escape With $50 Cash; Blast Is Believed Hallowe'en Prank

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Nov. 2. — Robbers blew open the safe at the general store of S. B. Hamilton, in the village of Foxboro on Tuesday, and successfully stole $50.00. Nothing else was taken, although considerable damage resulted to the safe and store office, where a hole was blown in the ceiling as a result of the explosion.

Shortly after 4.00 a.m. Tuesday, neighbors heard the explosion but attached little significance to the incident, coupling it with the Hallow'en pranksters. Provincial police were not notified of the robbery until 7.00 a.m. when Mr. Hamilton discovered the safe blown open and the office of his store in general disorder.

The robbers, who were believed to have been travelling in a motor car, entered the garage situated at the rear of the store premises and secured a pinch bar, rasp and hammer, which thy subsequently used to force open the front door of Mr. Hamilton's store. Later the robbers knocked off the combination knob of the safe and blew the safe open with nitro-glycerine. The force of the explosion resulted in articles being strewn about the office, while a hole was blown through the ceiling where parts of the safe door flew. The door was blown completely off the safe.

Provincial police stated that there was little chance for apprehending the guilty parties as the robbedy was executed at 4.00 a.m. and was not reported for three hours, thus giving the culprits ample time to completely leave the district.

A Dry October

October of this year has been one of the driest October months on record with only .60 inches of precipitation being recorded. The previous record of .56 inches for October was established in 1930. A deficiency of 3.75 inches was recorded, the average precipitation being 4.35 inches for October. The highest temperature of 84 degrees was noted on the 11th and the lowest 26 degrees on the 7th. The average maximum for the month was 64 degrees being 9 degrees above the 1937 average of 54 degrees, while the average minimum for the month of 36 degrees was one degree above the 1937 average of 35 degrees.

In view of the dryness of the season, with very little rain being recorded anywhere in the Trent District during the past month, it has been found necessary for the Ontario Forestry Branch to place some tower observers temporarily. Although not of a serious nature, a few fires have occurred during the past month, and unless rain is forthcoming, it is expected that more fires will occur when the hunting season opens. It is hoped that hunters, and these who enjoy the scenic beauty of the autumn woodlands, will use every precaution to prevent the destruction of woods and possible hunting haunts.

With the erection of a new office with garage basement at Bancroft, the improvements in the Trent Dicision of the past season, will add greatly to the efficiency of the Service. Two new towers have been put into service and a third one moved to a more suitable location, eliminating a blind area not under tower observatioin.

The number of fires in the Trent District have been small during the past season, and less than five hundred acres have been destroyed, a large percentage of which was barren and grassland.

OBITUARY

J. W. DAWSON

Joseph Wellington Dawson, whose death occurred Friday, was younger son of Richard Dawson and Harriett Barnard, and grandson of William Dawson, who came from Yorkshire, England, in 1818, and was the first settler of South Monaghan. He was born August 10, 1860, and spent his entire life on the homestead in South Monaghan where he was born. His education began in Bailieboro Public School and was continued in the school of experience as he attended to the work on the farm. Whenever possible he gave time to reading and became well-informed on current events and topics of interest. He was for several years a member of the Township Council and had the honor of being reeve for a considerable time.

He was very much interested in the work of the church and gave himself zealously to the varied offices offered him and especially as a steward in the Methodist Church and later in the United Church of Canada.

In 1931 a great loss was sustained when their house was destroyed by fire. In August of last year there was a happy event when the golden wedding was celebrated at Wallace's Point and friends and relatives rejoiced with them.

Of late his health has not been as good as usual, and for the last six months he has been in Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, where he passed away on Saturday morning last.

The funeral service was held in Bailieboro United Church on Monday when, with a large number of friends and acquaintances present, Rev. F. Horton, the pastor, Rev. H. F. Malcolm of Bailieboro and Rev. M. W. Leigh, B.A., of Kingston, conducted a service in which tribute was paid to his useful life Rev. M. W. Leigh, a former pastor and a cousin and a friend of many years, gave an address in which the secrets of his beautiful life were referred to and the services rendered to the church and community commended.

Interment took place in the Bailieboro cemetery, with the following acting as pall-bearers: Ed. Dawson, John Greer, Charles Dawson, Fred. Wood, Welford Dawson and Wilbur Barnard.

To cherish the memory of his godly life, there remain his widow, formerly Emma Stock of Peterborough, their three sons — Bruce of Ayr, Ont., Hadrill of Bailieboro and Lawrence of Timmins—and three daughters — Edith of Williamson Road Public School in Toronto, Ida (Mrs. H. M. Tennant) of Ottawa and Hilda (Mrs. Dr. E. S. Somerville) of South Porcupine; one brother, William Egerton, of London, Ont., and one sister, Selina, of Bailieboro.

MRS. ANNIE E. KYLE

The death of Mrs. Annie E. Kyle, widow of James E. Kyle, occurred at her residence at 142 Murray street on Tuesday after an illness that lasted for some time.

Daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Downes, she was born in Streetsville, Ontario, and came to this city 45 years ago. She was a member of St. Paul's Presbyterian church.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Victor Tully, and two sisters, Mrs. M. McClintock of Streetsville and Mrs. David Carew of Victoria, B.C.

The funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Funeral Home of A. Comstock and Sons, 305 Water street, Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr of St. Paul's Presbyterian church officiating. Interment will be made at Little Lake Cemetery.

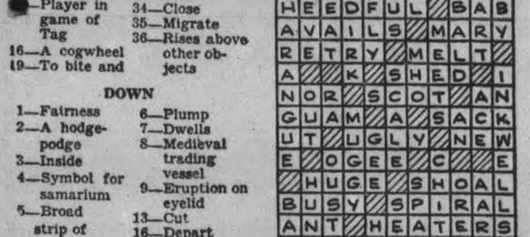
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

AN EXPERT'S MEASURE

WILL MY HAND probably produce a game if my partner is too weak to answer a bid of one? If the answer is yes, an expert will make a two bid which is forcing to game. If it is no, if a game is not in sight unless the partner is strong enough to answer a one bid, the expert bids only one. All the formulae in the world can give you no better measure than that to distinguish between hands justifying openings of one or two.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable)

The bidding on this deal began by North calling 2-Spades, to which South responded with 2-No Trump. North next bid 3-Diamonds and allowed the contract to stand at 3-No Trump, which was South's next response.

The heart Q was led by West, covered by dummy's K and won with East's A. The heart 2 was returned and won by West, who cashed three more heart tricks. West returned the spade 10, on which the Q was played and East took with his K. He came back with a spade and the 8 forced the A. Declarer then cashed the clubs A and K and covered the J with the Q to enter his hand to try the diamond finesse. This play also lost to East, who took the spade J. The result was that declarer lost five hearts, two spades and one diamond.

South criticized North severely for his optimism in making a two bid. North retorted that he had sufficient high cards to do so but he failed to realize that what he was lacking was playing tricks

Germany Colony In Central Africa Visioned By Oswald Pirow

LONDON, Nov. 2 — (CP-Havas). —"A South African," writing in the Daily Mail to-day, said Oswald Piron, South African Defence Minister, "believes he has found the key to the German colonial problem in Central Africa."

"It is this solution that South Africa's Defence Minister is bringing to London with him after discussion with the Portuguese authorities at Lisbon, whose writ runs through the enormous emptiness of Angola, which is almost terra incognita," the writer declared.

"Sprawling opposite it is the bulk of the Congos and Northern Rhodesia. Patterning northwards, lies the panorama of the west coast territories. Mr. Pirow sees it all as a jigsaw puzzle that can be re-arranged so that Germany may come into the African picture.

"Britain, France, Portugal, and Belgium will give and take, concede and buy; they will pool their contributions and so give Germany her heart's desire—a colony. That it seems is the Pirow idea."

Mr. Pirow hopes to find out "how much Germany expects to receive and how much the colonial powers, together with the Union of South Africa, are prepared to give," the Daily Telegraph (Conservative) commented.

"Rumors of plans for returning colonial territory to Germany have been current for some time," it added. "It may be confidently said that the British government is considering various suggestions but that no detailed plan has yet been drawn up."

The South African statesman arrived at Paris from Lisbon, where he conferred with Portuguese statesmen, and left the French capital for London shortly before 11 a.m. He plans to visit Germany and Belgium after conferring in London.

New Fort Frances Homes Rise Rapidly

TORONTO, Nov. 2—(CP).—Picture of hope and determination born of the still-smouldering embers of the death-fanned Fort Frances fire was painted to-day by Dr. W. S. Caldwell, assistant director of the Ontario division of the Red Cross.

Rising from the ashes of the fire that swept an extensive area in the Rainy River district of Western Ontario three weeks ago are new homes for the settlers and their families. Rehabilitation operations are being rushed so the stricken families will be sheltered before snow blankets the blackened area.

"Everyone is working almost 24 hours a day to do a fast job," said Dr. Caldwell, just back from Fort Frances. Building operations are in full swing and everyone is lending a helping hand, from the leading business men of Fort Frances right down to the humblest settler."

Shelters have to be erected for nearly 80 families who lost either their home and outhouses or their home only. Fourteen other families lost outhouses.

Dr. Caldwell estimated total loss of the 93 families affected at about $200,000. The Red Cross is attempting to raise $100,000, mostly in Ontario, to provide only the bare necessities.

Only Polishing To Do On Canada-U.S. Pact

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—(AP).—The negotiation of a new trade treaty between the United States and Canada has virtually been completed and, officials said last night, no obstacles remain in the way.

Officials said they now are devoting themselves to polishing up the document in details with the view of making it public about the time that the projected treaty between the United States and the United Kingdom is expected to be announced.

Although the United States has been negotiating separately with Canada and her Mother Country, close trade ties between Canada and the United Kingdom have tended to make the two trade pacts interrelated problems.

Fowl Supper Netted Congregation $300

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BRIDGENORTH, Nov. 2. — The congregation of the Bridgenorth United Church celebrated their anniversary Sunday. The Rev. C. Ferguson, B.A., of Bethany, was the guest preacher and pleased the large congregation very much with his earnest discourses. The local choir provided excellent music. The well-arranged autumn foliages and flowers including beautiful plants and ferns, added to the beauty of the sanctuary.

The Wednesday night previous, the ladies served a sumptuous fowl supper under the leadership of their president, Mrs. M. Fowler. Many Peterborough folk and others showed their satisfaction by returning the next night to help to finish up what remained. The proceeds amounted to $300, this sum being a record for Bridgenorth.

Owing to the large seating accommodation, good organization and everyone sticking to their post, the large crowd was served as advertised without waiting. Each of the following ladies had charge of a table of thirty plates: Mesdames E. Conners, Hardill, B. Jopling, Moore, A. Nichols, W. Nichols, and J. Smith. They were assisted by the following waiters: Miss Brown, Mrs. C. Forsythe, Miss Jean Fowler, Miss W. Jopling, Mrs. Earl Mann, Mrs. D. Mann, Mrs. McWilliams, Misses Hilda Mann, Mary Moore, Phyllis Moore, Blanche McWilliams, Opal Robinson, Olive Sidey, Velma Telford, Clarissa White, Frances Wilkinson; Messrs. A. Bell, Newton Bell, E. Conner, Max Fowler, C. Forsythe, M. Fowler, D. Jopling, R. Jopling, H. McKay, F. Moore, G. Petterson, G. Westlake. The kitchen committee were Mesdames Black, Cole, J. Grant, J. Jopling, F. Jopling, McIlmoyle, McCall, McLaughlin, Petterson, Robinson, C. Telford, W. Telford, H. Telford, White, Westlake, M. Wheeler, Wilkinson. The buyers were Mrs. M. Fowler, Mr. C. Telford and Mr. Moore. The door committee were Messrs. Ball, B. Jopling, J. Jopling, W. Telford, Robinson, Westlake.

After supper the "Cheerful Workers" of St. James church, Peterborough, presented their play "All In the Family" most creditably. Evidently these workers live up to their name.

Western Farmer Does Not Feel Indebted To East, Rotary Told

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 2. — The Saskatchewan farmer does not feel at all indebted to Eastern Canada was the belief expressed by Grant Meiklejohn who has spent the past two years at Big Beaver near the southern boundary of Saskatchewan. Claiming the breach between the East and West was growing, Mr. Meiklejohn told Rotarians at their noonday luncheon here Monday that during the past two or three years farmers in this section had been looking enviously toward the state of Montana and the relief afforded by the W.P.A.

The speaker stated he had arrived in Southern Saskatchewan two years ago to spend his first night in a 20 x 14 house with only one room separated by a curtain, behind which the hosts prepared for the night. "In this district which has been opened up fairly recently, there is neither rural mail delivery or telephone communication. This is partly due to the persistent crop failures since 1929 and the fact that it is an only recently developed section of the West. The ground was so dry two years ago that during the winter the frost did not penetrate it. I saw one farm with its fences under sand and a new one built over top of them. "As hope of the 1937 crop disappeared farmers turned to summer fallow and in July the torrential rains which reached flood proportions, brought on a luxuriant growth only to be checked by army worms and grasshoppers." Direct relief was supplied the farmer, supplemented by car loads of food from the East.

Moral Lowered.

"The moral of the people of Saskatchewan has been greatly lowered," claimed the speaker, stating that farmers had been compelled to sell their beef cattle in order to get hay from the government that would permit them to feed from two to three head. This has resulted in great dishonesty and misrepresentation in the size of their herds. This spring with all kinds of moisture apparent the government provided farmers with rust proof Thatcher wheat and hundreds of acres of Marquis wheat were sown as well only to be graded five and bring 60 cents a bushel.

Transportation is the big problem. It costs twenty-one cents a bushel to transport this wheat to Fort William. In fact to ship a barrel of apples in from my home in Seymour township to Big Beaver it would cost $4.85. These things, coupled with the fact that the West produces its wheat with machinery manufactured in the East where the profits stay, are what are causing the rift between the east and the west to grow. Most of the farmers are an industrious type of immigrant, people who were highly successful in their own country and were attracted to Canada's west by the $10.00 Canadian farms advertised a few years ago. Ambitious farmers, they are the best sellers and the best buyers Canada has. Nor do they feel at all indebted to the east. The deepening of the St. Lawrence waterway and its facilities of transportation would form an important link towards closer Canadian unity the speaker asserted.

N. A. McColl moved a vote of thanks.

Quebec Elections In Home Stretch

MONTREAL, Nov. 2—(CP)—Provincial by-election campaigns in two Quebec ridings hit the home stretch today. Electors of Montreal St. Louis and Stanstead County go to the polls tomorrow to choose two men to fill legislative assembly seats vacated by resignations.

The election is strictly a test of strength between Premier Maurice Duplessis' party, which has yet to lose a by-election, and the major opposition group in the House. Straight two-man fights are being waged in both constituencies with the two-year-old administration's record as the major issue.

The balloting can have no effect on the balance of power in the assembly, the elective division of Quebec's two-house legislature. The Union Nationale group holds 72 seats against 11 for the Liberals and five for the Nationalists, a group of members who broke away from the government last year after a split over policy.

But Union Nationales and Liberals each have a chance to gain a seat through the elections. The Government can gain in St. Louis, where Liberal Peter Bercovitch held the sea previously. The Liberals can snatch one from the administration in Stanstead, where Rouville Beaudry, Union Nationale, resigned because he was "disillusioned" with politics.

Hamilton Hallowe'en Damage Runs $5,000

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 2—(CP). —A survey to-day placed the damage caused by Hallowe'en pranksters in Hamilton at $5,000—the heaviest in some years.

A Westdale church was damaged; a garage and automobile were fired by a gang of youths, a dairy wagon, valued at $125, was stolen and wrecked, street cars were daubed with whitewash, while the windows of another dairy were smashed.

Four juveniles, members of prominent families, will be summonsed to court following a blackout in the south section. Police claim lamp bulbs in street standards were broken over a four-block area.

One unidentified man was injured when run over by a milk wagon which two score revellers were attempting to haul into a hotel lobby.

Woman Beaten Up

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 2—(CP)—Attacked by a stocky man as she was walking home from a theatre last night, Mrs. Daisy North, 48, suffered scalp and nose injuries.

Mrs. North's purse was taken from her but it later was found in a vacant lot with its money contents intact, except for some silver which dropped from it as the thug fled.

See Early Deal On Plane Orders

LONDON, Nov. 2—(CP-Havas).—Hope for early conclusion of negotiations now in progress for the placing of airplane orders in Canada was expressed in the House of Commons to-day by Sir Kingsley Wood, Secretary for Air.

Asked about the progress of the negotiations, Sir Kingsley said:

"It is not yet possible for me to make a definite statement in this matter beyond the announcement made on September 2 as to the result of the mission's work (referring to the announcement that the mission sent to Canada had recommended large purchases in Canada for the Royal Air Force.)

"Negotiations are being actively pursued with representatives of Canadian aircraft firms who have come to London at my invitation, and I hope that successful conclusions will be reached early in the future."

"Are these orders to be placed directly from this country," asked Oliver Simmonde, Conservative, "or will they have to go through the Canadian Government?"

"It would be better," replied Sir Kingsley, "to await the full statement after the negotiations which are now being carried on have resulted, I hope, satisfactorily."

Woe For Germany Long As Jew Left

GREDING, Germany, Nov. 2. — (AP).—Julius Streicher, governor of Franconia and anti-semitic publisher, said today misfortune would attend Germany so long as a single Jew remained in the country.

"So long as their is a single Jew in Germany, misfortune has not been finally taken from us," he told citizens of this Bavarian town in accepting an honorary citizenship.

"Anybody who has been sick must see to it that not a single disease germ remains in his body. So long as a single Jew remains as a germ carrier we must be on the lookout."

300 Miners Once Employed In Belmont's Ghost Town; Iron Ore Shipped To U.S.

Once A Hustling Hopeful Village On Crowe Lake

(By HARRY THEOBALD)

BLAIRTON, Ont., November 3.—Once a hustling and hopeful village of more than seven hundred population, with three hundred men employed in the iron mines down by Crowe Lake, Blairton in Belmont township, is today only a name and a memory, yielding itself once more to the approaching silence of another weary and uneventful winter.

Seventy years ago the explosions of blasting operations in the high hill of rock overlooking the lake, then regarded as richly mineralized with a fine quality of iron, rolled and re-echoed over the Peterborough and Hastings boundary countryside, even as far as Bannockburn, twenty-five miles away. Nowadays nothing much louder than the put-put of outboard motors, symbols of discovery of its natural resource as an attractive summer playground, disturbs the pastoral quiet of sunny afternoons.

These many years Blairton has been listed as a ghost town, its name gone from the postal directory, its once lively streets and community institutions barely traceable from what was then the business section of the mining village, up a rising slope and down a gentle decline to the site of the old station, and the forges of the blacksmiths who sharpened the drills for the miners, and the piles of broken rock along the shore line and extending out into the lake, remnants of labor long ago expended.

Blairton to Erie, Pa.

For all its lost ambitions and its comparative desertion, except during the summer months when the tourists come, Blairton has felt the expansive mood, has known something of transitory glory when it was one end of the long and irregu-

Hunters Missing

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Nov. 3 (A.P.). — Searchers for James D. Scott of Grand Rapids and his 18-year-old guide, Daniel Sheean, missing for a week in the Georgian Bay area, held little hope to-day they would be found alive.

An airplane search of Georgian Bay waters was made on Wednesday, but no trace of the men was found. Mrs. Scott, who accompanied her husband to Blind River, Ont., on a hunting trip, left for home on Wednesday.

Training School Sends 50 p.c. Boys To Success

BOWMANVILLE, Ont., Nov. 3.—(CP).—A. R. Virgin, superintendent of the Ontario Training Schools for Boys here, said to-day the chances were "better than even" for school "graduates" to emerge as good citizens after undergoing training on the 300-acre farm that is considered a model of perfection as an institution of juvenile correction.

The pupils, ranging from an eigrt-year-old "incorrigible' to sturdy lads of 16, learn everything from dramatics to mending their own clothes. The boys have their own hospital and their own bakery. Three are barbers who under the watchful eye of an instructor cut the hair of the other inhabitants of the little town.

The 207 boys are in the school for average terms of 15 months, committed on the application of parents, social service agencies or a juvenile court judge. The school has been in operation since 1925. Mr. Virgin said that when the boys are released more than half of them will be successful in efforts to earn a living.

Some Examples

Since the school opened "several of the boys who came to us with an anti-school attitude have become high school graduates," said Mr.

Remnants Of Blairton's Brief Glory As Mining Village

Seventy years ago the Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora Mining and Railway Company operated an iron mine at Blairton in Belmont township about five miles east of Marmora. The building, (No. 1) above, was the railway station in the community of 700 persons. Ore was conveyed over the company's railway from Blairton to Trent Bridge, there loaded on scows and taken to Harwood, thence by rail to Cobourg, and by Lake Ontario boats to Erie, Pennsylvania. Low grade ore (No. 2) was thrown up in long piles, the one in this picture jutting out into Crowe Lake. One of the pits (No. 3) was virtually a surface operation. The rock was blown out of this sheer hill whose treed top affords a long vista of the lake. Some excavationn at this site was carried to a considerable depth but has been filled with water for many years. Some of the 300 miners used to work on the face of this mineralized hill, and their echoes of their blasting used to be heard as far as Bannockburn, 25 miles. Today Blairton is only a ghost town, but it takes on considerable liveliness during the summer months when the tourists arrive at the west end of Crowe Lake. (Parks Studio Photos.)

Must Mobilize Industry Eden Believes

LONDON, Nov. 3—(CP-Havas).—Anthony Eden today appealed for unity "irrespective of party" to help Great Britain face the tasks of the future. In a letter to his Warwickshire constituents, the former foreign secretary wrote:

"It is now our urgent duty, irrespective of party, to realize an essential measure of agreement as to line of approach. The need is indeed imperative. I refuse to accept that this effort is beyond the nation's powers."

The Munich pact has proved disappointing, he said, but "it is, however, above all the future that now preoccupies all minds. Under such conditions it is the duty of each one of us to contribute all that he can in thought and action to the nation's guidance at so critical a period in its history.

"Most of us are agreed that there is not likely to be any lasting peace in the world until some system of international order is established.

It was the view we all expressed at the general election.

"Most of us are agreed that only a Britain which is strong in purpose and in defence can play its full part in restoring and maintaining such order.

"But it is not possible greatly to accelerate rearmament without taking steps to mobilize industry, such steps as hitherto we have only been willing to take in time of war. These sacrifices are to be endured by all sections of the community and this can only gain general and wholehearted acceptance on the basis of national unity. Nothing is impossible if the determination is here."

Manion Nomination Papers Are Filed

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 3.—(CP)—Official nomination papers for Hon. Dr. R. J Manion, Dominion Conservative leader, and Conservative candidate in the federal by-election in London Nov 14, were filed today with returning officer Charles Ross at Hyman Hall.

Monday is nomination day with the hours being fixed between 12 noon and 2 o'clock. There will be only two candidates with Dr. Manion being opposed by E. O. Hall, C.C.F. standard bearer. Some papers have been filed on behalf of Mr. Hall, to permit the nominators' names being checked.

The papers for each candidate must bear at least 100 names of voters recorded on the lists. In past elections it has frequently occurred that some papers have carried several hundred names. The election is to fill the seat made vacant by the death of Major F. C. Betts.

Madoc Lawyer, George S. White Conservative Candidate In Hastings-Peterborough Riding

(By Staff Reporter.)

MARMORA, Nov. 3.—George S. White, 41-year-old Madoc lawyer, was named Conservative candidate for the Hastings-Peterborough Federal riding at an enthusiastic convention in Marmora Town Hall Wednesday afternoon.

Delegates from all parts of the riding from Anstruther on the north to Elzinor township in the eastern part of Hastings county gave the clean-cut, aggressive young lawyer a majority on the first ballot. T. P. Lancaster, former M.P.P. of Havelock and George Thompson, reeve of Rawdon township, were the other nominees and they pledged their whole-hearted support to Mr. White, and both congratulated him as soon as the president of the Association, R. A. Dean, of Norwood, announced the result of the balloting.

Town Hall Jammed

The Town Hall was jammed to the doors with all available standing room taken up. There were 177 official voting delegates, consisting of 44 from the County of Peterborough, 10 officers of the Association who voted by virtue of their office and the balance came from Hastings County.

An official welcome, cordial and brief, was extended the delgates by Reeve Lynn of Marmora village, and before nominations were asked for the chairman, R. A. Dean, asked the officers of the Association to take seats on the platform. The executive consists of George West, Madoc; Geo. A. Bailey, Harold; J. A. Sexsmith, Havelock, and Fred Curry, Madoc, all past presidents; R. A. Dean, Norwood, president; Don Robertson, Deloro, 1st vice; Dr. S. S. Lumb, Bancroft, 2nd vice; George White, Madoc, 3rd vice; James A. Moore, Queensboro, treasurer and R. A. Elliott, Deloro secretary.

Dr. A. T. Embury, of Bancroft, the defeated candidate in the last election who ran second to Rork Ferguson, M.P., of Norwood, Liberal spoke briefly and was asked to sit on the platform along with Dr. H. E. Welsh, M.P.P., East Hastings, and R. D. Arnott, M.P.P., West Hastings.

Very Large Riding

Robert A. Elliott, secretary of the Association, explained to the delegates and supporters that the riding was so large it was deemed advisable by the members of the Association to name a candidate this Autumn so that he might have at least a year in which to campaign and do the proper amount of ground work to ensure the return of the riding to the Conservative fold. It was unlikely that there would be an election before next fall. All nominations must be proposed and seconded in writing by delegates he stated. Seven were nominated as follows: L. E. Neale,

Race Tip Offices Raided Again

NEW YORK, Nov. 3—(AP)—Detectives today raided 13 offices in Manhattan and one in Brooklyn in connection with an alleged $15,000,000-a-year race track tipping racket.

Lamar Hardy, United States Attorney directing the raids, ordered the detectives to arrest everyone found on the premises on charges of using the mails to defraud.

The raids were timed to coincide with the opening in federal court of four sealed indictments naming 70 persons in the alleged race-track racket.

Assistant U. S. Attorney William Power Maloney said that most of the 70 defendants, arrested March 23 and released on bail, had immediately gone back into business and were mulcting new victims even while evidence on the earlier charges was being presented to the Grand Jury.

As in the earlier case, the principal defendants in the indictments opened today were five brothers named Adelman, Two of their sons and eight brothers-in-law.

Maloney said the family combination had admitted harvesting $500,000 a year from the business.

Twelve raiding squads, composed of three detectives each swooped down on the authentic (Capa) Turf Bureau, track cracks, R. B. B. Publishing Company, pay off, King Associates, winner, Paragon Institute of raceology, Rex Flagg, Charles J. Bauer, Thorobred Publishing Company, Henry Miller, Sam Stern, and Racing Weekly.

Most of the concerns maintained offices on lower fifth avenue or Broadway.

3 Years, Lash For Lads In Holdup

700 Appeal in Vain To Judge Wearing 2 Mothers Collapse

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 3 (CP) — Screams rang out in Middlesex courthouse today, two women collapsed and a third had to be assisted from courtroom, when a pair of London youths were sentenced by Judge Joseph Wearing to three years in Kingston penitentiary and 10 lashes each for armed robbery.

The two, Harold Easterbrook, 24, and James Morgan, 23, both of London, pleaded guilty Monday to holding up the Maple City gasoline service station on York street, west of Richmond, and taking $51, on October 16.

"Oh, my God, no," cried Morgan's mother, as acting Crown Attorney Campbell Calder pressed for a penitentiary term and lashes. Then when sentence was passed, Easterbrook's mother half rose in her seat, screamed "Oh, no," in a loud voice, and fell to the floor. Morgan's aunt also collapsed during the proceedings and his mother had to be helped out.

School teachers, doctors, neighbors, an insurance man, a city alderman, a jail guard all rallied behind the two youths, declaring their record hitherto had been without fault and appealed for leniency.

700 Urge Leniency

Nearly 700 Londoners addressed appeals to the judge for leniency. About 150 signed a petition on behalf of Morgan, while nearly 500 names were on a petition presented on behalf of Easterbrook.

Without warning, a woman sitting beside Morgan's mother, identified as Morgan's aunt, but whose name officials said they did not know, fell from the court room bench to the floor in a faint.

Sheriff's officials had to push benches aside to pick her up, and then carried her to the sheriff's office in another part of the courthouse. Morgan's mother continued to sob loudly, and she was evidently bordering on collapse.

Then the judge passed sentence. As he concluded the words "and 10 lashes of the whip," Mrs. Easterbrook half rose in her seat, where she had been sobbing, and cried, "Oh, no," then fell in a faint.

Four More Involved In Campbell Case

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 3—(CP).—Charges of "receiving, comforting and assisting" Melville Campbell, and Harold Moore, accused as Mt. Brydges bank robbers, in order to enable them to escape was read by county magistrate Hawkshaw today against four Windsor residents, two men and two women.

The four are Miss Jean Crumb, Mrs. John Donaghue, her husband, and Everett McKibben, Windsor barber. The arrest of Miss Crumb and Mrs. Donaghue in London late yesterday afternoon brought to eight the number of persons now held in a probe of the Oct. 13 holdup of the Royal Bank at Mount Brydges.

All four were remanded until next Wednesday, the day when Crown Attorney Newton has intimated he proposes to proceed against all the persons charged. Also remanded to that date were Campbell, and Raymond (Dolly) Quinton, both held for two weeks on charges of armed robbery.

Meanwhile came intimation from Windsor police circles that a relative of Moore may claim a reward offered last Saturday for his capture. Information leading to his arrest Tuesday came from a relative, authorities at Windsor said.

No Biting In Her Act Sally Tells Jury

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 3.—(AP)—Sally Rand, fan dancer turned fashion plate, smiled confidently at the middle-aged jurors who may decide before nightfall whether she acted like a perfect lady in an alleged assault-and-battery case.

Sally yesterday told her side of the story of how she came to be charged with biting and scratching a candid camerman and his girl friend for snapping her fan-and-bubble dance at a theatre last summer.

"My work represents so much to me that it is extremely detrimental to have poor pictures," she said, nodding a jaunty wine-colored hat and glancing demurely down at her teal-blue tailored frock.

It was while Sally and her bubble were spotlighted by a "No. 37 moonlight blue" ray that she heard the click of a camera.

She said she sent an usher to tell the cameraman, Ray Stanford, to leave, but he and his companion, Hazel Drain, only came closer.

After the finale, she said she "went to ask if I could buy the films."

Sally said Stanford replied in the negative and started up the aisle although his suspenders were in her grasp.

No, said Sally, she definitely did not bite Miss Drain.

Naval Raid Off England Stirs House

LONDON, Nov. 3 (AP)—Opposition speakers in the House of Commons pressed the government today for a statement on the Spanish naval incident off the English east coast.

The insurgent motor vessel Nadir shelled and sank the government freighter Tantabria almost at the moment Prime Minister Chamberlain yesterday told the House the Spanish civil war was "no longer a menace to the peace of Europe."

When news of the sea attack reached parliament, however, one opposition speaker suggested "they will be up the Thames next."

In some quarters there was a belief the attack indicated General Franco had decided on a bold plan to venture far from Spanish waters to intercept enemy shipping.

Philip Noel Baker, Labor, told the House: "The Spanish war comes nearer home. A Spanish merchant ship on a time charter of a British company has been attacked off Cromer by an insurgent trawler said to be armed from Germany."

Hoare Defends System As Laborite Bares War Scare Conditions

By J. F. Sanderson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Nov. 3—(CP Cable).—Great Britain's system of air raid precautions, despite all its imperfections, will stand comparison with that of any country in the world with the exception of Germany, Sir Samuel Hoare, home secretary, told the House of Commons to-day.

Sir Samuel Announced the government proposes to complete trench systems dug in London parks at the height of the crisis. They will be covered and sodded, leaving them ready for the next emergency.

Herbert Morrison, leader of the Labor majority in the London County Council, made a violent attack on the A.R.P. deficiencies during the crisis. He said there were inadequate supplies of gas masks, stretchers, ambuance equipment, and other necessary material.

He said anti-aircraft guns had proved entirely inadequate and had been slow in delivery. "I really had the vision of London going through two or three days of frightful bombardment without any guns at all," he said. Some of the gun crews had guns but no auxiliary equipment, he charged, while others had the equipment but no guns.

Seeking Recruits In Economic War

YARMOUTH, N.S., Nov. 3.—(CP).—An appeal for quick mobilization for a war against adverse economic conditions in Nova Scotia was made by Dr. M. M. Coady of the extension department of St. Francis Xavier University, Antigonish, N.S.

Speaking before a gathering of school teachers here, Dr. Coady urged a mobilization as thorough and efficient as recruiting would be in the event of actual warfare.

"We recruit for war," he declared. "If the crisis had not been turned aside, I suppose I would be out recruiting for volunteers just as I did once before. Happily, the crisis passed. But why should we not mobilize for a war against existing conditions?"

Liberia's population has just been estimated at 2,000,000 Africans and 400 whites.

Ottawa Uneasy Lest Bren Inquiry End Further British Orders

OTTAWA, Nov. 3—(CP).—There is considerable concern as to whether Britain will continue to assist Canada in any armament program due to the difficulty which has arisen over the Bren gun contract, a high-ranking official of the national defence department told The Canadian Press last night.

"Very gave anxiety is felt in Canada whether or not Britain will continue to place arms orders in this country," the official said.

Britain's co-operation through the placing of orders in Canadian industrial plants which would manufacture armaments simultaneously for the Canadian government "is essential", to any long-range arms program in the Dominion and any possibility that such orders would not be forthcoming "is causing great worry," he said.

(The Bren gun contract is being investigated by a judicial inquiry now being conducted in Ottawa. Nnder the contract, John Inglis Compay of Toronto will manufacture 7,000 Bren machine guns for the Canadian government. The company also has an order for 5,000 guns from the British war office.

Col. George Drew, Toronto lawyer, criticized the terms of the contract between the Inglis Company and the Canadian government in an article in Maclean's magazine and this article led to the probe.)

British Government co-operation in any armament program for Canada to reduce unit costs and lessen financial limitations is urgently sought by the Federal Government, the official continued.

Stewart Reburn Used Peterborough-Made Shoelaces at Carnival

Toronto, Nov. 3.

STEWART REBURN, Toronto skater now in Hollywood, has found they don't make shoelaces seven feet long in California. So he had to get the laces from Toronto to open a skating engagement with Sonja Henie at the Hollywood ice carnival Tuesday.

Reburn was sent eight pairs of the 84-inch fancy skating boot laces by Walter Arian, Toronto skating club professional. The laces are woven in Peterborough.

Coffin Probe Fails In Shakespeare Case

LONDON, Nov. 3 (AP)—Excavations in ancient tombs of Westminster Abbey failed to day to uncover parchments by which scholars hoped to determine the authorship of Shakespeare's works.

Workmen were said to have struck a lead coffin and the bones of one of Great Britain's illustrious poets but uncertainty developed whether the tomb was that of the poet Michael Drayton who died in 1630 or that of Edmund Spenser, in which researchers expect to find handwritten elegies for comparison with known specimens, thereby settling the controversy whether Shakespeare himself or Sir Francis Bacon wrote the dramas attributed to Shakespeare.

U.S. Goes Back To Dirigibles Again Orders One 6th Size Of Akron

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3 (AP)—The United States navy, after three years, is preparing to resume its experiments with airships on a cautious scale.

Completion of a personal study by President Roosevelt resulted in an announcement yesterday the new dirigible which the United States congress authorized would be small in comparison with its predecessors.

It will have less than one-sixth of the bulk of the ill-fated Akron and Macon. Its maximum length of 325 feet contrasts with their 785 commissioned Los Angeles, which feet and with the 660 feet of the de-the new craft will replace.

Reduction of the dimensions raised the possibility that the airship may be all-metal, instead of the fabric-covered zeppelin type first developed by Germany.

Builders of the one all-metal blimp now in naval service at Lakehurt, N.J., said they were eager to tackle a ship up to 2,000,000 cubic feet, but nothing larger at this time. Congress authorized a craft up to 3,000,000 cubic feet.

A Richmond, Va., firm has proposed to build an airship of metal, with four motors mounted inside a hollow tube extending from stem to stern.

Mr. Roosevelt during his study hinted that his idea was to use the new dirigle as a coast patrol vessel, as well to keep in training the aerial experts who manned the Macon and the Akron.

The new dirigle will be too small to carry more than two or three planes.

468 Prisoners Pray, Send Governor Plea To Spare Negro Slayer's Life

Pittsburgh, Nov. 3 (AP)

HOPE of 40-year-old William McKinley Blackwell, a Negro scheduled to die Nov. 7 in the electric chair, rested today in a unique appeal by his fellow prisoners to Governor George Earle.

The prisoners in the Allegheny county (Pittsburgh) jail knelt last night at their Wednesday service and prayed that Blackwell's life would be saved. Then 468 of them signed a petition directed to the governor pleading for commutation of the death sentence.

Blackwell was convicted of slaying Richard Parker, 44, a rival of the affections of Blackwell's common law wife, on July 6, 1936 at nearby Whitaker. He originally was sentenced to die on Oct. 10 but Earle granted a reprieve until Nov. 7.

Warden John McNeil, who signed the petition to Earle also, said the demonstration was one of faith in a fellow prisoner unprecedented in his 40 years at the jail.

Calgary Suburb Balks At Paying Taxes Till Alberta Probes Conditions

Calgary, Nov. 3 (CP)

TAXPAYERS of Forest Lawn, municipality three miles east of Calgary, declared a strike last night—no tax payments until grievances of the ratepayers are settled by the Alberta government.

"You bet the strike is on—about 95 to 96 per cent effective," said Leslie Burdett, secretary of the district ratepayers' association.

He explained school taxes would be paid but no payments would be made on property levies.

Increased property taxes and failure of the Alberta government to hold a judicial inquiry, as requested, into affairs of the municipality brought about the strike, he said.

The municipality is governed by an administration appointed by the provincial department of municipal affairs.

Chinese Call 300,000 To New Army

Kai-Shek Prepares For Determined Stand in Czechwan

By Donald Davies
(Associated Press Foreign Staff.)

CHENGTU, China, Nov. 3—(AP)—A new army of 300,000 recruits is being trained in Szechwan province to fight alongside 400,000 well-drilled Szechwanese in renewed hopes of stopping the invading Japanese.

It is estimated that rice, wheat and other crops in this western province of nearly 53,000,000 population and 166,000 square miles are big enough to support 2,700,000 fighters for a year—one of the reasons why General Chiang Kai-Shek chose it for the new military base for operations against Japan.

Food supplies are being requisitioned, factories opened, mines developed. Machinery from factories in Japanese - occupied eastern cities is said to be on the way to Szechwan.

Crowds read eagerly anti-Japanese posters and war bulletins. Air raid defences are being erected here and at Chungking, the provisional national capital, also in Szechwan.

The main route for foreign war supplies now is the 700-mile highway to the Yunnan province head of the railway from French Indo-China. The road between Szechwan and the warfront in adjoining Hunan is 900 miles—an indication of the difficulty of communication.

A dispatch from Chungking to-day said Chinese Guerillas were harrassing the Japanese on increasingly wide fronts, especially in Kwangtung province near the Canton-Hankow railway and also in the Suiyuan district.

Tot's Bonfire Ends Fatally

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 3.—(CP)—Gloria Ann Robson, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Robson, of Kintore village, died to-day in hospital here as a result of burns received at her home Monday.

Playing alone near the family home shortly after the noon hour Monday, the child found some matches. As she lit a bonfire with some old corn stalks lying nearby, her dress became ignited.

Men working at the saw mill owned by her father, in the vicinity, heard the screams and arrived in time to tear the burning clothes from her body. Dr. Weir, Thamesford physician, was summoned. After administering preliminary treatment to the burns, Dr. Weir ordered the child rushed to the hospital here.

Dr. Weir said the child's death resulted from shock, produced by the terrible burns on her face, arms and chest.

Young Auto Thief Draws 18 Months

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 3—(CP)—When George W. Ballard, K.C., Crown Attorney, sought "exemplary punishment" for auto thieves, Magistrate H. A. Burbidge to-day sentenced 21-year-old Edward Martin, to 18 months definite and six months indefinite in the Ontario Reformatory.

Martin, with Robert Laing, 19, were charged with the theft of an auto from A. R. McKay, Sunday night, and were apprehended yesterday in Brantford after hectic incidents in and out of the auto on that city's main streets.

Martin also pleaded guilty to breach of recognizance and sentenced to three months consecutive to the auto theft term, while Laing pleaded guilty to "joyriding," and was remanded until Friday for sentence.

Bones Revealed In Kidnap Murder Cellar

NEW YORK, Nov. 3—(AP).—Police dug into the cement basement of Ukranian Hall today seeking buried bones of possible victims of a "kidnap syndicate" accused by federal agents of slaying one man and collecting ransom for the release of at least two others.

Pickaxes during the night unearthed the first gruesome evidence in the Macabre searche — several bones believed by police to be part of the body of Arthur Fried, White Plains business executive kidnapped last Dec. 4 and held for $200,000 ransom. Two smaller bones appeared to be the remains of teeth.

J. Edgar Hoover, federal bureau of investigation chief, who announced the arrests, turned over to assistants of Thomas Dewey, Manhattan district attorney, three of the four men he accused of shooting Fried to death and burning his body in the Lodge hall's furnace after failing to collect ransom.

A fourth suspect, Joseph Stephen Sacoda, 27, named bp the bureau chief as the actual slayer, is in Sing Sing for parole violation.

The Execution Chamber?

Police said stains apparently made by blood had been found on a coal chute leading to the cellar. They also announced discovery of a secret room adjoining the basement and expressed belief it might have been use as a gangland execution chamber.

Yugoslavians See Axe On Them Next

Fears Germany, Italy Out to Control All East of Rhine

VIENNA, Nov. 3—(AP).—Yugoslavia expects to be next to lose territory in the revision of Eastern European boundaries under the sponsorship of Germany and Italy, Yugoslav observers of the Hungarian - Czechoslovak negotiations said to-day.

Yugoslav and Rumanian onlookers of the arbitration proceedings by which Hungary gained territory she wanted from Czechoslovakia pictured Germany and Italy in new roles as guardians of all Europe east of the Rhine.

They feared the two Fascist countries in that role would force a complete revision of the Great War Trianon Treaty, which split Hungarian territory among the victorious countries.

If this were done Rumania and Yugoslavia would lose large portions of territory taken from Hungary. Yugoslav quarters said to-day they expected a campaign for such revision now on the principle of racial nationalism.

A Common Frontier.

Polish quarters said, too, that Hungary now was in position to obtain all of Czechoslovak Ruthenia to establish a common Hungarian-Polish frontier which both countries desire.

Hungarian won a dominating position in the wild Carpathian Mountains by yesterday's arbitration decision. When Hungarian troops start occupation of the territory on Saturday they wil command mountain valleys that still belong to Ruthenia.

The German and Italian mediators, Foreign Ministers Von Ribbentrop and Count Ciano, gave Hungary an estimated 4,875 square miles with 860,000 inhabitants.

Troops On Way, Strike Ends

MIDDLETON O., Nov. 3—(AP).—Five hundred Ohio national guardsmen arrived for strike duty today at the P. Lorillard Company's tobacco plant but found that the union had capitulated to Governor Martin Davey, caustic critic of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The pioneer tobacco workers union, a C.I.O. affiliate which struck Oct. 3, for a closed shop and the checkoff, agreed shortly before midnight to end the dispute and return to work.

A C.I.O. organizer, Sam Sponseller, said the vote was 557 to 1. The plant is scheduled to reopen today.

As troops were enroute from Columbus, Paul Fuller and John Owens, regional C.I.O. directors, urged the strikers to return to their jobs "in orderly fashion."

"We do not intend to have our people murdered by a lame duck governor who has proven himself to be America's notorious No. 1 strikebreaker," Fuller wired Sponseller. Fuller said he would file charges with the national labor relations board.

Scorn Governor's Action

Owens said the troop order was "the most inexcusable of the many vicious acts by governor Davey during his term of office."

"There was no violence in Middleton, and there was no threat of any by the C.I.O." Owens said. "Davey's act is a further wanton waste of taxpayers' money so he can vent his personal revenge on a labor organization which helped throw him out of office."

Davey, who last year sent troops into Ohio's steel centres to maintain order during the C.I.O. "little steel" strike, said he ordered out the guardsmen yesterday to "preserve law and order" at the request of city manager Walter J. Braun for protection.

An attempt on Oct. 25 to open the plant, employing 1,100 persons at processing tobacco and manufacturing chewing scrap, precipitated a clash between union pickets and employees seeking to resume work.

British Papers Urge House To Enforce Pact

LONDON, Nov. 3 (CP-Havas) — In urging the House of Commons to approve early application of the Anglo-Italian accord, Prime Minister Chamberlain is "putting right what ought to have been straightened out long since," the Daily Express (Independent) declared today.

"In acknowledging his good sense, let us not omit to say a word in praise of Sir Samuel Hoare who went so far as to resign from the government to get a settlement with the Italians," the newspaper said. This was a reference to Sir Samuel's resignation as foreign secretary in 1935 as a result of the Hore-Layal plan to partition Ethiopia.

Britain should "leave the Italians to run their own empire and devote our energies to development of the vast territories controlled by us," the Express said.

The Daily Telegraph (Conservative) said:

"It will be admitted that Mr. Chamberlain was able to advance the most powerful arguments to support the course the government adopted. Despite Mr. Eden's forebodings, it is possible to believe that Mr. Chamberlain has, in putting the Anglo-Italian agreement into force, done something very considerable to serve a future hour."

The Daily Mail (Independent) declared:—

"After more than two years of perilous intervention in behalf of both combatants, the isolation of the Spanish war is at last in sight. It is a step all people of common sense will welcome."

To Germany for Arms?

Reports not confirmed were that the insurgent Nadir had been to Germany for arms and was returning to Spanish waters when she met the Cantabria, leased by the Mid-Atlantic Shipping Company of London, a few miles outside British territorial waters off Cromer, Norfolk.

The attacking Nadir and British ships picked up all the crew of 37, five children and three women aboard, Captan Manuel Arguelles of the Contabria said.

A coastal lifeboat took off the captain, his wife and their two children and second steward. None aboard the Cantabria was injured although some suffered from fatigue. The captain said the Nadir's five guns fired broadside after broadside into the Cantabria to sink her.

Although the shelling was heard on shore, the admiralty sent no warship to the scene because it lay just outside the three mile limit. Trawlers drew nearby, however. The Nadir fled after the sinking.

Women Have Taken Men's Jobs?—A Myth, Says Research Board

NEW YORK, Nov. 3—(AP).—Don't blame unemployment on the women who are holding down jobs in industry, warns the United States industrial conference board, a research organization dominated by males.

If you do, says a survey issued by the board today, you are harboring a "myth" and "bugaboo."

Citing statistics, the board, supported by industries and large corporations, said "the percentage of male workers in the total population has been approximately the same since 1870"; that "the increase in the number of women workers has not been at the cost of men," and furthermore that "particularly in the year up to 1930 it would have been impossible to maintain the level of industrial production without female employees."

The board concluded that increased activity of women in the industrial labor field largely has been due to "many new types of service requiring female employees."

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Nov. 3 (C.P.). — New five-ylear lows were established for the second successive session in the Winnipeg futures market today on light selling induced by good rains in dry United States winter wheat areas, demoralized export market and excellent Argentine crop outlook.

Final values were ⅞ to 1¼ cent lower, November 57, December 57, and May 60⅝ to ½. July came on the board at 60¼ cents and closed its first session at 61 cents.

Price declines came during the initial hour in sympathy with weakness at Chicago and Liverpool. Trading almost ceased as the session advanced due to lack of interest. Canadian wheat export sales overnight were small.

Lively Havelock Hallowe'en Dance Draws Crowd Of Over 300

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Nov. 3.—An attendance reaching well over the three hundred mark, including many out-of-town guests, were attracted to the annual Hallowe'en dance sponsored on Monday evening by the Havelock Branch Women's Institute. The town hall auditorium was very appropriately decorated for the occasion and a very delightful evening was spent dancing to the music of Jack Grant's Aces of Havelock, whose newly installed sound equipment added much to the success of this yearly event.

Although only a small fraction of those in attendance were in masquerade costume, several of these were especially noteworthy. Prize-winners were as follows: First prize, ladies' fancy, Miss Natalie Clarke, Havelock; second prize, ladies' fancy, Miss Velma McMullen, Havelock; first prize, ladies' comic, Mrs. G. Weese, Havelock; second prize ladies' comic, Miss Marjorie Quinn, Havelock; ladies' original, Mrs. D. R. Brennan; first prize, men's comic, Mr. Percy Grey, Deloro; second prize, men's comic, Mr. Jack Phillips, Campbellford. The judges were Mrs. Glenn Wright and Mr. and Mrs. W. Duncan.

Mr. T. P. Lancaster, editor of the Havelock Standard, present in the audience, awarded a special prize to Miss Doris Thompson, of Havelock, who wore a costume fashioned cleverly from the sheets of the local weekly.

The lucky door prize was won by Mr. Donald Prentiss, of Marmora. Miss Phillips, of Marmora, was the winner of the lucky spot prize for ladies, while Mr. Ken Parks, of Campbellford, captured the men's prize.

Prizes for the best costumes were donated by Warner's Service Station, Squire's grocery, Allan's Hardware, Marion's Tea Room, Hubbel's Hardware, Ferguson's barber shop, Hoard's grocery, Wilson's shoe repair shop and the Women's Institute.

Cafeteria lunch was served in the basement by the members of the Institute.

Plan to See Movie

The Havelock Home and School Association met last evening in the school building for their regular November meeting, there being an attendance of fifty-five adults and eight pupils.

The meeting opened with the president, Mrs. Walter Nobes occupying the chair. The members sang "O Canada" with Mrs. R. W. Goheen as pianist and Rev. A. McLauchlin led in prayer.

A motion picture entitled "Maker of Man" will be presented under the auspices of the Home and School Association, through the courtesy of Mr. Wm. Platt, of town, in the town hall on Friday, November 18.

Word was received that Mr. Leo Copp, inspector of public schools, would not be able to attend the meeting as expected, due to illness.

The president thanked the members for their co-operation in making the birthday tea such a success and also reminded them of the special Armistice Day services on Friday, November 11.

R. W. Goheen, High School principal, gave a very interesting review of the course of study as it will effect the local high school.

Included on the program was a reading by Miss V. Robinson, entitled "The Farmer's Daughter Cherry."

Little Evelyn Goheen, aged 3 years, and her sister Shirley, aged 5, accompanied by their mother, sang and acted several children's hymns. Allan and Ross Goheen also contributed two songs, "There's A Purple Tint" and "Stars of the Summer Night."

Miss Mary Seeney gave an instructive paper of the "Peace Education" in view of the approaching Armistice day. Misses Dora Ketchen and Lois Wilson also gave a piano duet.

The report from the Belleville conference was presented by the president. The parent attendance shield was awardd this month to Miss Robinson's classroom.

"Dead" Woman Fined By Puzzled Cadi In Tangle Over Baby Registration

Cochrane, Ont., Nov. 3 (CP)

MRS. EMMA LAROCQUE was supposed to be dead but she wasn't. That was quite evident when she appeared in police court here for trial on a charge of false registration of a birth.

It took Magistrate E. R. Tucker some time to straighten out the matter yesterday but when he did the Clute township woman, shown on Cochrane's vital statistics records to be dead, was convicted of the charge and fined $25 and costs, with the option of a month in jail.

The evidence disclosed Mrs. Larocque gave birth to a child recently and failed to register the birth. The baby died and the woman made a declaration to the official registrar that it was the child's mother who had died.

At this stage the case was further complicated. Evidence was produced Mrs. Larocque had registered the death of the baby some time after she herself was supposed to have died.

Magistrate Tucker had had enough. Imposing the fine, he said it was evidence there was "some effort" to conceal birth.

Girl Driver Halted By Fake Police

TORONTO, Nov. 3 (C.P.). — Miss D. E. Wiles of suburban Lansing reported to police last night that two men, posing as police officers, forced the automobile she was driving to the side of a northern district street and then, apparently becoming frightened when about to steal the car, drove off in their own machine.

Miss Wiles said the men, after stopping her, asked to see her driving licence. A passing motorist stopped to inquire what was wrong, she said, and was waved on by one of the men who said, "It's just the police." As the motorist drove away, the men gave Miss Wiles her permit, clambered into their car and drove off.

They Should Know Now

There was reference in these columns to a peculiar and distressing radio broadcast which caused people to rush from their homes on a Sunday evening in several of the larger cities in United States. In previous comment this paper had stated it was a foolish thing, utterly without cause or reason.

Present reference is different. We have noticed in several U. S. papers stories from remote sections of the country telling that the effect was much the same as in the cities. People were immediately under the belief that their district was going to be raided from the air. They did not know what to do to protect themselves so in nearly all cases they got out of their homes and ran into the open. Whether they would be safer there we do not know but they evidently believed such would be the case.

The point of the whole thing is here: For a short space of time on a Sunday evening when individual and group hysteria gripped so many people in United States they would have opportunity to know the feeling which so often hangs over Europe. New York for the first time would have occasion to know what London felt like a few weeks ago when it was preparing for air raids.

United States papers were free with their comment prior to the Munich conference and the burden of much of it was that Czechoslovakia was being sold down the river and deserted by the democracies. It appeared certain enough that a number of these papers would have been willing to see sacrifices made, but the sacrifice would have been in the shape of British and French soldiers. It is admitted that one reason why war was not desired was that statesmen of Europe feared what would happen to the civilian population of all the warring nations before an army had ever been placed in the field. They knew well enough there were thousands of giant bombers loaded and ready to start at any moment and it would have meant raining death on the cities of five or six European nations—and at once.

Perhaps some of the United States cities understand the feeling now. Their inhabitants became panic stricken and hysterical because something came over the radio which described air raids and bombings and the landing of troops, and yet not a bomb was dropped because there there was no hostile plane aloft to drop one. We can only hope that their frenzied half hour will show them plainly what the people who live in Britain and Europe experienced. The incident was typical of the strain under which the people on the other side of the Atlantic live. And oh top of that it is well to remember that the United States panic was caused by a radio only!

The Funds Are Through

A Congressional committee was named at Washington to probe what was termed un-American practices, and it had much to do with uncovering activities of German spies in United States.

Chairman Dies of that committee says it is likely that the work will have to be brought to a close soon, as there are no more funds available.

When it was decided to go ahead with the work there was an appropriation of $25,000. Now that has been spent and it looks like the end of the road.

Whether that is the ideal system we do not know, but there is at least something to be said for it. In this country most of our probing and investigating has the habit of running on and then on. We rarely have the spectacle of some person rising in the committee room to remark that the funds are running low and closure will have to be applied. We are more apt to turn the probers loose in the field and allow them to probe to conclusion.

Washington's plan is different, and there is something about it which looks sensible. It puts this probing business more on a business basis and in this particular instance it looks as though Uncle Sam had ordered just $25,000 worth of probing and no more.

It may be cases would arise where the idea would not work, but there is a finality in the idea which our method lacks. When our governments start probing the rule is that we receive a tremendous report for which we pay a tremendous price and then seldom receive any benefit for the expenditure.

Perhaps He's Rubbing It In

Perhaps Germany is rubbing it in. Robert Ley German Labor Front leader, announces at Essen that Germany wants her emigrants who left home during the years of depression to come back because there is work to be done in the homeland.

Robert Ley talks of something which through lack of use in this country seems like something which might have taken place many years ago. Just this—"an acute labor shortage in the Fatherland."

Undoubtedly much of the work which has been available in Germany in recent years has had to do with the building of a great war machine. The expenditure on that is actually greater than has ever been publicly announced. And through it all there has been an insistence that production be maintained and increased.

But after one allows for all that it is well to admit that to hear a man speaking of an acute labor shortage in any part of the world is something like reviving a lost language.

Why Not Quit It?

What are referred to as big bakers and little bakers are having a war in Windsor. Two months ago the big and the little gathered together and decided that 12 cents should be the price charged for a 24-ounce large loaf wrapped and delivered by the big chaps, and the lesser ones were to sell for 11 cents.

That was all right until it started to go all wrong, and that was when the stalwarts in the ranks decided to shove the price down to 9 cents. Within three days the price was down to 6 cents, and then the smaller bakeries came together and decided that a price of 5 cents would be their answer and that is how things stand at the moment.

There is talk now of getting some outsider to come in and settle the business because they are all losing money. But what is the sense of asking an outsider to go in and try and clean up a muddle which the bakers have themselves created?

They know without having an outsider come in to tell them that they cannot make bread for five cents per loaf and make a living at the same time. The cure is in their own hands, so why do they not apply it?

Courting the Pension Vote

One out of every three candidates running for a seat in United States Congress is counted as being pledged to support some bigger and better sort of pensions for old folk. Possibly no country in existence has had such extensive organization as has taken place by those who seek pensions. It is estimated that people have paid millions of dollars in fees to organizations which have been carrying on the work. Townsend started it with his scheme for $200 per month, and now California is carrying it on under the slogan of $30 per week.

Those who are seeking office have not been slow to see the wisdom of appealing to this pension-loving section of the country. There are 11,715,000 persons in United States who are over the 60-year mark. The Social Security law sets 65 as the age when pensions shall start, but by advocating reduction to 60 years the candidates bring another 4,117,000 persons within the range of their appeal.

Oregon will vote for $100 per month for all over 60 years; the ballot paper in North Dokota will ask for an opinion about increasing pensions from $30 to $40 per month, while in Nebraska voters will express opinion about licensing slot machines to finance old-age pensions. Colorado on the other hand will vote on the repeal of the regulations under which needy over 60 years are paid $45 per month.

It is a mixed question which voters face on November 8, but if those advocating the pension idea are sincere it is likely some action will be forthcoming. The puzzling part is that few of the pension advocates are taking the trouble to go into details telling how their plans are going to be financed.

The Farmer's Problem

Four hundred delegates are attending the annual convention of the Women's Institute of Western Ontario, and the sessions had not been long under way before it was found that the ladies were discussing problems which their husbands and brothers and uncles and fathers and all other male relatives from the farm would consider as their particular field.

Truth is the Women's Institute desires to have an investigation to find out why it is the price of farm implements is so high while the price of farm produce is so low. And they can quote figures showing that in 1912 a farmer paid about $130 for a binder and got about $1 a bushel for his wheat, while now his binder costs him around $285 and he sells his wheat for 56 cents. Or to turn it into the business of barter, the farmer used to get a binder in 1912 by delivering 130 bushels of wheat, while on the present basis he would have to grow and deliver something like 500 bushels.

Of course there are a good many answers to that old puzzle, but none of them is satisfactory. If the farmer were able to get his binder today by selling 130 bushels of wheat at 56 cents he would have his machine for $72.80 instead of $285. And that of course is something which cannot be done.

Asking for an investigation into the price of farm inplements is requesting something which has already been done at great length and considerable cost. We doubt if any new facts could be presented showing the exact cost of all manner of implements; parliamentary committees have gone over that and their findings are all on record.

The real trouble is that farm machinery and produce are sold in different ways. Firms making implements know what the things have cost them down to the last fraction of a dollar. If costs of raw material and wages go up then these added costs are included in the selling price of the implements and the farmer in the end is the man who pays for them. That is their way of doing business and there is no secret about it.

Right now the trouble seems to be in selling wheat that the market has too much of it. In this country we have our Wheat Board in operation and it is handling millions of bushels of Western wheat and losing money on each bushel sold. United States is trying to get rid of 100,000,000 bushels of surplus wheat through export, but at last reports sales had amounted to 16,000,000 bushels, and on that amount the government has taken a loss of $1,820,000. During the first half of October the U. S. found sale for only 2,000,000 bushels.

Had there been a war and a shortage the farmer would get a high price for his wheat. As things stand at the moment he sells it—if at all—at a price which is ruinous and discouraging. One can explain until the cows come home and the problem will remain. The farmer will be left selling his produce for what he is offered and he will be doing his buying in a market where he pays what he is told to pay.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Australian says he cannot understand cheer leaders at Canadian football games. But then who can?

The new license plates, white letters on black, should make the game a little tougher for the sit-and-run drivers.

We noticed where an Ontario farmer who died recently left an estate of over $70,000, but we doubt whether he made it by selling wheat at 50 cents per bushel.

Wife beater in court at Walkerton got six months and the lash. And we cannot think of any good reason at the moment why there should be any protest.

A party returned empty-handed to Sudbury after a week's hunting with bows and arrows. That of course only proves that they were not very expert archers.

We noticed the name of a story "Shot at Sunrise." That would be bad of course, although we can recall having heard of several people who had been half shot at about the same hour.

One Toronto nurse says she believes patients in hospitals are wakened too early in the morning. That statement will receive a sympathetic hearing outside of the hospital too.

St. Thomas police officers went out looking for supplies of beer on Sunday afternoon, probably believing that the people would all be at Sunday school at that time.

We may be a bit dull in the head, but we find it hard to read of people in this country winning thousands of dollars by sweepstakes and of others who are being arrested and fined for selling tickets for lotteries. The thing does not add up right.

The 1939 car markers are for sale and the 1938 ones are good for some time after the first of the year, so we will have two sets of markers on parade for some time after the turn of the year. It takes a government department to think up all these strange things.

Hunters at Pelee Island say they had trouble shooting pheasants because they could not get close enough to the birds. Possibly a number of the amateurs would like the birds trained so they would sit still until they were as close to them as the length of a fence post.

TOO BAD

(By A. R. K.)

¶ One tree has caused a lot of woe, because it picked a place to grow, where boundary lines should meet; and when the fence was built they say, the kindly tree was in the way, a matter of three feet.

¶ A new man came and bought the farm, and put new shingles on the barn, had lots of changes made; and then he looked the fences o'er, till he could look around no more, then had the place surveyed.

¶ They found this tree of goodly size, they gazed upon it with surprise, 'twas high and firm of root; but it was where the line fence stood, the new man thought that none too good, it started a dispute.

¶ And finally they came to court, and had an argument of sort, 'twas quite a day in town; the new man claimed the only way, to settle things so they would stay, they'd take the big tree down.

¶ The kindly tree had stood for years, seen all the neighbors' joy and tears, had seen them buy and trade; and when the summer sun was hot, it made indeed a pleasant spot, and offered kindly shade.

¶ And when that tree was young and small, it meant no trouble there at all, I'm sure that must be so; for years it stood out there and grew, and I am sure it never knew—'twas where it shouldn't grow.

THERE is no such thing as an "air pocket." The expression originated in the pioneer days of aviation, when little was known of air movements. When an airplane is flying in an unsettled atmosphere, the path of flight frequently becomes quite irregular and the machine rises and drops abruptly so that sometimes, to the occupants, the sensation is such that he feels that the "bottom is dropping out" of the plane. Early fliers were led by this sensation to assume that the plane had flown into a kind of blank space in the air similar to a vacuum, and had dropped to the bottom of the vacuum where it rode on "solid" air. The fallacy of this belief lies in the fact that a vacuum in the atmosphere is an impossibility. The expression, "air pocket," says Fact Digest, is a misnomer, for the sudden upward and downward movements of airships flying in areas of rough weather is caused by a vertical rise or fall in the direction of a current of air, or more often a change in the velocity of the wind.

Lindbergh, on one of his flights across the North Atlantic removed corks from several sterile bottles and collected samples of air. Upon examination, several species of yeast and bacteria were found.

❖ ❖ ❖

Air, when cooled to a temperature of 216 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, will turn to liquid, and at 310 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, it starts to boil. Strangely, it requires 212 degrees above zero Fahrenheit to produce the same result with water.

❖ ❖ ❖

If we breathe air that has not been sufficiently moistened the lungs will hurt as a result of pain produced by the drying effect. The nose must furnish water to the ingoing air, as the delicate tissue of the lungs—thinner than the lightest of paper—must be kept moist to allow the oxygen of inhaled air to pass through and enter directly into the bloodstream.

RACE HORSES

MANY race horses are narcotic addicts and are given drugs whenever they are raced to win. In a single race as many as six horses have been given a narcotic in one form or another.

❖ ❖ ❖

Apparently race horses have some peculiar weaknesses. There are horses who like goats as stable-companions. One fleet racer enjoys his food most when it is accompanied by street-organ music, and another runs best when spurred by a rattle.

❖ ❖ ❖

A Texas oil man a yearling, Broadway Limited, for $75,000; the horse failed to win a single race. On the other hand, a horse named Goldey F was brought for the absurd sum of $150 and went on to capture nine successive wins.

❖ ❖ ❖

The thoroughbred racing horse of today, by virtue of selective breeding, is far superior to the stock from which it came. Height has been developed and is even now being increased at the rate of an inch every 25 years. Today's thoroughbred is some 9 inches taller than his ancestors of the 18th century.

❖ ❖ ❖

In ancient Roman records there are accounts of the selling of chariot race tips by touts.

❖ ❖ ❖

According to the rules for computing the age of race horses, a colt born on December 31 would be rated as a two-year-old the following day, January 1.

❖ ❖ ❖

Some trainers groom their thoroughbreds with workouts in the water, the theory being that when a horse swims every muscle is brought into play. Recently a horse being put through its paces in the surf near Suffolk Downs race track, East Boston, had to be rescued by the Coast Guard.

U.S. CONGRESS

MEMBERS of Congress today draw their salaries whether they are present at each session or whether they are absent from the majority of them, but formerly they were paid at the rate of $6 a day and were paid only for the days they were present at sessions.

❖ ❖ ❖

To get legislation started a Congressman merely writes up his bill and drops it in the basket of the House clerk's desk. The bill is then referred to the appropriate committee, from which most bills rarely come back.

❖ ❖ ❖

Every session of Congress sees humorous bills introduced. A bill of one member recently introduced would have clothed house members in numbered uniforms, similar to a baseball team, so visitors in the galleries could identify them. A bill of Representative Truax was intended to "preserve and encourage a declining national institution popularly known as the 'circus'." A bill of Senator Norbeck aimed "to preserve from extinction the American eagle," and provided a fine of $100 for the handling of any part of a bald eagle, its eggs or nest.

❖ ❖ ❖

When Congress is in session the stars and stripes are displayed over the Senate and House of Representatives wings. At night a light in the lantern at the top of the dome of the Capitol indicates that one or both branches are in session.

❖ ❖ ❖

❖ ❖ ❖

A feud of long standing exists between page boys of the Senate and House. When a boy finds himself in the enemy wing of the Capitol he keeps a weather eye open for a possible attack.

• Wants To See Them Prosper

IN TORONTO on Wednesday Sir Edward Beatty said something that needed to be said. And said often. He spoke of his desire to see Russia, Germany and Italy prosperous. Thus:

"I happen to be one of those who, disapproving of the theory of Communism, sincerely hope that Russia will prosper.

"Incidentally — and I trust that you will restrain your wrath—I am just as eager for the success and progress of Germany and Italy. My own philosophy does not swallow dictatorship of any kind, but I know that the surest way to peace and happiness in all the world is economic progress in all great countries."

Good plain common sense.

There are those who seem to feel says the Ottawa Journal that because Russia, Germany and Italy have a philosophy of government different from our own it would be a good thing if they didn't prosper. Which is foolish. No matter what government organization these nations undertake—and it is their own business—we of the democratic countries must live in the world with them and have commerce with them. If they gain in prosperity, we, almost of necessity, gain in prosperity, too. If they be not prosperous, we, inevitably, will be less prosperous, too. That, for good or for ill, is the way this world works.

Nor is it a matter merely of prosperity. It is also a matter of peace. The peoples who disturb the peace are not the prosperous peoples. What causes political and social unrest is economic unrest. Poverty.

• Dried Apples and Chestnuts

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO we worked in a general store in a small community centre. It was one of those general stores that catered to the farming trade. There were hundreds of similar stores in Western Ontario in those days.

Saturday was the big trading day for the farmers writes Hank in the St. Thomas Times-Journal. They brought their butter and eggs throughout the years and in the fall these staple products were supplemented by potatoes, chestnuts and dried apples.

We have rather vivid memories of the dried apples and the chestnuts—because it was our job to handle the bulk of them. We bought our granulated sugar by the barrel then, in order to have the barrels for packing and shipping the dried apples. Sometimes we shipped the chestnuts out in barrels; more often in heavy sacks.

Every farmer's wife, who had an orchard on the farm, dried apples then. She dried them on slat frames or in shallow pans over the big wood-burning range in the kitchen. Some of the frames and pans were placed under the stove. Occasionally the family cat, coming in out of the cold, crawled on top of a frame of dried apples to enjoy the warmth. Then there were times when Grandpa stoked up too hot a fire and scorched the drying aples; or Minnie, the hired girl got a little careless in preparing the apples and left on bits of the peeling or forgot to remove the worm-holes and worms. But they all went into the dried apple sack on the farm and were taken to the store, and then it was our responsibility to pass on the quality of the product and establish a price. Of course every farmer's wife thought she had first quality dried apples and our judgment was often challenged. Fortunately, the boss usually backed us up.

Buying chestnuts was easier. Unless the nuts were small and wormy, we paid an average price for them.

Our real work, however, was packing the dried apples in the barrels and heading up the barrels soundly for shipment, and sewing and labelling the tops of the sacks containing the chestnuts. It was surprising what a lot of dried apples and chestnuts a community store with a wide farm trade handled twenty-five years ago.

They don't do it nowadays. We doubt if many of the young people on our farms ever saw a dried apple. Few of them have enjoyed the fun of going chestnutting. Economic conditions and modern transportation have made it unprofitable to dry apples while the destructive blight has just about destroyed all the chestnut trees in Western Ontario. The day of trading our farm produce in country stores is past, also. What country stores remain do business like city stores.

Rural life lost something when the old customs went out of business practice.

• This Editor Fights Back

THE MORNING was fine, no dog bit me on the way to the train, and I was as attuned to the infinite as an ascended master when I reached the office. Then, as I opened the mail, everything went black.

Letter after letter, not to speak of scribbled postcards, raising hell with me for not raising hell with Mr. Neville Chamberlain; flaying me for, being a "renegade liberal"—whatever that may be; rubbing salt into my wounds for being a traitor to "democracy." The mildest epithet slung at me was "defeatist."

The whole business confirms my growing suspicion writes H. V. O'Brien in the Chicago News, that the United States produces more sentimentality to the square inch than any other area of the globe. Our ability to scream is in inverse ratio to our ability to define what we are screaming about.

The rape of Czechoslovakia? Ah, me, we did a rather fancy piece of raping when we made Texas a part of the union. For all our prattle about a "good neighbor," Mexicans today walk the Street of the Lost Children and remember the boys who were slaughtered by the Yankees.

"If Texas is something best forgotten, let us consider Nicaragua and Haiti, to which our marines brought an unasked "liberty." And when we are reviling Hitler, let us give thought to the aid and comfort we have brought to pip-squeak Caesars from Havana to Cape Horn.

I have no taste for tyrants, but I think I have even less for those who don't know tyranny when they see it. I am moved by the baser passions when I hear people mumbling about how "democracy," as embodied by France and Great Britain, humiliated itself before the Furor Teutonicus.

No, I have no love for Hitlerism, but it seems to me that its opponents—including ourselves—come before the bar of public opinion with somewhat grubby hands.

England did not "betray" the Czechs, England—that is, the controlling forces of England — never cared a whoop for the ideals upon which Czechoslovakia was founded. It cared more, I suspect, for the ideals of Hitler than it did for the ideals of Masaryk, though deploring, quite sincerely, the method by which those ideals were achieved.

And while we are taking the beam out of the British eye, we might take a squint at the mote in our own. Our President can cable movingly to Hitler, beseeching peace, but does Senor Batista in Cuba hear from him, or Senor Trujillo in Santo Domingo, or Senhor Vargas in Brazil? Yes, indeed, these gentlemen do hear from him, but his messages take a different form. They come by salesmen, with order blanks for airplanes and machine guns.

We, too, are strongly for "democracy." We favor it in China, in Abyssinia, in Czechoslovakia, but below the Caribbean we favor stability and order and the security of American investment. I have an idea that in Cuba we did just as neat a job of "betraying" democracy as Hitler and Daladier did in Munich. Though, as you will say, it is farfetched to compare Grau san Martin with Benes. Maybe so.

PHEASANT SHOOTS

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

SEVERAL thousands of men and a few women have been engaging in the pastime of shooting pheasants lately. There were many complaints that they did not get their full quotas. The chief reason for this appears to be that the birds were hard to raise, and unless they were flushed by dogs the pheasants just sat hidden in the thickets and the so-called Nimrods (Nimrod was a mighty hunter) did not see them. Some of the hunters admitted it was a shame to kill birds that were so tame.

We had evidence of the latter fact while motoring through an area a day or two ago where there were numerous pheasants. These beautifully plumaged birds peckd by the roadside as the car went slowly by, not budging an inch or troubling to look up. They were as tame as poultry; even more so. Where the sport comes in shooting "sitters" like that we do not know. But some people like to see the feather fly.

WASTED SYMPATHY.

(Windsor Star)

CZECHOSLOVAKIA seems to be coming under the German influence in rapid fashion.

The Prague Chapter of Sokol, described as the country's largest patriotic organization, is offering strong anti-Semitic proposals to the government. It would expel Jews who entered the country since 1914 and who cannot prove that they are entitled by birth to claim citizenship. And it proposes to govern the participation in social life of all Jews permitted to remain in the land. Anti-Jewish demonstrations are also reported.

There has been a good deal of sympathy for Czechoslovakia throughout the world, but the sort of thing mentioned above will reduce it to the minimum. A good many persons are likely to become convinced that their tears over Czechoslovakia's plight and diamemberment at the hands of Germany have been wasted.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

ACCORDING to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise masterbuilder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon. ....Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss; but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire.—I Cor. iii, 10, 13-15.

GOOD TO SEE

(Exeter Times-Advocate)

THE OTHER EVENING we came across a sight that filled our eyes with gladness. It was a farm lassie getting her flower beds into shape for next spring and summer. There she stood, deep-bosomed, clear-eyed, rosy with a fine row of maple trees in their autumn glory as her background. Around her were her dahlia and gladioli bulbs in pofusion, every pile labelled and sorted. Packages of garnered seeds all labelled were there in their due order. Flower stems that had served their season were cut and ready for plowing in. A plan of the plot was made out, that due rotation might be observed next year. As we came upon this young lady we found her whistling and lilting in the full blood of her rich young life. "Dad will be along in a little while to help me finish up," she explained. "You help in the fields?" we suggested. "My, yes. Dad and I work together!"

We were curious to have a look at dad, whom we found back in the potato field with Bill, the growing son. One didn't have to go far in that patch for a bag of spuds, though the ease with which Bill shouldered a bag thereof made one wonder whether the tubers were hollow or Bill possessed the strength of a young giant. The farm house is modern as is the barn, while every fence is at its best. And everybody seemed happy. The place looked prosperous, progressive. Yes. It was a sight worth seeing.

A SIGN OF THE TIMES.

A Bit of Nonsense

Yes or No?

"My son wishes to become a chauffeur. What do you advise?"

"Well, personally, I wouldn't stand in his way."

Roscoe Turner Hopes To Build Plane That Will Do 500 m.p.h.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 3.—An airplane capable of going 500 miles an hour is the chief desire to-day of Col. Roscoe Turner, two-time winner of the Thompson Trophy race.

Turner has changed from the day when he carried a lion cub, named for a sponsor, in his racing plane. He has but one uniform now, and his consuming desire is to build at least one ship faster than that in which he won the 1938 Thompson race at the record-breaking speed of 283 miles per hour.

"I would like to build a ship that would do 500 miles an hour," Turner said, "and I think I could do it."

It was said without fanfare or boasting. Turner sincerely believes such a ship can be built, and he intends to be the builder, with his mechanic, Don Young.

Next Year's Race.

Turner already is negotiating with men who might form a syndicate to build a ship for next year's Thompson. This ship, faster than either of the present ones Turner owns, would not be the 500-mile-per-hour job, however.

"The Thompson next year will be won at more than 300 miles," Turner declared. "With a new ship I could beat that speed in a 300-mile closed-course race."

But the plane for next year's Thompson would not be the 500-mile ship.

"It couldn't be," Turner says positively. "It would take a couple of years to develop and test a ship that fast.

"The whole problem is horsepower. You've got to have the horse-power to get the speed."

Engine development, Turner said, will provide the horse-power. Higher powered engines than are now on sale are being made, but they are "hush-hush" affairs, kept secret by government services.

Not Available.

Turner would dearly love to acquire one engine, now being installed in some of the service ships, but the complete production is taken by the government for at least a year.

In the meantime, he will try to develop a faster ship around the engines now available, like the stock model twin-row radial engine in his newest ship.

It is a difficult proposition, however. It takes time and effort to find men who are interested in a venture that will cost well over $50,000 and may end up in a flaming heap of twisted steel tubing.

Turner's record entitles him to some consideration. He has won the Thompson race twice, this year and in 1934.

This year he flew his silver ship, his newest plane, which he helped design, build, and rebuild. In 1934 he flew his gold-colored plane which he also helped to design.

Both of them were in the 1938 race, with Lieut. Joe Mackey of Findlay, O., flying the older ship to fifth place.

Turner is the possessor of several double records in addition to his twice winning the Thompson Trophy event. In 1933 he won the Bendix cross-country race, and he is the only man to have won both of the United States' major speed events.

He also is the only flier to take the Clifford Henderson award for the outstanding pilot at the U.S. national air races. This he could win again, as he could the Thompson, to get out of the two-time class and become a three-timer.

Looking Back
On This Date

Twenty-eight years ago today, on Nov. 3, 1910, there took place in the riding of Drummond-Arthabaska what has been described as "the most important by-election in Canadian history." That riding's member, Louis LaVergne, had been called to the senate and his successor had to be elected. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, whose home constituency it was, although he himself had been defeated there when he was sworn as minister of inland revenue in 1877, decided that it would be good ground for a battle with Bourassa, Monk and company, leaders of the Nationalists crusade against his very moderate naval bill. His friends warned him it was dangerous, but the Old Chief was sure that he could win endorsement there, if anywhere, so the die was cast.

It was the most vicious racial campaign it was ever my duty to participate in. Appeals to prejudice were made by eloquent speakers; money was used in plenty; the women were stampeded for fear that their husbands and sons would be conscripted as "food for cannon" to "fight England's wars in Asia or Africa." The issue was "For Laurier or Against the Navy,' 'and the anti-British side won by a small majority.

When at the next session Sir Wilfrid was taunted with the defeat, he replied: "History teaches that there are defeats which are more honorable than victories. That election was won by a combination of what is left, or what was left of the organized Conservative party in the province of Quebec and certain young reactionaries who were brought up on Liberal principles, but for whom, as it turned out, Liberal principles are too broad and too generous. The election was won by appeals so desperate that when the smoke of battle had cleared away the public conscience was aroused to shame and indignation."

One memory of that day I shall never forget, that of the scrutineer at the poll in Arthabaskaville (a young student from Quebec) demanding that Sir Wilfred take the oath before he was given the ballot. It was the first and only time I ever saw Sir Wilfrid visibly angry. It was with difficulty that he retained his temper; but he did and passed the incident over. But we who witnessed the insult were less reserved in our anger and told the embryo lawyer from Quebec what we thought of him in two languages, and some other language which was decidedly improper, but, we felt at the time, justified.

Hard to Believe

Mitchell in auctioning unclaimed articles at police headquarters, frequenty had to stop bidders, telling them they were ofefring more than the goods were worth. Mitchell told the customers one bicycle was worth $6 at most. He sold it for $12 after spirited bidding.

Mayoralty Candidate Tries Innovation In Campaign Of Shakespeare Quotes

Edmonton, Nov. 3 (CP).

FREDERICK JAMES SPEED, candidate for Edmonton's mayoralty, announced last night he would confine his entire 1938 campaign to pertinent quotations from the plays of William Shakespeare.

Mr. Speed told the Edmonton Businessmen's Association he would start his campaign for the Nov. 9 civic voting with a brief excerpt Thursday from "Henry the Fifth" and finish the night before the election by reciting "the death scene" from the tragedy "Hamlet."

The Shakespearian quotations would be his "manifesto" and nothing else would be included in it. Mr. Speed said at the meeting where 16 of the 24 candidates for various offices spoke.

"I will be glad," said Mr. Speed who polled 62 votes last year, "to perform at any time the court scene and the bond scene from the 'Merchant of Venice,' but it will take me an hour to do it. Everyone should know these scenes and their bearing on present-day life."

This is his fifth consecutive effort to become mayor. His highest vote so far was 77 in 1934.

Other mayoralty candidates are John Fry, seeking re-election, Joseph A. Clarke, 1937 mayor defeated last November, and Charles Gould, progressive endorsed by Social Crediters.

Australia Orders 50 New Bombers

CANBERRA, Nov. 3 — (AP). — Premier Joseph Lyons announced in the House of Representatives today Australia immediately was ordering 50 bombers similar to 200 planes ordered by Great Britain from the United States.

Premier Lyons, faced with a labor motion of censure during debate on defence policies, made the announcement the planes were ordered as necessary insurance against possible further delay in delivery of British airplanes ordered some time ago.

He also said the Australian Government was doubling the volunteer militia to 70,000 and added further steps would be taken to strengthen the country's defence.

Japs Seen Needing British Capital

LONDON, Nov. 3—(CP-Havas).—British capital will still be needed in China even if Japan wins the war and establishes complete Dominion over the East Asiatic mainland, Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons yesterday.

Replying to Labor Leader Clement Attlee, he declared:

"China cannot be developed into a real market without the influx of a great deal of capital. The fact so much capital is being destroyed during the war means that even more will have to be introduced after the war is over.

"Who is going to supply the capital? It is quite certain that it cannot be supplied by the Japanese. Therefore when the Opposition leader appears to contemplate a future in which Japan will have a monopoly over Chinese trade, and we shall be excluded from it, I think it is flying in the face of facts. It is quite certain that when the war is over and the reconstruction of China begins, she cannot be reconstructed without some help from this country."

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader, demanded that the government give financial aid to China immediately and support France if the latter meets difficulties "arising out of the Japanese complaint that (war) material is reaching the Chinese forces through Indo-China.'"

(Examiner Correspondence.)

JANETVILLE, Nov. 3. — The bazaar and concert held in the United Church on Friday evening under the auspices of the Mission Band, was one of the highlights of the season. The program, which was presented by the children, was quite outstanding and consisted of piano solos, choruses, playlets, recitations, vocal solos and duets, etc.

Mrs. S. Stinson, first vice-president of the W.M.S., expressed the appreciation of all for the delightful program and for the unceasing efforts of the Mission Band leader, Mrs. (Rev.) Bury, and the pianist, Miss Bessie Howe. At the close of the program lunch was served by the Band members and afterward the bazaar tables were again visited and almost entirely cleared.

Friends of Jack Jordan will be glad to learn that he is recovering although slowly, from his recent accident.

Messrs. Jack Jordan and Jim Bradburn, local young men, were engaged in a gravel pit in connection with the road construction job west of Lindsay when the pit caved in. Jim was able to jump to safety, but Jack's escape was blocked by their truck, and as a result he was buried up to his head. Upon being extricated the victim was rushed to a doctor in Lindsay, where it was found that apart from various minor cuts and bruises, one leg was seriously injured and required a cast. Jack is able to move around slightly with the aid of crutches, but will be off work for some weeks.

Racing Fans Bet More Cash In '38 Than '37

OTTAWA, Nov. 3—(CP).—Racing fans bet more money on the horses and paid more admission money into racetrack coffers this year than last, despite fewer race meetings and three weeks less racing, according to the statistics released by the Dominion Department of Agriculture today.

Wagers on all Canadian tracks for 1938 totalled $23,115,252, an increase of $839,465 compared with $22,275,787 bet on horses in 1937, despite the fact there were only 281 days of racing, a decline of 21 days from 302 days in 1937, and only 33 meetings compared with 37 the previous year.

Turnstiles clicked out a total of $700,433 in paid admissions compared with $651,491 the year before, an increase of $48,942. But it was pointed out gate receipts are hardly a fair guage of attendance as some tracks admit women free several times a meeting and others are quite liberal with complimentary passes.

Ontario had 11 days less racing due to non-operation of the Queens Park track at London, but wagering amounted to $13,883,997 for 96 days of racing, an increase of $302,988 compared with $13,536,000 the previous year. Gate receipts increased $7,746 from $409,823 to $417,569.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

LAST GOOD FIGHT we saw in the Brock St. rink, if memory isn't kidding us, was that lovely riot late one eve last winter when police had to threaten to comb the hair of some of the Trenton Fliers and Petes with a nightstick before the pugnacious pucksters cooled off. It's quite a piece back, but isn't memory shod in seven-league shoes? Well, we look for several swelegant scraps—without police interference—at the Brock tomorrow after twilight. On account of there is a seven-bout card of amachoor walloping being staged by the Riverview A. Club at that time. And the leather-ladlers don't fool around when they fight, nor try to curl a hockey club around a rival's ears. Nope, they step in close with straight jolts to the jaw, using fists wrapped in leather, and something has to give when the right connection is made. You just can't call a punch in the nose an accident, not under the circs.

RING FANS HERE can bank on at least several first-rate fights on this program. The Orlando-McDonald main melee is a honey in any hive, and ditto the McIlmoyle-Amato mixup. The steal of the show threatens to be the Low-Kiel (will someone keel low?) fray in the semi-final as both welters are downright sluggers and pay as little attention to the bell as we do to the alarm clock. Ken Roy and Eddy Curtain should show a neat prelim joust, and the Hobbins-Joiner affair won't be a bit friendly. Buddy Redmond meets Izzy McIntosh in another prelim and Gord Riel fights Dan McGregor. If you don't get a kick out of some of these bouts, then we fear you wouldn't notice a tremor in an earthquake.

Don't Toss Coin Away

GRID OFFICIALS HERE asked us to state that no one except Bill Morrison is authorized to collect any money in connection with the Orfuns' Rugby Club program. Some merchants were unable to advertise in the program but promised to make it up in a donation, this money may be given to Mr. Morrison for the club. It has been claimed that some unknown party has been attempting to raise coin in the name of the Orfuns, using Morrison's name over the 'phone—and folks are warned against falling for this gag. Those who have paid money in to the grid club may check with Treasurer C. B. Neal and see that it was properly received.

QUITE A FEW of the football writers around Ontario have been boosting Mike Loucks highly as the find of the Orfuns' club this semester. Possibly an All-Canadian in his first year in senior. He is all that, a grand footballer, but we want to mention another guy who has also proven he is one of the top players in the senior O.R.F.U. ranks this year. Yeah, Don Crowe. There can be no argument that Crowe is senior calibre and one of the best — and Mike will heartily endorse this, too. Crowe battles his head off every minute, is a good booter, a mighty shiftly runner and a hard plunger. He matched booter, a mighty shifty runner and a hard plunger. He matched which is no mean feat. And with his great running mate, Loucks, out injured Saturday in Toronto, Don turned in a four-star performance in a losing cause. He is a fine footballer and a fine fellow.

They Fight and Laugh

COME TO THINK OF IT, there are a lot of fine fellows with the Orfuns now. The kind of gees we like, birds who have a fighting spirit and a sense of humor. 'Tis doubtful if there is a club in the group with more jockeys—wisecrackers who ride opponents in a game—than the Petes. The boys fight hard all the time (ask Sarnia or Beaches) and they get a big kick out of life. They were mighty disappointed last week-end over their licking in Toronto. Trooped out of the stadium to their bus with shoulders sagging. It had been a rough, fierce fight with a big score against them. They climbed into the bus and someone yelled: "Are we Orfuns?" They roared back: "Yes!" The guy called: "Are we downhearted?" They screamed: "No!" He then piped up: "No fathers, no mothers—poor little orphans!" And the gang all laughed. But they're fighters, too—and several expressed the regret they hadn't got Ab Box before he got Mike Loucks.

* * * * * *

COACH BILL IRWIN told us this morn that he might play in the local line Saturday 'gainst Montreal here, with Eddie Murphy and Curly Krug dividing quarterback duties. Halves will probably be Mick Magee, Johnny Shields, Gord McIntyre and Don Crowe. Looks like Loucks will not see much, if any, service. Though he may be dressed if his knee responds fast in the next few days. Herb Hendrie and Don Hendren are coming along pretty fair after their Toronto injuries, and will likely see action. "We're drilling right along and plan to use a few trick plays on a gamble this game," Bill said; "if we get a few breaks we will give the Nats a tough time of it." Coach Foster's Nationals, with a couple of injured players expected okay by Saturday, are changing their kick formation—evidently respecting the charging Orfuns who have blocked boots by Stirling and Box.

About Our Champions

DATE for the championship lacrosse banquet, given by civic heads, may be set tonight at a meeting. And matter of windbreakers will come up at this time, too. The two trophies, sent here by the O.L.A., the Lafortune and Levack cups, as well as the two dozen individual bronze medals for players and a good group picture of the squad, will be shown in the window of Tip Top Tailors on George St. tomorrow. Incidentally, some of the lacrossers—who just finished a tough schedule—plunged right into rugby this fal land these athletes are finding the grind pretty tough, with no letup. But it won't be long now, boys, till you can bust training and help yourselves to a gorgeous big relax!

VERA BROWN of Detroit Times discusses baseball wives and this paragraph might interest local ball fans—Earl Whitehill having worked here once and his brother Eddie being a pitcher with the Petes now: "Ball players are great readers of detective stories and many play contract bridge or hearts. The only squawk Earl Whitehill has against his Cleveland club is that there's nobody he can play a little contract with. This business of cooking is important. Violet Whitehill, another beautiful baseball wife, prides herself on her cooking, and the great Babe Ruth used to look forward to the spaghetti dinners Violet cooked for him when he was in town and a guest of the Whitehills. 'Be sure and cook enough so there'll be some left for me tomorrow night,' he would warn."

Seabiscuit After Great Race

Joe Louis Signs To Meet John H. Lewis

NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—On top of everything else that has happened to the boxing business recently, heavyweight champion Joe Louis agreed to-day to meet John Henry Lewis, the light-heavyweight king who has been hankering for faster company.

When Mike Jacobs called the two together this morning to sign papers for a bout at Madison Square Garden on January 27, he set up the first all-negro heavyweight championship contest since Jack Johnson met battling Jim Johnson in Paris 25 years ago.

Joe Louis, as phlegmatic as ever about the whole matter, was already in town to see the postponed Henry Armstrong-Ceferino Garcia title go. It will be his first fight since he bombed Max Schmeling into a hospital in one round last June and the fifth defence of his championship since he lifted the crown from Jim Braddock in 1937.

Big Goose Egg Started Rivalry Between New Brunswick Towns

PORT HAWESBURY, N.S., Nov. 3—(CP).—One of the most exciting events among residents along the Strait of Canso and in Richmond County 62 years ago was an egg-laying contest between geese of Port Hawkesbury and the village of River Inhabitants, according to an old newspaper which has turned up here.

The newspaper, The News of the Week and the Strait of Canso Shipping Gazette, does not say which place took the honors in the contest, but it does tell how it started.

An item from a River Inhabitants correspondent in the issue of May 9, 1876: "As there is always something of daily occurrence worth noticing in every community, I send you the following description of two eggs, laid by a young goose, eleven months old, at Messrs. Oliver's, River Inhabitants: Each egg measured 11 inches by 8¾ inches and weighed 9 ozs. Can any of your Hawkesbury geese beat that?"

The editor of the Port Hawkesbury paper accepted the challenge and replied: "Our correspondent 'Egg' on behalf of the champion River Inhabitants goose throws down a challenge to the geese of Hawkesbury. The reputation of this place is at stake, and a meeting of goose owners should be called to 'eggspress' their opinions. It might, we 'cackleate,' not be out of place to offer the goose that beats the River goose a promise to 'de-lay' her 'eggs-ecution' one year from next Christmas."

Ted Reeve To Coach Queen's In 1939

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 3—(CP)—Ted Reeve will coach Queen's University Senior Intercollegiate football team again next season, the University Athletic Control Board announced today.

Board officials said Reeve, who has brought three championships to the University in the five years he has coached the team, "can coach here as long as he likes."

This has been the worst season for the tricolor during Reeve's regime. They were knocked off the Intercollegiate Union championship last Saturday when they lost their fourth straight game and they have yet to win one this year.

Debt Cut Down

TORONTO, Nov. 3—(CP)—Mayor Ralph Day said today Toronto's debt has been reduced $8,872,083 in the first 10 months of 1938. It no stands at $158,000,000, a drop of $37,000,000 from the 1933 peak.

Fishermen Catch Half-Ton Shark

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Nov. 3.—(CP).—When the gill netter Catharine arrived here with a fare of fish, it brought a 1,000-pound shark, said to be the largest ever brought into this port.

Inside the shark's stomach were found three seals and an assortment of fish. The fishermen said they found the huge fish entangled in their nets. The shark put up a desperate fight before it was captured.

Injured in Fight

Toss Horseshoes In Olden Days

(By Jack Adamson.)

In these days of a fast moving age, it would more than likely be an impossibility to determine the origin of horseshoe pitching. It is claimed that the pastime got its start 2000 years ago, when a Greek slave tried to imitate a discuss thrower with a horseshoe, during the staging of the spectacles of those days. Be that as it may, the art of horseshoe pitching has come down through the time of our grandfathers and fathers, and from the monicker of Barnyard Golf, has actually developed into a sport that under the present standard rules, and the introduction of modern pitching shoes, has put it on a par if not higher, than any skilful sport that we participate in today. True the sport has had its ups and downs, but at present is enjoying a hey day, as the recent Ontario championships that were held at the Oakwood Club will attest to, when not only was the tournament the largest ever held on outdoor courts, but approximately 600 spectators were in attendance.

In The Cities

The game has graduated from pastime that was played hardly ever in the larger centres, and certainly never by any of the younger generation, into a sport today that possibly has a larger following in cities, than in the rural sections. This is due principally to the formation of horseshoe ptiching clubs, who cater to the younger chaps, as for instance in the last Ontario championships, a young player twelve years of age was entered. This player is a regular member, of the Oakwood Club. President Steadman, of the Toronto and District Association, says his executive are seriously considering the thought of sponsoring a ladies' section next year. Several ladies have intimated their desire to pitch horseshoes, and during the coming winter months the Toronto and District executive, intend to give the matter every thought, and folks might see another sphere of men's sport, that the weaker sex are invading.

MUSSING UP THE MAPLES

Fred Hickey at the six team Drafting-room turnout, led the parade of heavy hitters with 785; C. Wiklund of the same loop grabbed the high single of the night, 315, as he totalled 688, and A. Rooke, another draftsman, chalked up 654.

In the sixteen-team Quaker League, Frank Shine was high with 705, W. Farr 680 (301), M. Lecnard 666, W. Howes 600, and L. Scriver 600.

Twelve packed teams of motor men had a wild night. The results were a tie between Nash and Buick, 6 to 2 wins for Automotive No. 1, Ford and Graham teams over Oldsmobile, Chrysler and Chevrolet, while Hudson and Pontiac applied whitewash to the Dodge and Automotive No. 2 for 8 to 0 counts. Twelve men mowed down over 600 each. V. Fitzgerald 749, W. Inch 709, M. O'Neill 680, S. Craig 656, K. White 645, M. Harrison 625, S. Gardiner 613, K. Jackson 609, A. Watson 609, F. Wemp 606, P. Stanley 60, and R. Herron 604.

Babe Ruth Among 14 Applicants As St. Louis Browns' Pilot Held Unlikely To Grab Off Job

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 3.—(AP).—The fact St. Louis Browns change managers quicker and oftener than the average woman does hats has not deterred at least 14 candidates for the job, including the man no one seems to want—Babe Ruth.

The Babe, last season a coach with Brooklyn Dodgers, has a burning ambition to be a major league manager. However, a veteran sports observer, while admitting Browns' officials were close-mouthed about the situation, said it was unlikely Ruth would be selected for the job.

Another applicant is the Browns' leading pitcher, Buck Newsom, who won 20 games with the seventh-place team last season.

Four former National league managers also seek to succeed Gabby Street at the helm of the Browns. They are Frankie Frisch, lately of St. Louis Cardinals; Jimmy Wilson, ex-manager of Philadelphia Phillies, and Max Carey and Burleigh Grimes, each of whom had a term managing Brooklyn.

Others under consideration are Ray Schalk, former manager of Chicago White Sox; Al Sothoron, manager of Milwaukee of the American Association; Frank Schellenback, manager of San Diego of the Pacific Coast league, and Spencer Abbott, who has been leading minor league teams for many seasons.

The list of 14 is completed with Muddy Ruel, until a few years ago an American league catcher; Lu Blue, former first-baseman of the Browns; Sam Agnew, who caught for the Browns before the Great War, and Mule Haas, who has seen long service as an outfielder with Philadelphia Athletics.

Nick Orlando In Fight Here

Nick Orlando is fighting a tough battler here tomorrow night when he meets Ian (Scotty) McDonald of Toronto in the main bout of the Riverview A.C. mitt card in the Brock St. arena. A native of Nova Scotia, McDonald weighs 138 pounds and is a hard hitter with five years experience against good ringmen. He is a boxer of the aggressive type, but Orlando is also a cagey boxer with a whistling right hand that has piled up a flock of wins for him over first-rate fighters from Toronto. Another crowd-pleasing bout will be the one between Dutch McIlmoyle, rugged and punishing pugilist from Peterborough, scaling 165, and Bill Amato, Toronto Greek. Amato has been meeting topnotchers for seven years around Toronto but will have to hustle to hold his own with McIlmoyle.

In the semi-final, Harry Low, local welter, tackles Harry Kiel of Toronto, and this is liable to steal the show. Both are boring-in fighters who keep swinging from bell to bell, and it will be anybody's bout. Four good preliminary bouts round out the pug program, and it promises to be packed with action in every fight. The card deserves a big crowd of fans, girls and men, in the Brock this Friday night.

Montreal Nats Here Saturday

Montreal Nationals meet the Peterborough Orfuns here this Saturday afternoon at 2.30 in the Exhibition Grounds. It is a scheduled senior O.R.F.U. struggle, the first appearance of the undefeated Nats in this city, and the last appearance of the Orfuns here this year—unless they should pull a miracle and make the playoffs yet. They still have a mathematical chance but it is slim. The Nationals piled up a first-half lead to beat Coach Irwin's crew in Montreal in their previous meeting, the first game of the year, but Orfuns held them in check the last half and claim they can do so again here through the tussle. The game should draw a huge crowd of city and district fans.

The Orfuns have been training hard since their loss to Balmy Beach in Toronto last Saturday. The players know they played their worst football of the year—with Beaches in championship form—and they know they got none of the breaks. The squad feel that if the spirit which prevailed when they beat Sarnia here two weeks ago is present this weekend, and the gang gets an even share of the game's breaks, the Orfuns will beat Montreal or make it mighty close. It is uncertain yet if Loucks will be playing, but the team is confident of giving the Nats a real scrap.

Rivalries Of Stanley Cup Playoff Resume Tonight As Amerks Meet Hawks And Bruins Hit Leafs

By Jack Calder
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Two bitter rivalries, brought to head last spring in the Stanley Cup playoffs, will be resumed to-night as the National Hockey League breaks into another schedule with alterations all over its face.

New York Americans open at Chicago against the Black Hawks, who knocked them from last season's cup semi-finals and went on to win the trophy. Boston Bruins seek to shove th Maple Leafs around at Toronto the way they did until the Leafs whipped them three straight in the 1937-38 league finals.

The two battles bring the opening volleys of a campaign that will end on March 19, when six of the seven clubs under the new single-group set-up enter the Stanley Cup series. After that will come the question of whether the Hawks, the indomitable veterans of the last hostilities, can make it two in a row. But Chicago could finish sixth and still win the cup, so the problem isn't so important immediatel yas the one about the league title, reserved for the team on top at the end of the schedule.

After a long glance, the expefts are saying the Black Hawks haven't the ability to lead the league. They point out that Stewart just managed to slide the club into third place in the United States division last season, his first as a manager. The Hawks will be stronger this winter with the acquisition of four new players, but likely not strong enough over a stretch.

Bruins Well Shuffled.

Boston led the American section last time and defeated the Canadian division leader, Toronto, in five of six games in the schedule. But despite the 1937-38 record, the Bruins have been made over as thoroughly as any team but Montreal Canadiens. They have let forwards Art Jackson and Leroy Goldsworthy go to the Americans and have brought up five amateurs and minor leaguers.

Canadiens, who finished third in the Canadian section to Toronto and the Americans, bought six players from Montreal Maroons when that club disbanded to reduce the number of entries from eight to seven. They retained five of the six and sent the other, young Desse Smith, to their International-American League farm at New Haven, along with a group of veterans and rookies who can be called up at any time.

Detroit Red Wings offer other alterations. They released right winger Larry Aurie to coach their Int.-Am. farm club at Pittsburgh, and bought from Toronto Charlie Conacher, hockey's hardest shot whose career has been spoiled by injuries and illness. Putting Conacher in Aurie's place and carrying along the rebuilding program he started when the sky fell on Detroit last winter, Manager Jack Adams has asembled a contender again.

Keeling, Cooper on Farm.

New York Rangers have dropped Butch Keeling and Joe Cooper to their Int.-Am. farm club at Philadelphia and brought up Murray Patrick and Larry Molyneaux to fight for Cooper's defence position. Young Dutch Hiller, who finished on hockey's smoothest system of forward lines.

After trying out a long list of candidates, Toronto will start almost unchanged. Manager Conny Smythe hasn't announced a starting lineup yet, but the Leafs likely will begin with the good team that developed so quickly when the "youth movement began" two years ago and with one or two youngsters who alternated between Toronto and the farm at Syracuse last term. The Leafs were good enough to overwhelm Boston in the playoffs then.

Thompson Out With Cut

Because Eddie Shore, veteran powerhouse, is holding out, Art Ross has called on Rookie Johnny Crawford to play on the Boston defence. And because Tiny Thompson has a long cut over one eye, young Frank Brimsek will replace him in goal. Pat McReavy and Roy Conacher, just up from the amateurs, will form a new forward line with Mel Hill, from Providence of the Int-Am.

Around 15,000 fans will look on at Toronto and just as many at Chicago, where twice as many season's tickets have been sold as last fall. It will be more than just an opening at both places.

Manager Red Dutton of the Americans still vows that the goal by which the Hawks knocked his team from the last spring's playoffs shouldn't have been allowed. He begins to mutter whenever that score is mentioned and the rest of the club gets a little wild-eyed, too.

Fields on Defence

Dutton will present Wilf Fields from Seattle on the defence, having dropped Happy Day and Ching Johnson, a couple of the game's great old guards. Art Jackson and Goldsworthy will lend new strength on the forward wall to match the scoring power added to the Hawks with the coming of Baldy Northcott, Russ Blinco and Earl Robinson from the Maroons and Joffre Desilets from the Canadiens.

The fans will see wider blue lines, new rules governing offsides and preventing the goalie from throwing the puck into the crowd or holding it. They will see a new officiating system, whereby a referee and a linesman will govern the play.

The Canadiens open at home Sunday against Chicago, and Detroit at home the same night against Boston, while Rangers don't swing into line until Nov. 13, when they play at Detroit.

Remember When—

Baseball's "Georgia Peach," Ty Cobb, resigned as player-manager of Detroit Tigers 12 years ago today. Joining the American League club in 1905, Cobb cracked out a double in his first appearance and from that date started on a record-smashing career that is baseball history. He ended his baseball career with Philadelphia Athletics in 1928.

Tommy Gorman Leader Of 5 Cup Winners

By Gus Garber
(Central Press Canadian Correspondent)

MONTREAL, Nov. 3—Only surviving governor of the original National Hockey League, Thomas Patrick Gorman, will never again return to the hockey wars. When the Montreal Maroons suspended operations this season it marked Gorman's definite end as a hockey executive.

In his 16 years as manager of National Hockey league clubs, Tommy Gorman handled five Stanley cup winners, more than any other N.H.L. manager.

"I've had all the glory and honor that any hockey manager can ever hope for and I'm satisfied to take my hockey from the sidelines in future," he said.

Gorman has been called a troublemaker among other uncomplimentary things, but there is no denying the fact that he was one of professional hockey's greatest assets. He was also called the National league's greatest publicity man—and that's where "T.P." really shone.

Started As Writer

It was as a sports writer with the Ottawa Citizen that Gorman first broke into pro hockey in 1917 and during his first four years as N.H.L. governor, representing the Ottawa Hockey Association, he continued his sports writing. He knew all the publicity angles and played them heavily to the advantage of the entire league.

With the exception of a four year break between 1929 and 1933, when he was assistant general manager of the Agua Caliente $7,000,000 race track in Mexico, he was governor of the N.H.L. continuously from 1917 until this year.

It was George Kendall, then owner of Canadiens, who first got Gorman interested in pro hockey. In the fall of 1917 Kendall asked Gorman to buy the Ottawa franchise and was undismayed when "T.P." said "What will I use for cash?" A practical business man, the late owner of the Flying Frenchmen replied: "Banks are in business to loan money, so go ahead and get some."

Gorman did. He borrowed $1,250, and Martin Rosenthal and Ted Day put up the balance of the $5,000 necessary to take over the Ottawa franchise. A few days later he came to Montreal to represent Ottawa on the board of governors. That was the Saturday afternoon the National Hockey league was formed in a room in the Windsor hotel, succeeding the old National Hockey Association.

Successive Triumphs

In 1933 he was appointed vice-president and managing director of Chicago Black Hawks, winners of the Stanley cup. The following season he moved to Montreal and won the Stanley cup again.

While with Ottawa, Gorman managed three Stanley cup teams, taking top honors in 1920, 1921 and 1923. In 1919 and 1922 his Senators lost out in the finals. It is interesting to note in passing that none of the Ottawa cup victories were scored in the capital.

What Gorman considers his best hockey deal was the purchase of Sprague Cleghorn for $7. Two railway tickets to Ottawa was the sum outlay for this great defenceman.

His biggest thrill in hockey was when Harry "Punch" Broadbent scored the only goal of the game against Edmonton Eskimos in the 1923 Stanley cup final in Vancouver. Riddled by injuries, Senators had only six men in uniform for that game.

Naming the "greats" he has handled, Gorman named Frankie Nighbor as the greatest hockey player he ever had. Chuck Gardiner was his greatest goalie and Lionel Conacher the most powerful asset. As the gamest player, Gorman named Hooley Smith.

Not an all-time all-star team, but Gorman's top team since breaking into the N.H.L. in 1917, is called as follows: Goalie, Chuck Gardiner; defence, Sprague, Cleghorn and Eddie Shore; centre, Frank Nighbor; forwards, Bill Cook and Aurel Joliat.

Ahead of the Field

Now busy managing the affairs of the Forum, Gorman was the first to go on record as favoring one team for Montreal. He did this in 1935 when attendance dwindled for Maroons, the Stanley cup holders. "We were asking the fans to do too much by seeking their support for two teams. It just wasn't fair to them."

This year, with only one team playing in Montreal, Gorman is looking forward to the greatest professional hockey season ever enjoyed here. Removal of Maroons is also leaving a lot of open time on the Forum schedule and this is being turned over to schoolboy hockeyists. One day recently, no less than 700 pupils from Mount St. Louis college worked out under the supervision of their coaches.

Not a sentimentalist, Gorman isn't sorry to be out of professional hockey's officialdom. "I gave hockey all I possibly could, and the game did well by me," is his summary.

Played Important Part In N.H.L.

No longer burdened with the cares of managing a National League team, Thomas Patrick Gorman, sole surviving governor of the original N.H.L., spends his time behind a mahogany desk where he manages the affairs of the Montreal Forum. Gorman forecasts Montreal's most successful hockey season in history this year with only one pro team in the field.

Four Outstanding Artists Heard On Program Presented By Peterborough Music Teachers

Four outstanding Canadian artists, Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, soprano, Dr. Charles Peaker, organist and pianist, Frank Blachford, violinist and George Lambert, baritone, combined their rich talents to give a large audience in George Street United church Wednesday night an evening of delightful music.

The concert was under the joint auspices of the Ontario Music Teachers' Federation and the George street church choir and was designed to encourage a deeper interest and love for musical expression and the well-chosen program was admirably suited for that purpose.

Rev. M. C. Parr, pastor of George Street United church, prefaced the musical numbers by expressing the appreciation of George Street choir in being associated with such an organization as the Music Teachers' Federation. To the latter he paid a warm tribute for what they had accomplished in increasing musical appreciation in the community and for their continued efforts to promote musical progress. In this connection he urged the earnest cooperation of the parents of the community. Mr. Parr pointed out that the work of this Federation and George Street choir synchronized in the respect that both were keenly concerned in encouraging musical development.

Dr. Peaker opened the program with a set of variations by Joseph Bonnet. This number which the eminent organist described as a "swanky" introduction was based on a simple melody and the variations included one for the feet alone. The organist, using the fine George Street organ to fullest advantage, made this offering a fitting start to a delightful program. Incidentally Dr. Peaker was a very busy individual for in addition to his own numbers he was accompanist for the whole evening and as well did a great deal of the program announcing.

Excerpts from Mendelssohn's great oratorio "Elijah" with Mrs. Park and Mr. Lambert contributing their splendid voices most effectively and Dr. Peaker's organ accompaniment of great assistance followed and proved one of the highlights of the program. Mrs. Park sang the stirring solo "Hear Ye, Israel" with a full appreciation of its power and drama and in fine voice and then combined with Mr. Lambert in the duet "The Widow and Elijah", a number in which the two singers excelled themselves. The final oratorio number was the solo "It Is Enough" in which the pathetic weariness so well set for by the compiser was effectively portrayed by Mr. Lambert.

Group of Four

Later this well known baritone demonstrated his ability as a singer, and his excellent voice in a group of four songs, a Healy Wilan arrangement "Pastime and Good Company" dealing with the period of Henry VIII, a novel song "Tobacco" of the same vintage, a haunting Schumann song in German and a rollicking ballad of the open road "The Vagabond," a varied group and each a gem. In response to the applause Mr. Lambert sang as an encore the descriptive song "Galloping."

Frank Blachford's artistry as a violinist of the first rank rose triumphantly over such an embarrassing accident as the breaking of an "A" string which brought to an abrupt close his first number, a movement from the Symphony Espagnole, written for violin and orchestra and transposed for violin and organ. Later in the program Mr. Blachford was heard to great advantage in a group of three effective selections, a transcription of an orchestral number "In a Boat" and two Kreisler arrangements, one a transcription of Chaminade's song "Spanish Serenade" and the other the ever-popular "Leibestraume." Mr. Blachford had to acknowledge the applause by a most delightful rendition of Schumann's "Evening Song" with organ accompaniment.

Heard all too seldom in her home city Mrs. Park scored a triumph in her two solo numbers, both of which were assisted by a violin obligato by Mr. Blachford. Her first was the delightful "Ah Love But a Day" by Beach in which the beauty alike of the words and music was faithfully reflected by the art of the singer and the immortal "Angels Guard Thee" from "Jocelyn", equally effectively presented.

Dr. Peaker played a group of three delighful little organ numbers, one a Beethoven offering and another a Christmas number, a Brahms' arrangement of an old German song and he made all three a delight. A master of the organ, Dr. Peaker has also an instinctive appreciation of what an audience wants and he is never dull at the keys.

His closing number, and the finale of the program was alively Bach fugue which he said he was playing to send his listeners home in a happy mood and also to show that Bach was not always as solemn as some folk imagined.

No Fixed Neutrality

BLOEMFONTEIN, South Africa, Nov. 3.—(CP Reuters) — General Hertzog, Prime Minister of South Africa, agrees with the contention of General Smuts, minister of justice, that the Union could not declare a policy of fixed neutrality.

The Prime Minister told a United Party conference last night that South Africa might be dragged into a European war and must be prepared. There was a time when it was felt the Union need not be concerned with war overseas, but the airplane had annihilated distance.

General Smuts had said the recent crisis in Europe was sufficient warning to South Africa to put its house in order.

Horse On Highway Causes Accident

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, Nov. 3.—The police are investigating an accident which occurred five miles south of Kinmount on Sunday night when a car plunged into a deep ditch filled with rocks and was completely wrecked. Arthur Cunningham, of Lindsay was the driver of the car and was forced to take to the ditch to avoid striking a horse on the highway. The occupants of the car, L. Roach, N. Irwin, H. O'Keefe and R. McCabe and the driver received bruises and cuts and were given medical treatment by a physician at Bobcaygeon.

Russell Robertson, of Ingoldsby met with a severe accident while doing road work near Donald. A large stone rolled on his foot, crushing it badly. He was taken to Minden for medical treatment and it is feared he may lose a couple of toes.

The local branch of the Retail Merchants' Association has taken steps to properly illuminate the town's main thoroughfare. Lights will be strung across the street, at an estimated cost of $700. It was decided to assess each merchant on the frontage of his store to defray the cost.

A fiery cross was burned on the Collegiate Institute campus on Hallowe'en, and citizens are wondering who is responsible for the blaze. The cross was about nine feet high and was covered with sacking, saturated with oil. The blaze attracted quite a crowd.

It is understood that efforts are being made to induce the management of the Arnberg Woodenware Company, of Bobcaygeon to erect a plant in Lindsay. The firm suffered the loss of their factory in that village some days ago. The new firm would operate in the old Dominion Wheel Works plant.

Magistrate Gee has reserved judgment in the case brought by the village of Bobcaygeon against H. L. Douglas, charging him with failure to secure a transient trader's license to conduct a drug store here. T. J. Carley, K.C., of Peterborough, in asking for a dismissal of the case claimed the bylaw had exjanded its authority beyond that of the common-law specifications.

Czechoslovakia Swain Asks $4,000 From Leo Carillo

The stream of fan mail flowing into Hollywood never runs dry. Upward of 3,000 letters each week in the year are received by the most popular screen stars.

The biggest percentage is from America, and New York and Chicago postmarks are as common as those of Gopher Prairie. Not all of the self-invited correspondents are bored housewives with nothing to do afternoons, or screen-struck boys and girls eager to get to God's country. They embrace the whole rank and file of contemporary society, and they seem to go on forever with the persistence and volubility of Tennyson's brook.

The morning studio mail is certain to receive a batch of laudatory comments on a star's latest picture, requests for money or help in getting into the movies, or for an autographed picture; in fact, most correspondents conclude by requesting a photograph. Sometimes the requests include coin or stamps to cover the postage, sometimes not. The fan mail business is a merry one for the United States Postoffice, a tough one for the army of secretaries and assistants who have to wade through the scriptorail flood.

Some of the stars take an intense personal interest in what their unknown commentators have to say. Some, like May Robson, are so conscientious that they spend a good deal of their spare time answering the more interesting or the more urgent letters, and looking over the others. These are the exceptions, however. More often the stars are content to shift everything to the backs of hirelings, except in a few extra special cases.

Some writers look on their favorite stars as Santa Claus in the flesh. Leo Carrillo, while working in "Too Hot to Handle," received a cablegram from a total stranger in Czechoslovakia complimenting the star on his fine characterizations and asking for a return remittance of $4,000 to enable the sender and his fiancee to be married. The inference seemed to be that he had to place this money on the line before she would step to the altar.

Wallace Beery received a letter from a stranger enclosing a promissory note for $1,500, a document that needed only the star's signature and a return check for that amount to complete the transaction. The writer somewhat ingenuously explained that his friends and the two local banks had refused him this loan, but that he felt sure the big-hearted Mr. Beery would prove more generous.

Demands for money are supplemented by a host of other strange and unbelievable requests. One man wrote to Clarence Brown, the director and flying expert, explaining his interest in aviation, his inability to buy a plane, and his hope that the director would ship him a second-hand one which he no longer needed. Sometimes the stars are asked to lift the family mortgage, sometimes they are merely requested to send a shawl worn in a Spanish costume scene, or a hat or dress used in some romantically outstanding picture.

Inkship Uncertain

KINGSTON, Dorset, Nov. 3.—(CP Cable) — Sir Thomas Inskip last night told boys of the grammar school here he did not know whether or not Great Britain lost prestige in the international crisis over Czechoslovakia.

"If we have lost prestige in the past few weeks—and I do not admit we have—I am quite certain that in England there is a great capacity to begin again and quickly recover anything that we have lost", the minister for defence coordination said.

Sparks Thinks His $3,500 False Teeth Merit Tax Rebate So He Appeals

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 3—(AP).—The movies' best known sourpuss, Ned Sparks, a native of St. Thomas, Ont., told the federal board of tax appeals yesterday false teeth were the tools of his trade, and that he paid $3,500 for a special set which eliminated the hiss when he used the letter "s."

"I bought two sets," dead pan Ned told Judge Ernest Van Fossan, "just in case something happened to one. By buying these teeth I was able to earn $172,000 as a movie actor. If I did not have them I might not have been able to make $10."

Sparks asks a reduction of $8,187 in his income tax bills from 1934 to 1936. He claims this amount was spent for entertainment, tips, automobile expenses and such necessities as the false teeth.

The actor who has yet to smile for the cameras was glummer than ever as he told Judge Van Fossan about his trip to England where he was paid $6,000 a month to simulate the facial expression of an owl and let the quips fall where they would.

Too Chilly in London

"That London climate nearly killed me," Ned explained. "They don't know what heat is. The studio I worked in could have been leased to a meat packing concern for refrigeration purposes. I became ill. Bronchitis. The hotel was cold. I got lumbago. I kept a couple of bellhops busy fetching me cups of tea. That cost me plenty in tips.

"I am classified as a free lance artist. I have to pass out tips, which run about $60 a picture. When I arrived in England, billed as 'the greatest importation that has ever come out of Hollywood,' I was met by a delegation of 200 persons. I had to provide entertainment for them."

Sparks said he thought the money he spent for entertainment, tips and teeth was wisely invested, but he wanted the government to agree with him.

Suggest Nurses Do Internes' Work

TORONTO, November 3—(CP).—Dr. G. Harvey Agnew, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Hospital Council, was on record to-day as favoring the training of nurses to perform duties now assigned to internes. The suggestion came during an address before the Ontario Hospitals Association convention yesterday.

Dr. Agnew contended that nurses were the only solution to the "pressing problem" of the shortage of internes in Canada.

Turning to cancer cases, Dr. Agnew said that by strict analysis of cases under hospital treatment it was hoped that much could be accomplished to improve methods of diagnosis and treatment and to stimulate research.

Dr. B. T. McGhie, Ontario Deputy Minister of Health, told the association that X-ray examinations and tuberculin tests of nurses in public hospitals would be extended to all hospital employees who came in contact with patients.

Hon. Harold Kirby, Ontario Minister of Health, contended at the convention's 15th annual banquet last night, that the School Attendance Act was unsound and a burden to taxpayers. He suggested modification of the act to permit pupils to leave school before the age of 16.

Mr. Kirby said he believed there was work available for every boy and girl "who will start as an apprentice." He said hundreds of school pupils would be "happier" learning trades.

Economic Plums From Hungary To Reward Germany, Italy

BUDAPEST, Nov. 3 (AP)—Informed quarters believed today that Hungary would give economic concessions to Germany and Italy to show appreciation for their help in getting a large slice of Czechoslovakia.

When Premier Bela Imredi told jubilant Hungarians last night that Italo-German mediators had decided shrunken Czechoslovakia should cede Hungary an estimated 4,875 square miles with about 860,000 population, he stressed that his country would not forget her "obligations" to the Rome-Berlin axis.

He did not explain or indicate how he proposed to fulfill these obligations, but reliable observers thought it would mean forging even closer economic ties, especially with Italy since Hungarians feel Italy chiefly was responsible for settling the Czechoslovak-Hungarian territorial dispute so satisfactorily.

"With our territories returned to us we assume enlarged obligations," Imredi shouted from the balcony of his palace to thousands of cheering Hungarians.

"These festivities will last but a moment and then we shall face work. The Hungarian people must be happier. They must develop a spirit of racial consciousness. They must foster a military spirit.

An Attractive Land

"Even more, the people must face the future aware of a deep sense of Christian morality and social justice. It must speed up reforms and make the fatherland attractive to all Hungarians."

Preparations proceeded for occupation of the restored land by the Hungarian army, anxious to carry out that task since the four-power Munich conference gave Germany a part of Czechoslovakia. The occupation is to be carried out in four stages between Nov. 5 and Nov. 10.

Observers felt Germany swung as far as she did in Hungary's favor because of a fear that Italy was becoming too friendly with England.

"We thank the two great powers for undertaking the difficult task of arbitration," Premier Imredi said. "There are still brothers (Hungarians) across the border but inasmuch as we accepted the idea of arbitration we now accept the decision of the arbitrators."

Fool-Proof Gas Masks Are Perfected By The Nazis

BERLIN, Nov. 3.—Millions of gas masks for the civil population are being sold cheaply in Germany.

The masks, which have been developed after long experiments by the German chemical industry and the air ministry laboratories are said to protect the wearers against any poison gas known at present.

The mask, which is officially called "VM 37" (Popular mask of 1937 design) is being manufactured in three sizes, for men, women and children. No using instructions are necessary, as with former face models, because the new masks are absolutely fool-proof in as much as they enclose the whole skull, and afford an absolute airtight fit. The gas filters are screwed into an opening below the mouth and the exhaled air leaves the mask by way of a special valve arranged somewhat above the nose of the wearer.

Synthetic Rubber Used.

Synthetic rubber, produced under Germany's Four Year plan is the basic material used for the popular mask, because it is, in contrast to natural rubber, unperishable even if improperly stored.

Large eye-holes covered with unbreakable cellone "windows" offer a good sight, even to wearers of spectacles. The feature of these windows is the fact that they give clear sight under all conditions and do not have to be wiped clean or treated with soap or other chemicals to prevent precipitations of atmosphere or respiration.

In order to keep space between the masks and the wearer's face as small as possible and thereby increase the depoisoning efficiency the interior of the mask has been covered with a layer of linen. The gas filter, contained in a light metal box screwing into the mask opening, consists of alternating layers of cotton tissues and coal, and is, according to official assertions, practically everlasting.

Free Masks Dropped.

Original plans to supply the German people with this mask free of charge have been dropped because, as an official announcement explains, paying even a small price will have the psychological effect of educating the owners to treat the masks more carefully. Jobless and invalid persons, of course, get the masks free of charge through the national relief organizations.

The Reich Air Defence League, which counts twelve million active members, is building thousands of test rooms all over Germany where gas mask owners will be able to periodically test the fit and efficiency of their masks.

Family Discovers Indian Bones Act as Hoodoos

Farley, Mo., Nov. 3 (AP)

IT WOULD BE hard to convince a certain Leavenworth, Kas., family that a dead Indian is a good Indian. J. M. Shippee reported he found the family head reburying bones taken from an Indian burial mound near here. "We've had nothing but bad luck ever since we get them," the Kansan told Shippee. "What with the tornado that struck Leavenworth last summer and about $600 in money we've lost, we decided to bring the bones back where they belong."

Will Tone Down Ulster Dialect

CHARLOTTETOWN, Nov. 3.—(CP)—Foremost beauty show of its kind is being staged in Charlottetown this week. More than 400 foxes, the finest in the world, are vieing for honors in the Prince Edward Island ninth anhual silver fox exhibition.

All foxes, competing for the grand championship, open to P.E.I. ranchers only, are exhibited "on the hoof."

Value of their pelts in round figures would average $100 apiece—approximately $40,000 for the lot. Their value for breeding purposes is unlimited.

In pre-war days prize male and female pairs of foxes for breeding were sold to the United States, Japan, Norway, England and Western Canada at prices ranging from $20,000 to $35,000. Foxes from those strains have sired the best breeds throughout North America, Europe and Asia.

In late years the pendulum has swung in the other direction. The canny rancher of today will not sell his prize breeding foxes at any price, realizing that upon them depends the quality of his pelts.

Every year fox ranchers and fur scientists visit the Island to get first hand knowledge of the color phase which the world leaders of the industry are cultivating. Noted visitors this year include Frank G. Ashbrook, in charge of fur research for the Bureau of Biological Survey, Washington, D.C., Dr. Charles E. Kellogg of the fur farms experimental stations, Saratoga Springs, N.Y., Dr. John I. Hardy, bureau of animal industry, Washington, and Dr. Walter Wisnicky of the University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.

No Session Likely Until January

OTTAWA, Nov. 3. —(CP)— The next session of parliament probably will begin, as usual, early in January.

Justice Minister Lapointe, acting prime minister, told newspapermen following the cabinet meeting yesterday that no decision had been reached as to calling parliament but "It is unlikely to be summoned before Christmas."

For several weeks there have been rumors parliament would meet the end of November or early in December in an effort to prorogue before the King and Queen arrive in Canada early next summer.

Mr. Lapointe said that "we are not sure it would expedite matters if we were to meet before Christmas." The government has not been advised of the exact date of their majesties arrival in the Dominion and no consideration has been given a possible prorogation date.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King on a southern holiday cruise, is expected back sometime next week and after landing at New York will come direct to Ottawa.

Less Sheep Killing

MEAFORD, Ont., Nov. 3.—(CP)—Sheep killing by dogs, which has prevailed in this district for the past few months, apparently is curbed, if the money paid for damages during the past month is any indication. The total is $21.50—the lowest this year. There is a $10 bounty for persons killing the dogs.

Walters Flies Home For Reception Minus Cup And Prize Money

HALIFAX, Nov. 3—(CP)—Capt. Angus Walters went down to the sea today—by motor car— to meet his beloved schooner Bluenose. The skipper of the International Fisherman's race champion jumped into a car for the 50-mile jaunt down the coast to the old fishing town of Lunenburg where they've planned a big reception for the conqueror of Capt. Ben Pine's Gertrude L. Thebaud.

All sold on the idea of air travel after he arrived in Halifax yesterday by plane from Boston and the fisherman's race off Gloucester, Captain Angus wasn't sure whether he'd row out to the Bluenose for the cruise of triumph into the harbor. Anyway, he's going to be right on hand for the celebration.

The stout Lunenburg fishermen won't see the championship trophy, though. Nor will they hear the tinkle of $3,000 prize money Capt. Walters and his crew won by defeating the Thebaud in three matches out of five. The money can't be found and he left the cup in Boston so it could be brought back in state.

Wrapped in Old Papers

Capt. Walters wanted to bring back the silver cup, received in a presentation ceremony at Boston Tuesday night, but a friend persuaded him against it when he saw the cup wrapped in old newspapers and stuffed into a cardboard box. The cup was sent to Boston in a fine case but that disappeared somewhere on the mysterious journey that ended with the mug turning up at a foundlin's home after it disappeared.

"I had to grab a few newspapers and wrap it up," Capt. Walters said in describing his activities after receiving it. "Then my brother's wife found a cardboard box in the cellar.

"I was going to put it on the plane when a friend came up and said: "You're not going to take it home in that state.' And took it to his office and told me: 'You'll get your trophy and it will be sent back in better shape'."

Present in the Halifax hotel room where Capt. Walters again sang the praises of the Bluenose was his fiancee, Mildred Butler of Halifax. Neither would say anything definite about the wedding date, although there have been reports of a Saturday wedding at Truro.

Crippling Rheumatism

Rheumatism leaves in its train distorted joints, crooked limbs, crippled hands, and the intense pain is almost unendurable.

In the beginning rheumatism is often due to dyspepsia or indigestion, for if the digestive organs did their duty there would not be any poisonous uric acid in the blood to sow the seeds of rheumatism.

Burdock Blood Bitters invigorates the system, and helps to eradicate the uric acid from the blood which is the cause of the inflammation and pain.

Janetville United Church Holds Its 78th Anniversary

(Examiner Correspondence.)

JANVETVILLE, Nov. 3. — The 78th anniversary services of the Janetville United Church were held on Sunday both morning and evening. Rev. Thomas Wallace of Greenbank, president of the Lindsay Presbytery was the speaker at both services and brought inspiring messages.

Mr. Phillips Bennett, tenor soloist of Guelph United Church assisted the choir in special music and rendered several most acceptable numbers including "It's Morning in My Heart," "Open the Gates of the Temple" and "The Holy City."

The church, which was lovely with a profusion of chrysanthemums, and other late fall flowers, was filled to capacity for both services.

In the evening Rev. Mr. Wallace unassisted by Rev. W. H. V. Walker, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, the service of which was cancelled in honor of the anniversary occasion.

School Concert

About forty friends attended the Hallowe'en concert in the Continuation School on Friday afternoon.

The guests were greeted by ghosts as they entered the school room which was in darkness except for the fluttering gleam of jack-o-lanterns.

A most enjoyable program was given by the pupils and included piano solos, mouth organ and guitar numbers, two short plays, the former given first in English then in French also a humorous play "The Lyceum Club."

Rev. M. A. Bury and Misses Marjorie Armstrong and Isabel Marshall were the judges of the costume parade which was won by the following: best comic, little Jim Burn as Maggie; best fancy, Muriel English and Verna Wright as "Two Little Girls in Blue."

A happy afternoon concluded with the National Anthem followed by generous servings of pumpkin pie and home made candy.

The vote of apreciation to the pupils and their teacher Mr. Leonard McNeil was moved by Rev. W. H. V. Walker and extended by Rev. Bury.

Reduces Varicose or Swollen Veins

Simple Home Treatment Prove It At Small Cost

The world progresses. Today many minor ailments that took weeks to overcome can be helped much more quickly. If you have varicose veins or bunches start today to bring them back to normal size and if you are wise you will do so.

Just get an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil at McDermid and Jury or any dispensing pharmacist and apply it night and morning to the enlarged veins. In a short time the veins should begin to grow smaller and by regular use soon approach normal.

People who want to reduce varicose veins or simple swellings, should not hesitate to try a bottle at once. It is so penetrating and economical that a small bottle lasts a long time. —advt.

World Champion Holstein Cow Honored

HAMILTON, Nov. 3.—A new champion, holder of four world's records, walked into a tented ring on a farm near Troy yesterday afternoon before the gaze of 400 prominent persons from Canada and the United States.

The prize winner was Regasborne Alice Alcartra, 3-year-old Holstein-Friesian cow from the herd of Osborne Sager, acclaimed the greatest producer in history. Two Canadian and two American records had been shattered by the Wentworth County cow, and public officials and representatives of various breeds came to congratulate the owner, who bred and raised the animal.

Interest centred in the visit of Mrs Alice Nixon, wife of Hon. Harry C. Nixon, provincial secretary, for the record-breaker was bred from a member of the Nixon herd and in registering her, Mr. Sager arranged a combination of names of Mrs. Nixon and himself. Mrs. Nixon, in the absence of the minister, addressed the gathering and later toasted success for the owner and Regasborne Alice, appropriately using a glass of Holstein milk.

George Clemens, secretary of the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada, gave official figures from the R.O.P. division, Ottawa, showing the cow's total production for 365 days to be 25,460 pounds of milk, 916 pounds of fat, with test of 3.6 per cent. In ten months the total was 22,227 pounds of milk, 816 pounds of fat and the test 3.67 per cent. The previous high mark for a year's production in the United States was 22,961 pounds and in Canada 22,433 pounds. The present champion had bettered the mark of cows on test for three and four times a day milking, it was announced.

Marmora; T. P. Lancaster, Havelock; George Thompson, Rawdon Township; R. A. Elliott, Deloro; Dr. A. T. Embury, Bancroft; Dr. S. S. Lumb, Bancroft; and George S. White, Madoc. All withdrew except Lancaster, Thompson and White, and all were given ten minutes in which to address the audience or withdraw their names.

Four Names Withdrawn.

R. A. Elliott, Deloro, withdrew.

Dr. A. T. Embury, Bancroft, said his interest in the Conservative party was even stronger to-day than it was 13 years ago when he first entered politics. "Dr. Manion is a born gentleman, and a leader to be proud of." He withdrew his name.

T. P. Lancaster, former M.P.P., allowed his name to stand. He said he served for eight years in the provincial seat, and was defeated by a close margin at the last election. He claimed the fish hatchery now being built was obtained through his efforts in 1937. "The Liberal member obtained his majority in Peterborough section, and that is the main reason why the candidate should come from Peterborough County. From a standpoint of representation Peterborough is a minority but I appeal to you to give Peterborough the candidature for one term then it can go back to Hastings section."

Dr. S. S. Lumb, Bancroft, withdrew.

L. E. Neale, Marmora, also withdrew.

George Thompson, Reeve of Rawden Township, said insomuch as the riding was predominantly an agricultural district he felt a farmer should carry the banner. He allowed his name to stand, and outlined his experience in municipal affairs.

Urges British Unity.

George White, Madoc lawyer, allowed his name to stand. "The destiny of Canada lies with Great Britain, and not with the country to the south," I would urge that the ties with Britain be strengthened."

He condemned the King Government for what he termed their "spineless attitude on the recent European crisis." He expressed gratification at the example set by the war veterans of Canada on what stand the country should take.

"I advocate the strongest possible action to curb the activities of Communists, Fascists and other vicious isms which will if not curbed undermine our democracy and our country.

"I heartily condemn the patronage system as it is practised in this country. Every man deserves a job, it should not matter what church, or lodge he attends, or what his political affiliations are. I criticize severely the present government for the treatment accorded war veterans in this county.

Amend B.N.A. Act.

He explained he would support amending the B.N.A. to centralize and strengthen the power of the Dominion government, claiming this was one possible way to eliminate the disunity and bickering which exists now between the provinces and the Federal government. He was given a tremendous ovation.

The scrutineers were Cam Wallbridge, Madoc; George Bailey, Rawdon; Jim Bascom, Havelock; and Fred Kempt, Norwood, and their count of the 177 ballots showed White with a clear majority.

Hon. J. Earl Lawson, M.P., York South, was the guest speaker and extended congratulations to the new standard bearer. He was introduced by Dr. Embury.

Mr. Lawson expressed regret that the Hon. Dr. Manion, national party leader was unable to be present because of a tour of the west. He referred to the new leader as the one man who can unite Canada politically and eliminate all of the glaring disunity which exists today.

"The Liberals promised that complete harmony would exist when all provincial governments went Liberal, but the only thing they have agreed on is to scuttle all of the social legislation placed on the statute books by the last Conservative government." Mr. Lawson made a plea for a united Canada and asked all Conservatives to give the party their strength so that unity and co-operation would be the keynote of the campaign which is just starting.

"In parliament we see the unusual situation where Liberal party leaders are forced to stand and defend the policies of the government from the attacks of their own members," he said, and added that the Liberal government at Ottawa represents the most diversified opinions of any group in the history of parliament, but the party is unique in that despite the opposition to certain plans, the members always stand and vote to maintain the Mackenzie King type of Liberalism.

Promised Tariff Reductions

He referred to the fact that Liberal leaders had promised to have the tariffs on farm implements reduced but in 1938 farmers were paying more for these products than they were in 1936 and there had not been one single provision to reduce the tariffs in the last three budgets.

He rapped the King government for the trade agreements made with the United States, claiming that Canada bought more and sold less under these plans, while under the British Empire trade agreements instituted by the Bennett government the very opposite condition existed. He quoted figures to show that in Empire trade Canada sold more and bought far less.

"Conservatives want to trade but only on a fair and equitable basis, we believe in protecting the home markets," he declared.

Training his guns on the willingness of the Liberal leaders to trade with the United States, Mr. Lawson said, "No county which comes under the economic domination of another country can avoid becoming dominated financially and politically by such a country, unless it has a strong tie with a parent nation or Empire. The British Empire is our tie, we must cling to it."

In conclusion he said the Liberal government had promised during the pre-election speeches to reduce the sales tax, but instead had raised it from six per cent to eight per cent, where it still stands. He urged all the electors in the Hastings-Peterborough riding to throw their whole support behind George White and thus assure his election.

Gordon K. Fraser, delegate from Burleigh Falls, moved a vote of confidence in the leadership of the Hon. Dr. Manion and the entire gathering supported the resolution with a standing vote.

In a second hidden room, Lieutenant Curley said, a box containing a number of counterfeit federal revenue stamps and liquor bottle labels had been discovered.

As the search progressed, Jacob Rosenblum, assistant district attorney, continued a steady questioning of the three men—Demetrius Gula, 30, a pinball operator, John Virga, 34, a clothes presser, and William Jacknis, a playground instructor accused of serving as the "finger man" for the gang.

Powerful Guns

LONDON, Nov. 3—(CP-Havas)—The Daily Express (Independent) announced today that a report by Parliament's select committee on estimates—the budget-drafting committee—revealed existence of a 4.5 inch British ordnance piece described as "the world's most powerful anti-aircraft gun."

Although details remained secret, the newspaper said, this gun was known to be superior to the 3.7 inch gun which fires 12 rounds a minute with a maximum range of 20,000 to 30,000 feet.

Czechoslovakia and Hungary agreed to accept the award as final. Should further difficulty arise, Italy and Germany were empowered to settle it by new arbitration.

No Border Guarantees.

Polish informants said negotiations would continue through diplomats for a possible frontier with Hungary, and this raised the question whether Italy, Germany, Great Britain, and France now guaranteed Czechoslovakia's new frontiers.

Poles considered it significant that Germany and Italy took no step yesterday to guarantee the Czechoslovak borders, although they agreed at the Munich conference to do so after Sudetenland was absorbed by Germany and Hungary reached an agreement with Slovakia.

German officials said that, in the German view, however, neither France nor Britain formally guaranteed the frontiers at the Munich parley.

"Premier Chamberlain in Munich said he was ready to do so," said a German spokesman. "But we considered that more a moral obligation than anything else, for at that time the borders did not exist."

ing a dominion arsenal made government-manufacture impossible at present, a solution to the arms problem would be for Britain to place secondary orders with Canadian private industries which also would manufacture munitions for the Canadian government under a controlled-profit agrement, he said. With be reduced for each unit and the total cost diminished.

"We cannot get enough money in Canada to manufacture all our own armament requirements but with Britain's help we could do well," the defence authority said. "The Bren gun contract was a precedent by which Britain can create a secondary source of supply."

The anticipated order to be placed with the Canadian aircraft industry by the British War Office is another instance of Anglo-Canadian co-operation which would aid in the solution of the Canadian re-armament question and possibly the co-operative manufacture would eventually be extended to explosives.

"It is a great advantage to have secondary source of supply and it might mean the salvation of the British Empire and the saving of our own lives. It would be a vital part of Empire defence."

Almost Crippled With Rheumatism

Improved Greatly When He Tried Kruschen

There has just come to our notice a case of grand relief from severe rheumatic pains. The seriousness of the man's condition and the step that led to his ultimate recovery, are described in the following letter:—

"For several years I suffered from rhematism. I had all my teeth out, and still suffered. A year ago I lay in hospital for fourteen weeks, almost crippled. When I got home I continued to take medicine, but began to go down again. A friend of mine asked me to try Kruschen Salts, and I am very pleased to be able to say I have been on the mend since."—H.P.

Two of the salts in Kruschen are the most effectual solvents of uric acid known to medical science. They swifty dull the sharp edges of the crystals—the cause of pain and stiffness—and often convert them into a harmless solution, which is then expelled through the natural channels.—advt.

VOL. LXXX, No. 256 — PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1938 — PRICE THREE CENTS

Charged With Murder

Finance Committee Recommends Extension Of Franchise Peterborough Bus Lines To 1947

Extension for five years of the franchise of the Peterborough Bus Lines, expiring in 1942, was recommended to the city council by the finance committee Wednesday night as a means of assisting the company to finance the purchase of new buses that are to be added to Peterborough fleet as soon as possible.

Alderman Dutton's motion, seconded by Alderman Stocker, was unanimously supported.

Frank J. Mitchell of Windsor, president of the Bus Lines, said that every time he came to Peterborough he was ashamed of "the two old crocks," built about 1924, that were still rolling along. They were creating a special problem of finding spare parts for them. The old models were obsolete long ago, and parts had to be taken from other old cars being dismantled.

Put On Two New Buses.

"We'd like to put two new cars into operation immediately," Mr. Mitchell said. "That would mean spending around $14,000, and we also need a spare. When completed our fleet in Peterborough would be one of the best in Ontario or Canada for cities of this size and even larger. But, our present franchise expires in 1942, and with $50,000 tied up in the transportation service we'd need some more time for the financing. I'll promise to put two new buses on at once, and the third as soon as our finances will allow."

Mr. Mitchell said five buses were now operating with an extra at noon and five o'clock.

"We have a good record in Peterborough. Our first accident of a serious nature was only a short time ago, and I don't think we were to blame. During the depression we had to cut the wages of the men, but twice in the last 24 months they have got increases without asking for them. As we come back, they come back. I think that is the only way to do it."

Alderman Stocker said Mr. Mitchell had educated Peterborough people to buses, "and if they quit to-night we'd have to consider spending sixty or seventy thousand dollars for our own system or let the people walk, and we couldn't very well do that."

Mr. Mitchell said the bus fares here were the lowest in Ontario and Canada, and he promised there would be no increase.

REGULATING STALLS

After all the time he spent in having prepared a new bylaw regulating the height of restaurant stalls, limiting them to not more than 4' 6", Alderman Cotton concluded Wednesday night that his effort was a duplication of the legal committee's bylaw, and was absorbed by it. He had obtained copies of the restaurant regulations in various Ontario cities, but in the meantime Alderman Gordon's committee set about revising the eating house bylaw which included the 4' 6" stall restriction. Alderman Cotton's purpose was to put an end to the anomaly of the Home Lunch carrying on business five months without a license while the council was getting around to a decision on what the height of stalls should be.

40 Gallons Of Tar Stolen By Youths

Melville Edwards, a roofer living at Lang, has complained to the provincial police that on Moday night a gang of youths carried off a drum containing 40 gallons tar, a number of ladders and a gate. He says that the tar was poured into the Indian River and the ladders also tossed into the water and that he found his gate suspended from a tall tree.

Provincial Constable David Silvester investigated the complaints and as a result ten theft charges will probably be heard here shortly.

Crash Is Narrowly Averted Between Train And Car At The Water Street Crossing

Death hovered again Wednesday night around the Water street crossing of the C.N.R. where Joseph Meagher, yard foreman, was fatally injured last week.

As a string of freight cars was proceeding westerly over the crossing about 6.40 o'clock, an automobile driven by Dr. R. Carr-Harris of Apsley was being driven north on Water street. Dr. Carr-Harris was accompanied by Walter Games, also of Apsley and neither of the occupants of the motor car noticed the train unti ltheir own vehicle had nearly reached the rails. Then Games shouted a warning to the driver and Dr. Carr-Harris slammed on his brakes and swerved his car to the left with the result that a head-on crash into one of the freight cars was averted and the automobile merely struck the trai na glancing blow.

Neither Dr. Carr-Harris, nor his passenger was hurt. His car was damaged to some extent, the rear front fender being bent, a rear door hinge damaged and a window broken.

Traffic Docket Heavy In Court

Wednesday morning's session of the police court was so prolonged that traffic court had to go over to the afternoon, a number of cases laid under the Highway Traffic Act and the city traffic bylaw being disposed of by Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell, pleas of guilty being entered in each case.

Among the charges laid by Provincial Traffic Officers McClure and Broughton was one against Fred Switzer, Bancroft, for speeding, the result being a fine of $5 and $2.50 costs.

Another was against James Madden of Toronto, who paid $5 and $2.35 costs for the privilege of passing another car on the highway under circumstances that made such an operation unsafe. A similar charge against Harold Howson R.R. 1, Cavan, resulted in a fine of 35 and $2.50 costs. Alex. Hunter of Lakefield contributed $10 and $1.75 costs for driving without a license.

A city charge against Keith Hodgson of the R.C.A.F., Trenton, of passing another vehicle under unsafe conditions ended in a fine of $5 and $2.50 costs. Failing to stop before entering a through street brought fines of $2 and 75 cents costs from H. J. Harrison, R.R. 1, Omemee; Don. Loyst, Bancroft; Randolph McDonald, Lindsay, and Eileen Lytle, Oakwood.

Visit To Hawaii Is Described To Kinsmen Club

Hula-hula dance of the Hawaiian Islands was originally an act of deep religious significance and was performed before the early Kings of the Islands, but through circuses and cheap shows the beautiful dance has come into desrepute and is regarded as vulgar by the Occidental peoples, Miss Hilda Hesson, of Winnipeg, hostess for the Canadian Pacific Railways, told Kinsmen at a noon luncheon to-day when she spoke on Honolulu and described the fascinations, beauty and charm of the lovely islands in the Pacific.

Miss Hesson was introduced by M. Jamieson, local office manager of the C.P.R. In her introductory remarks on the topic Miss Hesson recalled the words of Mark Twain who described Hawaii as the loveliest group of islands anchored in any ocean.

Traced History.

Tracing the history of the islands the speaker said they were discovered in 1778 by Captain Cook, an intrepid English navigator and named after his sponsor the Earl of Sandwich. Four months after Cook's arrival trouble developed between the natives and Cook's sailors and Cook was slain. During the next twelve years fearful wars were waged between the different island kings and peace returned in 1795 when Kamehameha I was victorious and reigned over the islands. His last great battle was fought on a cliff and the enemy perished by the thousands as they were forced over the cliff to fall to their deaths in the valley below. Captain George Vancouver, after whom Vancouver city is named, made severa ltrips to the islands and brought the first cattle to the islands about the year 1800. Kam was succeeded by seven other kings and finally by a Queen and during this time the country prospered and enjoyed peace. Queen Liliuokalani took the throne in 1891. She was a headstrong, self-willed woman who was anxious to restore to her own people the rights that in the intervening years had been wrested from them by foreign settlers. In 1893, however, the foreign residents seized the government buildings, forced the queen to abdicate and formed a Provisional government. The American flag was raised in 1898 and the country became part of the United States with 30 representatives in the Legislature and 15 senators.

Hospitable People.

Speaking of the customs of the people, Miss Hesson said the Hula dance was a means of expression for the natives and took the place of drama, poetry and music. In the dance almost everything could be expressed ,the sounds and movements of the ocean, of waterfalls, of flowers breaking into bloom, a storm at sea and many other similar actions. The skirt was made from green ti leaves and shredded by the fingers, one hundred leaves to a skirt. Bracelets of shark's teeth were worn on the ankle and wrists and wreaths of beautiful flowers worn on the hair. To-day even in the islands the dance has lost its early beautiful significance and has fallen into disrepute.

A Leis is a wreath of flowers, said Miss Hesson and is sent to the ship's passengers as a greeting and expression of welcome. She described the Hawaiians as the most beautiful and most hospitable people in the word.

Waikiki Beach

The world famous Beach at Waikiki is small and shaped like a crescent, Miss Hesson said. At each end of the beach are ramparts of black rock jutting into the sea. The most unusual thing about this beach is that the waves are uniform and there is no undertow because of existing reefs some distance from shore. Natives always know just what type of wave will follow another, hence surf riding is so popular. A surf board is ten feet long, is made of koa wood or redwood and weighs fifty pounds. One lays flat at the end of the board, paddles with the hands, steers with the feet until the surf is reached, then the rider stands and glides back to shore a distance of sometimes two miles.

Deep sea fishing, turtle fishing and many other kinds of fishing attract sportsmen to Hawaii, she said.

Outrigger canoes, which are native pirogues, with a framework built on each side for stability are used to give amateurs the thrill enjoyed by the surf riders without danger of a spill.

The islands are important industrially, sugar, fish, pineapples being the leading ventures. She said the first sugarcane seed was brought to the islands more than a century ago by a Chinese. They have the greatest irrigation system in the world.

The flowers of the Islands surpass in beauty any in the world the speaker said but most have a pecullar coarse character. She described one which grows on the sands of the sea, and said it looked exactly like a wooden rose with a pin cushion centre, and does not change in appearance after it is plucked.

Miss Hesson will address the St. John's Sunday School class in the Sunday School building at 8.15 to-night.

Dr. Mark Crough, president of the Kinsmen Club voiced the appreciation of the club to Miss Hesson.

Midnite Frolic Will Provide Both Fun And Profit

The Rambling REPORTERS

THERE WERE NO FIREWORKS

If Alderman Walter Stocker, whose pride and joy for years has been the city's parks, had been present in Confederation Square about seven o'clock last evening, there would have been an explosion.

The beds in the park have all, under Walter's supervision, been prepared for winter, well fertilized soil piled about each of the plots. Last night a poorly dressed old woman was busy in the park. She had a large paper bag in one hand and was scooping earth into it with the other.—R.

The law of luck and averages is going to operate with pleasing frequency for the Midnite Frolic crowd at the Capitol Theatre Friday night, an entertainment for grown-ups that has all the attractive trimmings of a Santa Claus party.

At least one person in every seven attending the Frolic is going to carry home a prize. That's how many of them there are, one hundred and twenty (120) prizes, and all of them are to be distributed early in the program of vaudeville, especially selected pictures for the occasion, and the fun of having your ticket turn up a winner for you.

The main show window at Hall's Store is full of these prizes of value and variety. You can see them for yourself this evening and tomorrow, such things you'd like to have as a long Christmas cake; fog lights for your car; satin lounging pyjamas of gold and black; windshield defroster; hall mirrors; a hefty ham; table lamps; walnut fern stand; table tennis set; ladies' purses; smoking stand; plaid snow suit; hampers of fruit and groceries; orders for your photograph in colors; radiator covers, desirable for your car when the cold weather comes; but there is no necessity of going over the whole list. Those are some of the samples.

Begins At 11.15 P.M.

The frolic starts at 11.15 p.m. Friday night Morley Plunkett not so long ago of Dumbells will be the M.C.—Master of Ceremonies, and here is a glance over the program:

Eula Mould and Sylvia Bagby, song and dance team, winners of the National Radio Contest to represent Canada at Hollywood in November.

Lenore Gordon, in new dance technique; recently improving her art with professional instructions in Toronto.

Master Victor Cremasco, in vocal numbers.

Wilfred Galvin, impersonator.

Feature picture, "Wake Up and Live," with Alice Faye, Ben Bernie and Walter Winchell; also comics, or arther other comics, because this program has been arranged to amuse, to fit into the spirit of a Midnite Frolic.

The tickets are fifty cents, and the funds will be used for a Santa Claus night for the children of the city and district, that should be bigger and better than last year's, and will be with the crowd that is expected to fill the theatre for the drawing of the 120 prizes that are a supplementary attraction for Friday's Midnite Frolic.

Widely Known Young Man Is Laid To Rest

The funeral of John S. Adair, popular young osteopath who died suddenly on Monday evening in his 32nd year, was widely attended by sorrowing friends at George Street United church on Wednesday afternoon.

The Peterborough Lion's Club attended the services in a body; there were present representatives of George Street church and Sunday School, the Y.M.C.A., the Peterborough Ski Club, and the Friday Night Supper Club. Flowers were banked about the bier.

Rev. Mr. Parr told of the high esteem in which the young man was held, and of the great shock that was felt throughout the city when his hundreds of friends learned of his passing. He told of the many activities in this city in which he had been interested and of the good he had done in them. George Street Church would miss him a great deal, he said, for he had been closely associated with it. He mentioned that Mr. Adair had been a Sunday School teacher there at one time, and that recently he had headed the Second Quarter Club in the church.

He paid tribute to his quiet, unassuming manner, stressed that he was essentially a student. He had a great fondness of reading and his taste was good, said Mr. Parr.

Pall bearers at the funeral were representatives of the Lions' Club, the Friday Night Supper Club and George Street Church. They were C. S. Thompson, Jack Richardson, Fred Cripps, Max Swanston, Homer Borland, and Grant Gillespie. Honorary pall bearers were G. H. Roper, secretary of the Y.M.C.A.; George Cunningham, a friend; Bob White, of the Peterborough Ski Club; Allan Neal, a friend; Dave Rogers of the Friday Night Supper Club, and Don McFadgen, a friend.

Interment was made at Little Lake Cemetery.

Sea Scout Troop Requires Site

Site on the property of the McDonald estate recently acquired by the city for a houseboat, gift from the federal Department of Transport, was leased by the finance committee of the council Wednesday night to representatives of local Boy Scouts who will convert it into a building on land for a projected sea scout troop.

Scout Master A. Sturrock of the 12th troop, St. Paul's southend Sunday School, and Scout Master S. Leggott, of the 10th troop, St. James Church, asked for a location on the Little Lake front north of the McDonald residence. Their request was granted at a nominal rental of one dollar a year. The building will be 20' by 40'.

"The council would save itself a lot of trouble if they would adopt the plan of graded salary schedules," Alderman Dutton commented in regard to bylaw to be drawn for next Monday's meeting fixing the salary of Sanitary Inspector R. MacPherson at $1350 a year, increasing gradually to a maximum of $1,800.

A sub-committee was appointed to decide the equity of John Douglas in the gasoline station he built on King street in front of the bus line barn.

Hastings Young People's Society Sponsors Lively Masquerade

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Nov. 3—The annual Hallowe'en party sponsored by the Young People's Society of Trinity United church, was held in the church basement on Monday at 8 p.m., with a large attendance, most of the guests appearing in masquerade costume.

Decorations were in keeping with Hallowe'en including the traditional lighted pumpkin heads, goblins, witches, black cats, etc. The "spookiness" incident to the season was accentuated by insistence on entrance through dimly-lighted passageways where weird sounds, ghosts and obstacles predominated.

Mrs. J. B. Scriver acted as master of ceremonies and the party opened with music played by Miss Margery Scriver dressed as a gypsy maid. The room was darkened and as Ghost No. 1 and Ghost No. 2 appeared they told thrilling tales.

Margaret and Clairine Scriver, dressed as cute little Dutch folk, sang "In a Little Dutch Kindergarten." Earl and Raymond Scriver sang "That Silver Haired Daddy of Mine". Little Miriam Newell, as Red Riding Hood, played a pleasing piano solo.

Following the program, Miss M. Scriver again played for the grand march. Mrs. H. Edwards, Mrs. Bert Preston and Mrs. F. W. Newell were judges with the winners as follows:

Mrs. Wallace Orr and Mrs. D. Pollock, best dressed couple; Lorraine Scott, clown, 1st best dressed child and 2nd Clairine Scriver, as a Dutch boy; Bob Glass as a tramp, best comic; Mrs. C. Baker, a Spanish maid, fancy dress; Mr. and Mrs. Grant Sine as twin beds, best comic couple; Mrs. Wallace Orr, best dressed gentleman. Honorable mention was accorded Miss Flo German, as a gypsy; Ronnie Lockhart, as a clown; Claudine Hoard, pretty girl; Doris Calberry, Chinaman; Miriam Newell, Red Riding Hood.

Following the parade the fortune tellers were kept busy, Miss Flo German entertaining by palm reading, Mrs. J. B. Scriver by tea cups and Mrs. Arnold Lobb by mysterious word appearance.

The happy evening was closed by serving sandwiches and pumpkin pie.

Party at S. S. No. 9, Percy

A very pleasant and successful Hallowe'en frolic was enjoyed by the pupils of the Cobourg Road school on Monday afternoon when they and their teacher, Miss Kathleen Crossen, entertained guests from the school section.

The program featured games, a contest won by Miss Irene Oliver, a story on "The Origin of Hallowe'en" by Lillian Smith, and an address on "The City of Quebec" by Marguerite Lamey, who won the township cup presented by Reeve J. W. Pacey at the Roseneath Oratorical contest.

The afternoon's fun ended by service of candies, popcorn, sandwiches, cake and cocoa by the teacher and her assistants.

Voting in Quebec

MONTREAL, Nov. 3—(CP)—The Union Nationale Government staked its unbeaten record at the polls against the challenge of Quebec Liberals today in two provincial by-election contests.

As voters visited the ballot boxes in Montreal St. Louis and Stanstead county, Premier Maurice Duplessis' Government hoped to stretch its by-election victories to five in a row. The Liberals sought to make their first inroads into the administration's ranks since they were swept out in 1936 after 39 years of power.

DISTURBED AT NIGHT?

A DIURETIC stimulant such as Dr. Pierce's A-nuric is often indicated and usually it is sufficient to relieve minor kidney irregularities. These A-nuric Tablets put up by Dr. Pierce and sold by druggists are of value in relieving the burning and soreness, and the desire for frequent urination caused by or associated with excess acid, and they tend to ease the flow of urine. Read this: Ronald Spooner, 132 Brock St., Brantford, Ont., said: "In the morning I would be so stiff and sore that I could hardly stoop over to tie my shoes. Then again my kidneys gave me trouble, the secretions passed very often and burned in passage. I took Dr. Pierce's A-nuric Tablets and was relieved of my misery." Price, 65 cents.

Actor Throws Country Into Turmoil By Radio Broadcast

A radio dramatization of H. G. Wells' "War of the Worlds", by Orson Welles (inset), and his Mercury players was presented so realistically that hundreds of Americans were thrown into a panic as the play related the "invasion" of New Jersey by a horde of men from Mars. Radio listeners interpreted the play as an actual news broadcast of the events suposed to presume the end of the world, and fled panic-stricken to the streets. A score of persons were treated for injuries received when they rushed out of their homes to escape what appeared to be certain doom. This picture shows you what a modern city would look like after an invasion as depicted in the Orson Welles broadcast. It is a scene from "Things to Come", another fantastic novel by H. G. Wells, depicting the death and destruction of ultra-modern warfare.

CAMPBELLFORD

Fellowship Crusade Described To W.M.S.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 3. — A short explanatory talk on the "Fellowship Crusade" by Mrs. J. D. Mills formed an interesting portion of the program presented before the members of St. John's W.M.S. at their meeting held in the Ladies' Parlor of the church Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Mills emphasized the value of daily meditation and of church attendance. Mrs. Harold B. Neal, who took the chair for the afternoon in the absence of the president, also gave a short talk dealing with the "Reality of the Friendship of Jesus To-day." During the business portion of the program the reports of the secretary and treasurer were given, and it was revealed that Mrs. A. L. Malcolm's group led in contributions and for attendance for the first half year's attendance Mrs. A. D. Bennett's group was ahead.

Mrs. G. A. Kingston led the group in prayer and Scripture readings were given by Mrs. Kingston and Mrs. Chappell. Mrs. Ed. Bates rendered a vocal solo, "Hide Me, My Saviour," followed by a prayer in poem form by Mrs. D. Clark. Mrs. G. W. Hammond gave the first chapter of the new study book, "The World in Canada," which expressed the thoughts of making Canada more united and more Christian. Also assisting in this portion of the program were Mrs. C. K. Stephen, who gave a paper on "Canadian Scenes"; Miss Jordan, "The European Contributions to Canadian Life" by Mrs. E. H. Greig.

Mrs. Neale expressed her thanks to all those who had helped in any way at the meeting and reminded members of the luncheon to be held in December in honor of Mrs. A. D. Bennett's group for heading the attendance list.

CARNATION MILK saves you money when you use it for creaming coffee. BUT, the big advantage is that Carnation gives coffee a wonderfully smooth, satisfying flavour and a rich, tempting colour. Of course, Carnation works wonders when you use it for creaming cereals and fruits and in making cream sauces, cream soups, puddings and other dishes which call for milk or cream.

Carnation is just pure whole milk, made double rich by reducing the natural water content and made smooth and extra-digestible by heat treatment and homogenization. It is specially good for babies, with its added amount of "sunshine" vitamin D.

Hallowe'en Frolic At Millbrook Is Jolly School Event

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Nov. 3.—One of the happy events of Hallowe'en evening was the program, and social gathering, held in the Continuation School assembly hall, under the auspices of the literary society, with Group One, Eleanor Bigelow, convenor, in charge of the proceedings, and Mr. Walter Ziegler, B.A., supervising.

The chair was taken by Ken Kidd, and the program opened with the singing of "O Canada," Robena Tate presiding at the piano. The hostess group sang a chorus and gave the school yell, Leitha Rowland following with a recitation, "Ma and the Auto." A vocal solo, "The Big Brown Bear," was contributed by Nan Fallis, and a trio, "A Long Time to Come," was sung by Velma Thornton, Gerald Armstrong and Cameron Elson.

Grades 9 and 10 then took their share of the program, by singing two French songs, "Frere Jackues" and "Au Claire de la Lune," after which a very pretty wand drill was well executed, the following taking part: Dorothy Anderson, Laureen Handley, Viva Clarke, Mary Eakins, Dorothy Smith, and Maud Raper. Wands were tied with red and blue streamers, and the girls wore their school uniforms of white middies and blue skirts.

Two selections on the violin by William Kerr and Elwood Fallis, "Alexander's Ragtime Band," and "Cathedral in the Pines" were much enjoyed, and an amusing skit followed when the members of Group One acted out the song, "Billy Boy", their farm costumes adding to the effect of the whole. A recitation, "Rebekah" by Gladys Coulter, preceded the highlight of the program —the initiation of Form One, six ghosts having a part, with Ken Kidd in the main role, lights turned off and only candles burning, and the eerie effect further heightened by black curtains over the windows, and other appropriate Hallowe'en details.

The two new teachers were also initiated, Mr. Ziegler being asked to speak on the theme, "The Advantages of a Noisy School Room," for three minutes, while Miss Shirley Buckingham had assigned for her speech, "The advantages of an unhappily married life."

An informal closing, with lights turned on once again, was followed by dancing, with William Edworthy at the piano, lunch being served about midnight. A former pupil, Orval Walnman, was among the guests of the evening, and was very warmly welcomed, by special request contributing one of his clever tap dances to the entertainment.

Mr. And Mrs. C. Brisbin Honored By Relatives And Neighbors

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, Nov. 3.—Relatives to the number of sixty-one gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cephas Brisbin and their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Eagleson, on Friday night, to honor Mr. and Mrs. Brisbin on the occasion of their thirtieth wedding anniversary.

The guests gathered in the Eagleson part of the home and at six o'clock entered the Brisbin home to the great surprise of their hosts. The large double home was thrown open for the evening and supper was served. The three-tiered wedding cake with the customary decorations centred the table and was flanked on either side with cut flowers of the season.

After supper, Wilbert Davey of Port Hope presided over a short program, in which for the most part, the juvenile members of the company were entertainers. Donald Davey of Port Hope recited "My Puppy Dog"; June Buttars of Harwood, sang a song; Valetta and Mavis Thackeray of Roseneath sang "The Rosewood Casket"; Oscar Davey, Port Hope, playing guitar accompaniment, sang a solo "Dunderbanks Machine"; Elmer and Clare Harper of Fenella sang "Just Nineteen Years Old," Elmer playing guitar accompaniment; and Laura Wolfraim of Castleton played a piano solo. The adult numbers consisted of a short speech by C. D. Harper, Fenella, and a humorous reading by W. J. Harper of Warkworth.

Mrs. Jesse Mitchell, the host's sister, of Oak Heights, on behalf of the relatives, read an address which conveyed the congratulations of the company, and Mrs. R. McCullough of Cobourg, the hostess' sister, presented a floor lamp and a purse of money to Mr. and Mrs. Brisbin.

The hosts expressed their deep appreciation of the honor done them.

Not to be outdone, the neighbors gathered and announced their arrival in charivari fashion. After these guests had entered and congratulated Mr. and Mrs. Brisbin, all indulged in dancing until midnight, when refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Brisbin live on their farm about five miles west of Roseneath, with their only child, a daughter, Mrs. Ray Eagleson. They have two grandchildren, Laura and Murray Eagleson. Mrs. Brisbin, prior to her marriage was Laura, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Willis Curtis, Fenella, and Mr. Brisbin is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brisbin, Fenella.

Included among the relatives present were: Mr. and Mrs. R. McCullough and Winston of Cobourg, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Davey and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Graham of Port Hope, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. France Changes Finance Head

PARIS, Nov. 3—(AP). — A new French finance minister began a five-day search for an orthodox solution to the nation's economic puzzle today after the cabinet had scrapped the plan his predecessor had been working on for more than a month.

Paul Reynaud, moderate and experienced, who succeeded Paul Marchandeau as finance minister after a short-lived crisis yesterday, cancelled all his engagements and declared he even would refuse to answer his telephone until next Monday.

By then he hopes to have the devious pattern of French finances cleared up in his mind so he can give the cabinet at least a general outline of his new program. Forty-day decree powers given Premier Edouard Daladier's cabinet expire Nov. 15.

The sudden shift in cabinet posts by which Reynaud and Marchandeau swapped jobs as justice and finance ministers resulted, political observers said, from deep-seated differences over the nature of methods to be applied for financial and economic recovery.

Marchandeau, formerly considered among the most orthodox of financial experts, had become convinced ,these observers said, that only drastic measures including exchange control, an extra-ordinary income tax and a special levy on stock earnings would prove successful.

Reynaud on the other hand was said to have led a cabinet majority in a fight for more conservative measures which would increase government revenue by stimulating production.

AFRAID TO MARRY

CHAPTER 38

JUDY THOUGHT quickly as that strange voice said to her over the speaking tube, "Is this Abbey Boland?"

If she said that it was, she might learn something.

On the other hand she might involve Ronald.

Instinctively she whispered. All whispers sounded alike. "What do you want?"

"You're asking me?" the voice said. "Ready to shell out?"

She gasped, utterly lost as to her answer.

The man continued: "I'm talking plenty if you don't!"

Judy's next words slipped down the speaking tube without conscious volition: "Haven't you done it already?"

The man suddenly grew alarmed. The difference in voice texture penetrated although Judy had clung to the whisper.

"Isn't this Abbey?" the man asked. "Who is it?"

She spoke clearly in her own voice. "I think you have the wrong apartment. There aren't any Abbeys or Ronalds around here." She hung up.

The man might watch the apartment now, or he might think Ronald had rented it for an hour the night before. She could not help that. One thing she knew. There was a man who had something to say. Why? What was his secret? How was Abbey involved?

She went to the window and peered through the draperies. The man was coming down the steps. She caught sight of a bright green fedora and a large plaid checked coat. He glanced up once or twice. She could not distinguish his features at that distance in the night. She tried to memorize the quick way the man walked, his head a trifle preceding his body. He was short and slight.

When she came down to go to the theater, there was no one in sight but the limousine of people who waited for her.

Before leaving she tried to call Ronald. He was not at home and the office telephone echoed in his empty study. Between acts at the play, she tried again.

The show was an opening. It was a gala night. White ermines, minks and jewels were abundant in the audience. One actress wore a costume that Judy had helped Cordelli design. None of this interested her tonight.

During intermissions she searched the people in the lobby. She did not see Ronald's red head. She wondered if Abbey had come. It would be like her to insist on attending this premiere.

Just as the audience was filing back before the third act curtain rose, Judy spied Abbey. She was with a young man, a stranger. She was laughing lightly.

So she had come. She could play while Ronald, whom she professed to love, was working alone somewhere, trying to save his name. Such a violent distaste shook Judy that she felt ill. Her hands were cold and her face was hot as the play went on. The actors said lines she did not hear. The people applauded scenes she did not see. She declined to go on to a night club with the party, and finally induced them to let her go home alone in a taxicab instead of giving their chauffeur the trouble of taking her downtown.

She didn't go home. She gave the driver Ronald's address. He would have to come in sometime. She would wait.

He was not in so she drew her mink coat—she had been able to remove it from storage a month ago—around her shoulders and sat on the lower step of the hall in the dim light of the one feeble lamp. She was almost asleep when she heard a key in the latch.

Her heart beat rapidly and she looked up eagerly. She had no thought that Ronald might find her presence unusual or amusing. He might be in danger. She had news that he should have.

It wasn't Ronald who came in. It was an elderly man who asked her if she had been locked out and suggested that he call the janitor for her. She smiled as she shook her head.

"I'm waiting for a friend."

The man went upstairs in a small lift under the stairway and she was alone again. The clock on a tower somewhere chimed 12 times.

On the last stroke Ronald came. His face was so drawn, his eyes so worried his chin so stern, she drew in her breath. Then he saw her and his eyes widened.

"Judy, has anything happened? Are you in trouble?"

Now that he was here, now that he was all right and she could touch him, her worries seemed foolish.

She wanted to see his apartment, had wanted to for a long time. But she knew he could not ask her up now. It would have been all right. Others did it. But Ronald was in the limelight, the spotlight of scandal was probing into his conduct.

Beside there was Abbey.

"Let's go across the street and have some coffee," he said.

When they were seated: "Something happened, Judy. Want to tell me about it now?"

She related the evening's experience with the man in the green hat. Ronald's face was amazed.

"Are you sure you had the right man?" he asked. "When you locked down, Judy, wasn't there anyone else in sight? Think!"

She shook her head. "No one. I ran to the window right away and looked all around. The man couldn't have gone down the steps. I'm sure of it."

"And he seemed to know Abbey?"

She nodded. Ronald shook his head. "Judy, I'm as mystified as you are."

"Then it isn't the—the party you had arranged to meet."

"No, he's tall and dresses conservatively."

Judy spoke impulsively, placing one slim hand on Ronald's arm, and scarcely noting that he covered it with strong fingers that held it fast. "Ronald, someone is framing you. Have you any idea who it is?"

He nodded. "I can't prove it though. I can't prove anything." He smiled and released her hand. "The man I blame is the tall one with the dark clothes—the one your caller wasn't."

"Is there any way that you can find out about the jurors being fixed?" Judy insisted. "Were they lying? Did someone really do it and blame you?"

He gave a tired laugh. "Someone did it, Judy honey, and the jurors think I'm guilty. They're scared for they took the bribes. They didn't expect to be caught. Why someone would bribe them, and say I did it, I can't fathom, unless the man had a purpose of his own and used me as bait. Maybe he didn't expect it to get out and meant no personal harm to me.

"On the other hand, if it's the tall bozo I've been talking about he wanted to hurt me. But I can't prove a thing. Besides, I can't understand why he went to all of that trouble."

They rode downtown to Judy's apartment. The avenue was nearly deserted. Now and then the rumbling of an elevated train carried across the block. The foghorn blew with dim, mechanical precision for the night had grown misty.

At her door Ronald held Judy's hands.

Then he stooped and kissed her quickly on the lips. "Thank you, Judy. You're grand."

She went inside but she stumbled, for her eyes were blurred by a screen of tears. Once Ronald had kissed madly, possessively, longingly.

Tonight he had kissed her kindly—for gratitude!

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, November 4.

According to the lunar transits, this is to be a day of outstanding liveliness, activity and merriment in the business and private affiliations. Things will move at an exhilarating pace in all directions, with social, romantic and domestic functions claiming much attention and giving joy. It is an auspicious time for the young, the romantic, and the pleasure loving. At the same time, there are portents of intrigues and illicit or sinister matters that might give anxiety or cause deep regret. Be vigilant and discreet.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is are at the threshold of a year of great activity and gratification in the business and private lives. There will be very merry and joyous doings in connection with social, romantic, domestic and artistic functions, with youth and romance having their fling. But dangers also are indicated, so be alert.

A child born on this day may be particularly stimulated and high-keyed in its intellectual as well as emotional and spiritual qualities, but it may have an undercurrent of the subtle, elusive, probably imaginative, eccentric and reactionary. Its fine qualities should be given direction in its early life.

DOROTHY DIX

A Bit of Humor, a Kind Word or Diplomatic Act Often Will Prevent a Breach Which, if Allowed to Go Unmended, Will Lead to Disaster

It is curious how little intelligence we use in dealing with the common, ordinary, everyday problems that confront us and that turn our lives into cinders, ashes and dust.

Before the great tragedies of existence we are helpless. We can but bear the sorrows they bring us with what fortitude we may, but it is not the great griefs that drench the world with woe. It is the little, nagging, picayunish things that are so hard to endure, and these we could nearly always abolish with 2 cents' worth of common sense if we only had gumption enough to use it.

No one will deny, for instance, that the most potent source of unhappiness lies in the domestic relationship. As long as a husband and wife love each other, and as long as they make a peaceful home, all is well with them. It doesn't matter how humble and small the home is, nor hof hard they have to work, they are happy.

And, on the contrary, if a husband and wife are antagonistic and have come to hate each other, and if their home is a place of turmoil and strife, they are miserable, no matter if they live in a place and are smother in luxuries.

Every young couple who get married know that their happiness and well-being depend upon their being able to get along together harmoniously, yet not one in a hundred makes any intelligent effort to do so. They trust being able to hit it off together to luck, and luck has never yet taken the place of purposful, planned endeavor.

No two people with a mentality above that of low-grade morons can be married for even a single month without acquiring a good working knowledge of each other's peculiarities and prejudices and finding out how to get along without friction. But do they do this? Not at all. They won't take the trouble to use the slightest diplomacy in dealing wih each other.

They not only do not sidestep each other's prejudices and peculiarities. They jump all over them, and instead of avoiding subjects of discussion that never fail to bring on a row they drag them out of their hiding places just to start something. There never was a family quarrel that couldn't have been avoided by he use of a little finesse or stopped by a little good humor. If wrecking a home for the sake of a spat isn't the height of idiocy I don't know what's what.

Another affliction which takes the joy out of life for millions of us is having to live in the house for years and years with people who get on our nerves and rub our fur the wrong way; whose every word and act irritates us beyond endurance. Sometimes it is parents and children who are so antagonistic to each other that they live in perpetual conflict. Sometimes it is brothers and sisters who are born enemies. Sometimes it is an in-law who is a firebrand in the house. Yet people go on enduring all this misery having their own natures distorted by secret hate, instead of having enough sense to get up and leave those who are spoiling their lives for them.

Then there is the problem of the philandering husband and the nagging, fretful, discontented wife over which so many barrels of tears are shed. Women ask why, why, WHY do their husbands leave them and run after the Other Woman, when the answer is as plain as the unpowdered noses on their faces. If they had only used one lobe of their brains they would have realized that every wife has to meet competition and keep on cutting bait to hold her husband.

Every husband who has sense enough to be out of a feeble-minded institute knows that he can keep his wife happy and contented and eating out of his hand by-paying her a few compliments and saying a kind word or two to her, yet he doesn't do it. Can you beat that for pure asininity?

Think of all the divorces that could be saved, all the homes that could be preserved, all the mess of scandal that could be avoided if husbands and wives, when they begin to get fed up with each other and feel that they have missed their soudmates, would go and consult a travel agent instead of a lawyer.

Being human, any two people who are thrown together, day after day, over a long period of time are bound to get tired of each other, to bore each other, to long for some change and think how much happier they would be with some one else than they are with each other. They think they have fallen out of love with each other, but they only need to be parted. A railroad or steamship ticket would save ninety-nine divorces out of a hundred.

She glides through basic steps and smart variations—waltz, fox-trot, tango, rhumba—until they're second nature. The result?

By MAX TRELL

Hanid and Knarf wouldn't have thought a thing about it if Mrs. Cuckoo, at nine o'clock sharp, had opened the door of her little apartment in the cucko clock and come out on her front steps and called out nine times, and then gone back again. But she didn't do that at all. Instead, after she called out the hour, she flapped her wings and flew around the playroom, looking very sharply all about her. She finally landed with a little hop on the playroom floor right in front of the two astonished shadow-children.

"My goodness!" Hanid gasped. "What are you doing outside your clock, Mrs. Cuckoo?"

She's Lst a Minute.

"Are you looking for something?" Knarf asked. "Why are you peering so hard?"

"I certainly am looking for something." Mrs. Cuckoo answered. "I've lost a minute."

She flapped her wings and flew.

"A minute!" they both exclaimed in surprise. "You've lost a minute?"

"Yes, it's disappeared right out of the clock. It happened some time this morning. All of a sudden I noticed it was gone. Oh! you can't imagine how upset I am!"

"But why should you be upset?" Hanid said. "A minute isn't so very much."

"You don't understand, my dear. It's a very serious thing. When you're in charge of a clock the way I am, you can't lose a single minute. Just look what's happened! Now that the minute is lost, the clock is a minute late. It isn't running on time any more. It's slow."

"What will you do?" asked Hanid.

"I don't know," Mrs. Cuckoo sigher as she let her wings droop. "I really don't know. This has never happened to me before. As long as I've managed this clock, I've never lost a minute."

"I have an idea," Knarf suddenly exclaimed.

Mrs. Cuckoo glanced at him. "What's your idea, Knarf?"

"Well," said Knarf, "I think you can borrow a minute from someone."

"Borrow a minute?"

He nodded. "I've often heard people say: 'Have you a minute to spare?' I think if you can find someone who has a minute to spare, you can borrow it for your clock. Then everything will be all right again."

"H'mm! That sounds like a good idea," said Mrs. Cuckoo. "But whom shall we find who has a minute to spare?".

Eire Continues Policy Of Dividing Up Land Though It Proves Costly

DUBLIN, Eire, November 3. — (C. P.).— Although the Irish Banking Commission report may induce a more cautious rate of progress in future, little likelihood is seen here of the government adopting the recommendation that the compulsory powers of the Land Commission to acquire land for distribution among landless men should be terminated.

The present legal postion is that the Land Commission can take practically any land in the country and split into small holdings for the benefit of landless men. Former owners are compensated by the issue of land bonds.

The objection of the Banking Commission to this system is that it is increasing the liability of the State, already heavily burdened, and that it make extension of credit to a landowner a hazardous venture.

From a political point of view, however, it would be well nigh impossible for any Irish government to agree on the slowing up of land division, especially when 500,000 persons are awaiting for land—250,000 who have no land at present and another 250,000 who are living on congested holdings of a couple of acres each.

This is despite the enormous strides made since Land Purchase was introduced by the British government. For the past threee years the Land Commission under the influence of the De Valera administration has divided land at the rate of 100,000 acres a year but it was officially stated this rate of progress cannot be maintained.

So many of the large farms have already been split up, the commission must now tackle the smaller ones which are much more difficult to distribute owing to the number of applicants to be satisfied. In fact, in some parts of the country, the commission has had to re-acquire land it had already distributed and transfer some of the tenants to other districts to relieve congestion.

The magnitude of the problem of land division in Eire can best be realized from the estimates that it costs the States £600 ($2,916) to settle one landless man on a new farm. Transferring a family from the Irish-speaking areas of Gaeltacht in the west to the rich lands of Meath costs £900 ($4,374).

Union Nationale Regime Takes 2 Seats

MONTREAL, Nov. 3.—(CP)—Two more by-elections victories were marked down for Quebec's Union Nationale government today, but over one of them loomed the shadow of a possible contestation.

The slenderness of Louis Fitch's win in Montreal St. Louis brought from Raoul Trepanier, his Liberal-Democrat opponent, an indication that he would demand a recount if the official tabulation backed up the unofficial count from yesterday's balloting that gave the Montreal lawyer a 69-vote margain.

"The fight is not over yet," Trepanier said last night after the figures were in from a stormy day of voting that saw a score of arrests, including that of one election official in the big city district.

Gain From Liberals.

While Gerin just held the seat for his party, the St. Louis result meant a gain from the Liberals, Major opposition group in the legislative assembly. Peter Bercovitch had represented the riding at Quebec as a Liberal for the previous 22 years.

The constituency was opened by the resignation of Bercovitch to contest the federal Cartier riding vacated by the death of S. W. Jacobs, veteran Liberal. The Stanstead vacancy came about through resignation of Rouville Beaudry, who said he was "disillusioned" with his party's government.

Result of the voting had no effect on the balance of power in the House. It boosted the Union Nationale representation to 74 seats and left the Liberals with 11. Remainder of the 90-seat chamber is made up of Nationalists, the five-man group that broke away from the administration party last year.

MORE ABOUT—
Blairton

lar industrial axis of which Erie, Pennsylvania, was the opposite. That was when Blairton ore was carried over its own railway to what is now known as Trent Bridge, unloaded onto scows and hauled by boats up the Trent River to Hastings, through its lock and on to Rice Lake and finally to the busy wharf at Harwood. There the ore was dumped on to cars again and taken by rail to Cobourg where it was loaded into the big Lake Ontario boats and transported to the United States. It was expensive freightage, a disability that could be endured so long as competitive fields remained undiscovered. But, even until then the carrying charges from Blairton to Erie were excessive, something like four dollars a ton, it was said, and when when iron was discovered along the north shore of Michigan, up in the Duluth country, the Belmont deposits were thrust into the background, totally eclipsed. Gradually the industry at the mines slowed down, the working crews were dispersed, houses fell vacant, and at length they were sold and dismantled and sent off to the west.

The two steam engines were sold, the railway was scrapped, the mining machinery was tossed on to the market, but the deposits of iron remain only scratched on surface, for all the tonnage that was sold in the United States. Sheep graze on the knoll that once was marked off with streets and houses, and children of the neighborhood use stones that lie about from old foundations, setting them out in rows that outline the houses and the rooms of children's imagination at play.

Brief as it was, it is a long story to piece together, the building of the railway from Cobourg to Harwood, and incidentally, perhaps, across Rice Lake to Ashburnham, and Peterborough and Bridgenorth. Of course that was a tangential line to the course of the old steamers like the "Isaac Butts" down the lake to Hastings and Trent Bridge. Think, too, of the labor and cost of getting small steam engines and mining machinery by rail and boat finally to Blairton before the C.P.R. was conceived. The rest of this account is mostly a series of flashbacks, gleaned from authoritative sources, and fitting together a picture of the Blairton of 1867 and in succeeding years.

Blairton, by the way, is known to comparatively few people of this city and county. It is about five miles east of Marmora, and if you know its skeleton buildings such as the old railway station, you can see it from No. 7 highway, at the west end of Crowe Lake.

Organized In 1866

In the autumn of 1866 the importance of the deposits of iron ore at Crow Lake was brought to the attention of capitalists interested in the iron trade in the United States. After testing the iron, they offered to take part in the purchase of the lands in the amalgamation of the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway Company and the Marmora Iron Company, which was effective in January, 1867.

Of $600,00 0capital, $430,000 was supplied by Americans, principally from Pittsburgh, and $130,000 by Edward Burstall of Quebec. The new company, called the Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora Railway and Mining Company, began operations in the following month, February, 1867, with the expectation that by June ore could be sent over the railway from Blairton. It was in that same Spring of 1867 that the Madoc "gold rush" took place.

The Cobourg World of that spring reported that by the end of June the conveyance of iron ore to Cobourg wharves would be commenced. "Three members of the C.P. and M.R. and M. Co.—Messrs. Blair, Shoenberger and Butts—have lately, in company with the managing director, spent some days at the mine, and are well satisfied with the quality of the ore dug out and the prospect of an exceedingly large field."

The Ottawa correspondent of The Canadian News, London, England, wrote on August 19, 1867 . . . "The iron mines at Marmora (presumably Blairton) are progressing well. I hear that about 150 French Canadians have been brought up from Quebec to work in the mines, making the total number of miners now engaged about 300. The ore is found to be inexhaustible. Thirty car loads, or about 400 tons a day, are sent to Cobourg, give freight to about fifty vessels, which will be regularly employed."

The Cobourg Sentinel in August published a news item that "large shipments of the ore have been made last week and this week, under the superintendence of Charles Elliott and Adam Holem, the contractors for its shipment. On Thursday the 25th, the "Mary Taylor," Captain Ewart, had the honor of taking the first cargo, 262 tons. The largest shipment was on the "John L. Gross," 834 tons, and in all a total of upwards of 3,000 tons of ore have been shipped to Erie, Pa."

Some of the Residents.

A directory of 1869 described Blairton as being 40 miles east of Peterborough and having a population of 500. Some of the residents at that time were: Roger Bates, first postmaster, and agent of the C.P. and M.R.R.; W. W. Armstrong, baker, father of W. J. Armstrong of Campbellford and S. R. Armstrong of Peterborough; Thomas Bell, carpenter; Dr. J. Brown; William Duff, shoemaker; Thomas Featherston, cabinet maker; Mrs. Given, grocer; Rev. William Halstead of the Wesleyan Methodist Church; William Leach, butcher; Thomas R. Learmouth, general merchant; Andrew McBride, grocer; James Meikle, general merchant; Edmund Powell, butcher; Miss Mary Powell, teacher; Miss Elizabeth Rea, teacher; D. D. Scott, livery stable; William Shaw, clothier; Robert Sloan, general merchant; John Turner, general merchant; Gilbert Weller, hotel keeper; Levi Whitmarsh, livery stable; Dr. D. Wilson; William Wynn, builder.

The post office at Blairton was opened on August 1, 1867, with Roger Bates as postmaster.

The Blairton iron mine was worked by the company until 1873. In 1883 the whole of the property of the company, including railways and rolling stock, mines, furnaces and works, dwellings at Blairton and Marmora, and about 30,000 acres of land, was sold under a court order to Thomas P. Pearce of Marmora.

June 26, 1874—Require $100,000 to finish railway to Mud (Chemong) Lake, it extended from Hiawatha on Rice Lake to Peterborough; $40,000 guaranteed by Peterborough bylaw; $60,000 can be realized from product of mines when ore on hand is sold, 25,000 tons; directors decide to carry on mine and let Rice Lake bridge rest.

July 3, 1874—From directors' report; spent $226,603 on railway Rice Lake to Peterborough and Mud Lake. Up to end of 1873, the sum of $360,000 was spent on railway; $400,000 dead capital between Harwood and Rice Lake.

Vice-Regal Visit.

September 3, 1874.—Earl Dufferin, Governor-General, and Lady Dufferin, visit Blairton, guests of Colonel Chambliss; made trip from Cobourg by way of Harwood.

Nov. 7, 1874.—Railway shut down for winter.

April, 1875, at Blairton.—Roger Bates, postmaster; John Cannon, stage driver, from Norwood to Marmora, calling at Havelock and Blairton; mail delivery Tuesdays, Thursday and Saturdays.

April 27, 1875, at the hearing of the protest of the election of Dr. John O'Sullivan, Conservative, Peterborough, "My particular friends at Blairton were Mr. Bell, W. W. Armstrong, B. W. Turner and Dr. Payne." Dr. O'Sullivan was a candidate in East Peterborough.

May 21, 1875—Railway reopened.

June 4, 1875—Work suspended; very little this season.

Sept. 3, 1875—Man named Stovell given liberty to make experiment of smelting ore at the mines with petroleum. The "Isaac Butts" not running regularly this season (from Harwood to Trent Bridge). . . No ore delivered from the mines because no market for it. Wood brought from The Narrows (Trent Bridge) to Harwood. As to stoppage of trains between Harwood and Cobourg, they will be run as long as any business can be found for them. One of the Harwood (lumber) mills and others may close soon; they have 4,000,000 feet to ship; plenty of freight for some time (that was to Cobourg), provided the lumber can be sold in the U.S. market; but as that market is over-stocked, a suspension of shipments for the remainder of the season will appear reasonable.

Pinch of Depression.

September, 1875.—Report from annual meeting of the mining and railway company held in their rooms at Cobourg; W. Irvine Stanton elected president; Isaac Butts, Jr., vice-pres.; Col. W. P. Chambliss, sec.-treas.; largest stockholders deeply interested in iron trade now stagnant. Money tight; stringency in every branch of industry; out of directors' power to raise funds to proceed with railway work (presumably the Mud Lake end). Purchases for railway now piled in company's yard; large staff at mines taking out ore 18 months, but could not sell a pound during that time; less than 17,000 tons at mine for shipment; total value of material on hand about $160,000. Finish Peterborough link as soon as we can.

July 21, 1876—No iron ore received at Harwood so far this season.

August, 1876—Company sells 4,000 tons of ore.

Towards the End.

In 1882 Blairton's population had receded to 350. T. C. Caskey was postmaster; W. J. Armstrong, general marchant; John F. Purdy, a hotelkeeper; and John Weston, a blacksmith.

In 1892, the population was 200; Methodist Church, school, sawmill, G.N.W. and C.P.R. telegraphs; T. C. Caskey, postmaster and general merchant.

In 1906 Blairton's population was 50; T. C. Caskey was still postmaster, and L. C. Caskey was the blacksmith of the rapidly dwindling place.

Tot Of 18 Months Knows Alphabet

TORONTO, Nov. 3 (CP)—Eighteen-months-old Lillian May Bobson of Toronto was a claimant today to the title of infant prodigy, Dr. Alan Brown, Toronto child specialist, said the child "is definitely in the genius class."

Lillian, brown-eyed daughter of Ukrainian parents, gave an example of her skill last night by spelling out each letter of a front-page newspaper headline with clearness and confidence. She named a dozen objects in English and Ukrainian without a mistake.

The child, her mother said, walked at 10 months and shortly after pointed at various objects and asked, in Ukrainian, "What's that?" The baby shows a preference for the language of her parents, which is used about the home, but Mrs. Bobson said Lillian learned the English equivalents of words just as rapidly.

Her first interest in the English alphabet came when she asked about the letters on a set of building blocks. Her mother named the letters and was surprised a few days later to hear Lillian repeating them with accuracy.

Within a month the baby knew the English alphabet and now picks them out with unfailing accuracy no matter where they are. Mrs. Bobson said her daughter was "a perfectly normal baby in every respect."

What Happened To Police Informer

Get Wise to Constipation!

When you're constipated, it's a great temptation to be satisfied with quick relief. But physics may become a habit. And they don't keep constipation from returning. It's so much better to get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat what most people do, chances are the only thing the matter is you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean how much you eat. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

What to do? Eat a little Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. This crunchy toasted cereal is not only rich in "bulk"—it also contains the natural intestinal tonic, vitamin B1. All-Bran is made by Kellogg in London, Ontario. Sold by every grocer.

Air Conditioning Insures Comfort

Specially designed for use in radiator-heated homes, a unit is available which provides controlled humidification, circulation and filtration, according to E. C. Williams, manager of the air conditioning division, Canadian General Electric Company.

"The installation of this unit, known as the "Moistaire" assures the owner of a radiator-heated home of increased comfort, better health conditions, longer life of furniture and furnishings, and less atmospheric dust," stated Mr. Williams. "The circulation of air through main living quarters tends to maintain even temperatures from floors to ceiling, and also effectively to remove smoke from those rooms."

This air conditioning unit is usually installed in the boiler room adjacent to the furnace, it is pointed out. A tempering coil built into the unit is connected to the supply and return headers of the boiler, thus providing heat to the air passing through the unit to assist in evaporating an adequate amount of water for humidification purposes. Without such heating, latent heat of evaporation would be drawn from the air itself with a resultant objectionable cooling effect.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Christmas Fruit Cakes 'Penny Plain Tuppence Rich'

A little brown-eyed lady who has one of the smallest budgets I know of to extend for groceries for four people, told me how she buys provisions for her Christmas cakes, puddings, mincemeat and cookies.

In November every week end when she makes up her grocery list she leaves out her usual 1 dozen oranges and replaces them in her breakfast menus with the tomato juice she canned herself in September. With this saving she buys two lbs. fruit or nuts, dates or raisins or currants or nuts. By the month end this amounts to eight lbs. Christmas cookery ingredients which she makes do for all her baking.

The principle of ordering small amounts at a time is so good it will appeal to many of us who would otherwise feel the pinch if all the supplies were bought at once.

This same lady came to me originally for a recipe for an economical fruit cake, which you will find listed below.

But we are bringing you some nice changes this year, the Christmas Fruit Cake winning our approval because of the elusive and certain fresh flavor, no doubt imparted by the 1½ cups pineapple juice it calls for, and the appearance, for the 3 lbs. currants do predominate, but the batter being rather lighter than most fruit cakes makes a delightful medium to set off all the fruit. I like it very much and hope you folks will too.

Christmas Fruit Cake

Two lbs. raisins, ½ lb. mixed peel, 1½ lbs. white sugar, 1 lb each butter, dates, flour (3 packed measuring cups), 3 lbs. currants, ½ lb. blanched almonds, 1 cup orange juice, 1 tablespoon rose water, 1 teaspoon soda, 1½ cups pineapple juice drained from canned crushed or sliced pineapple, 1 dozen eggs, 1 teaspoon mace, 2 teaspoons allspice, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, ½ teaspoon cloves. Line the cake pans with 3 layers of paper, the top one buttered. Prepare the fruit and dredge it with part of the flour. Cream the butter well, add the eggs a few at a time, beating well between additions, sprinkle in the sugar and beat these three until sugar is dissolved. Sift together the spices, flour and soda, and sift them into the butter and egg mixture, then beat the whole for 10 or 14 minutes. Add the fruit. Bake in oven of 350 deg. Fahr. for between 3½ to 4 hours. Watch the page nearer Christmas time for Almond Paste for this. When done let cool, then wrap in waxed paper, then in clean tea towels, then in brown paper and store for at least a month before using.

Christmas Light Fruit Cake

One cup each butter, sugar, almonds, mixed red and green candied cherries, 5 eggs, 2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon each baking powder, grated lemon rind, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ½ cup candied citron peel, 1 cup almonds. Cut the candied cherries into thin slices and slice the citron peel very thinly. Dredge these with about 3 tablespoons flour, so that the pieces of fruit will not stick together. Blanch the almonds, cut them into thin strips, and dry out and brown in slow oven. Cream the butter, add the sugar gradually, and cream until the mixture is smooth and fluffy. Add the beaten eggs. Add the remainder of the flour (the 2 cups minus what was used for dredging the fruit), sifted with the baking powder, folding these in gradually. Add the grated lemon rind and juice. Add the fruits and nuts, mix well, and turn into 2 loaf pans, lined with white paper and well buttered. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1½ hours, having shelf at centre of oven to prevent bottom of cake browning too soon. Wrap and store as for Christmas Fruit cake above.

Economy Christmas Cake

One lb. seeded raisins, 1½ cups water, 1½ cups brown sugar, ¼ cup butter, 2½ cups flour, 1 teaspoon each baking powder, soda, cinnamon, ½ teaspoon each salt, cloves, allspice, 1 cup nut meats (almonds, or walnuts are preferable), ½ cup finely sliced citron peel, 2 eggs. Wash the raisins and cook them with the water and sugar 5 minutes. Add the butter and set aside to cool. Sift the flour, baking powder, salt and spices together. Break or slice the nutmeats and thinly slice the citron. Then add them to the flour mixture. Beat the eggs until very light and fluffy, about 5 minutes. Add the raisins mixture to the eggs, then the flour mixture and beat all very well. Pour into well buttered tube pan and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 1½ hours. This makes a 3-lb. cake. Improves with keeping if well wrapped. To make the cake darker and moister you may substitute ½ cup molasses for ½ cup of the sugar.

Royal Plum Pudding

(A plum pudding that contains plums!)

Three cups finely chopped suet, 1 cup each brown sugar, sultana raisins, canned plums (stoned and halved), ½ cup thinly sliced citron, ½ cup chopped mixed peel, 1 teaspoon each mixed spices, grated nutmeg, salt, 4 cups soft bread crumbs, 3 cups flour, 5 eggs, ½ cup fermented raspberry or strawberry syrup. Mix together the suet, sugar and bread crumbs. Prepare the fruits and with one cup of the flour dredge them well. Measure and sift together the flour and spices, and combine them with the suet mixture then add the well beaten eggs and fruit juice. Last add the floured fruit and mix very thoroughly. Pour into greased large moulds (we recommend the acquisition of proper pudding moulds with fitted covers for they can be used for moulding jellies, too). Steam 6 hours.

Economy Carrot Pudding

One cup each grated raw potato, carrot, chopped suet, brown sugar, sultana raisins, currants, 1 teaspoon soda, 2 cups flour, ½ teaspoon each salt, cinnamon, cloves, ½ cup walnuts broken are optional. Sift together the flour, soda, salt and spices. Mix these with all the remaining ingredients. Steam for 6 hours in pan three-quarters full and serve like plum pudding. Lemon Sauce, plus hard sauce, topped with a whole cherry are recommended. This pudding costs about 20 cents minus the sauce and is very good. Not so heavy and filling as plum pudding after a turkey dinner.

Watch the page every week now for Christmas cookery items.

TWO LIVER RECIPES

These will make a welcome change in your meat course repertory.

Ground Liver Patties—

But at least 2 lbs. baby beef liver—this is to be used for two dinners. Pour boiling salted water over it and let it simmer just long enough for the blood to coagulate. Remove the tough membrane and skin. Then put the liver through the fine knife of the food chopper. Season it with a little salt and onion juice. Moisten with a little of the water in which the liver was simmered, flavor with more salt and pepper if necessary, shape into patties, wrap each patty in a strip of partially cooked side bacon, fasten with a tooth pick, and place under hot broiler to heat through and make bacon crisp.

Baked Tomatoes Stuffed With Liver.

Mix about 1½ cups ground liver with ½ cup thin cream sauce, and season with salt, and onion juice. Scoop centre out of firm tomatoes (at this time of year it is often necessary to use underripe or green tomatoes) and fill the centres with the creamed liver. Bake in buttered pan at 350 deg. Fahr, about 20 minutes until tomatoes are tender.

Barber's Dream Realized by Pier

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Nov. 3.—(CP).—When Gloucester's new $1,200,000 fish pier was dedicated the dream of a waterfront barber came true.

Fifteen years ago, Everett R. Jodrey, now engaged in the net and twine business, saw the customer mugs in his barber shop gathering dust as one by one the Gloucester fishing fleet continued to make more and more use of the Boston Fish Pier.

"Why not a fish pier in Gloucester," he asked himself and his friends. Not long afterward, a committee of public-spirited citizens was formed and for almost 10 years battled obstacles to achieve success.

With the two racing schooners, Gertrude L. Thebaud of Gloucester, and Bluenose of Lunenburg, N. S., rigged in gay attire as a background, the pier was dedicated as more than 10,000 persons looked on. Among the speakers was one-time barber Jodrey.

TAKE THE LEAD OUT OF YOUR LEGS

Get Oxygen in Your Blood and You'll Get the Pep that Sends You Bounding Up the Stairs

People who smother to death die because oxygen has been completely cut off from them. Just as surely you are slowly smothering if your blood lacks red corpuscles. Red corpuscles are your oxygen-carriers. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin gets pale, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves may become jittery—you tire quickly—feel depressed.

What you need is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These world-famous pills help make more and better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of your blood. Warkworth A.Y.P.A. Opens Season With SuccesfulHallowe'en Frolic

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARKWORTH, Nov. 2. — A pleasant event took place Monday evening in the basement of the Presbyterian church, when a masquerade Hallowe'en party was held. The basement was prettily decorated for the occasion with streamers of crepe paper and Jack O'Lanterns, placed around the room added to the Hallowe'en spirit. The costumes caused much merriment.

Before unmasking the merry-makers marched around the hall to music and prizes were awarded for the various costumes. The lady's first prize going to Mrs. C. Meiklejohn. Miss Olga McDonald, dressed as a boy was awarded first prize for the best boy. Comic prizes were won by Mrs. Henry Carlaw and Don Beatty.

A ghost was around all evening and her identity was not disclosed until the room was darkened and a thrilling story was told by Miss Annie Grant.

A short musical program was enjoyed and several games were played after which a delicious Hallowe'en lunch was served consisting of pumpkin pie, cookies, cocoa and candy, by the committee in charge.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

Life, like war, is a series of mistakes; and he is not the best Christian nor the best general who makes the fewest false steps. He is the best who wins the most splendid victories by the retrieval of mistakes." —F. W. Robertson.

Dear Friends:

What torture so many go through when they make a mistake. They belabor themselves, they get melancholy, they have remorse, and all this is good in its way, but it can be vastly overdone.

There is not one of us who would like the light of publicity to shine on everything we do or have done. We may not have deliberately meant to do thus and so, but we know the mistake was made and so we suffer in loss of self-esteem.

But, after we have suffered, let us use these mistakes in lifting ourselves up by making stepping stones of them. What I might think was a big mistake for me, would be less than nothing to another.

What you might think a big mistake for you, may seem of little consequence to me. It's all in the way it affects the inner part of us. It gets us down, but it shouldn't keep us down.

And we either learn from these faults, or we go on doing them over and over again, until they become part of our life. Even the ones who try to live the best of lives, fall from grace every so often.

Not one of us is infallible. You may fall in one way, but who am I to criticize when I may fall in another way? Who are you to lift your voice against another, while you are trying to cover your own failures?

The funny thing about mistakes is that they seem to trip us up when we least expect it. We go sailing along minding our own business and suddenly our foot slips and down we go.

Yet, without our knowing it, we must have let our guard down else this would never have happened. And it is so hard to keep on guard all the time.

And sometimes it is even hard to know what is definitely right or worng, unless we examine it closely. We all know that some people seem to get away with this or that, and no one thinks the worse of them for it.

Whereas, maybe you or I doing exactly the same thing, would condemn ourselves, and be condemned by others. It's hard to usderstand alright.

But sometime in the past, we have set a standard for ourselves and, without our saying a word about it others have sensed this in us, and that is why they seem so hard when we let our foot slip.

What we must do is forget the conduct of others and remember what is best for ourselves. And anything that causes us remorse, or anguish of mind is not for us to do, no matter how lightly it may be done by others.

It is far better (altho' far harder) for us to discipline ourselves, than to be disciplined by the world. Better loneliness with peace of mind, than company with regrets and heart-burnings.

So, if your mistakes make you squirm inside, if they come back to torture and hurt you, make up your mind you are not going to suffer like this again.

You cannot be perfect, but you can be as perfect as possible. And if your mistakes do nothing else, they ought to make you more tolerant of others.

"He that is without sin amongst you, let him cast the first stone." He that has never fallen, that has never made mistakes he or she bitterly regretted, where are they? And just as you wouldn't like yours broadcast to the world, never broadcast another's. Have some compassion.

Your Friend, ROBERTA.

Branch Notes

LAKEFIELD BRANCH

The A. Y. P. A. of St. John the Baptist Anglican church, Lakefield, held one of the most successful teas of the Hallowe'en season in the Parish Hall here on Saturday afternoon last, when they swelled their funds by the satisfactory sum of over $32.00.

The Parish Hall looked most attractive in festive Hallowe'en garb with the orange glow from leering Jack-o-lanters casting soft shadows about the room, where Hallowe'en figures and stooks of corn combined to form an artistic setting for the tea-tables.

During the afternoon considerable interest was aroused by a fish-pond for the youngsters and a pair of mystery cakes. Guesses as to the number of raisins in each cake were sold at the rate of 3 guesses for 5 cents and prizes were won by Mrs. T. Junkin and Miss Eva Hendren. There were 116 raisins in one cake and 100 in the other. Guesses were sold on a jar containing black and orange jelly beans, the prize going to Miss Amy Watson, who was nearest to the correct number. The jar contained 129 jelly beans.

Tea-cup reading by Mrs. J. Twist and Mrs. O. A. Langley proved popular, and a booth for the sale of novelties and candy was well patronized.

Rev. and Mrs. H. R. Howden received the guests. Tea was served by Mrs. George Hutt, Mrs. Milford Hampton, Mrs. Darcy Wilson, and Misses Kathleen Mose, Elsie Chappell, Nellie Stenner, Marian Twist and Madeline Morin.

Mrs. Clifford Hurl and Miss Odelle Watson were in charge of the novelties and candy. Mrs. Percy Hill and Miss Helena Hopkins arranged the guessing contests and Miss Vera Bennington and Miss Ruby Marsden superintended the fish-pond.

S.A. Assemblymen Turn Women Down

CAPE TOWN, Nov. 3—(CP).—It was a light-hearted and amusing day, but a sad one for the women who still found themselves at a disadvantage in suing their husbands for divorce or separation. So wrote a reporter of The Cape Argus describing sittings of the Union of South Africa parliament. The report proceeds:

The Assembly was unkind to its women members, and to women in general. After three hours of unconstructive, and often completely futile debate, it killed, for this session at least, a Bill which it had heartily approved in principel a few weeks ago.

This was Mrs. L. A. B. Reitz' Matrimonial Causes Jurisdiction Bill, a short and simple measure designed to place wives on at least an equal footing with their husbands in bringing actions for divorce or judicial separation.

Under the law as it stands, such actions must be taken in the court of the matrimonial domicile, which amounts to the Supreme Court of the province in which the husband is living. Mrs. Reitz sought to allow a wife to sue her husband in the court of the province in which she was living. By this she hoped to relieve deserted wives of the necessity of following their husbands, in the legal sense, about the country, and also of the difficulty and expense of deciding by action which was the competent court in doubtful cases.

There was nothing very complicated about this. General Smuts (Minister of Justice) and almost every other barrister in the House realized that the law operated unfairly against a wife, and welcomed the effort to even matters up. The House accepted the second reading of the Bill without a division.

Mrs. (Rev.) H. R. Howden and Miss Pat Earnshaw were in charge of general arrangements.

The tea was well attended during the afternoon.

We Noticed

...Everything points to a colorful bejewelled season ... with your hair up this winter, your ears will be a requisite part of your charm. You'll collect earrings...dozens of them...to complement your hair and make you feel proud and fragile.

✧ ✧ ✧

...The higher the hair, the barer the neck, and thus an era of ornamentation dawns. Collars and necklines choke the throat, pie-frill collarettes frame the face ...your ears, by the way, will rarely be minus earrings.

✧ ✧ ✧

...Up go the sleeves, too, to cooperate in framing the neck. Leg-o'-mutton sleeves, straight out of the attic, shrug upwards at the shoulders. Not only are sleeves high, but they're long... decorously hiding arms down to the knuckles.

Explains Work Among New Canadians

Guest speaker at the November Missionary meeting of Murray Street Baptist Church on Wednesday evening was Mrs. Nellie Ruttan of the Baptist Mission, Oshawa.

In an interesting story of her work among the new Canadians in Oshawa, Mrs. Ruttan stated that the main object of the Mission was to create an interest among the new comers in Canada, in the flag, and in the new life. Church services are conducted in a little Mission House in their own language, but in the Sunday School, the speaker said, lessons are taught in English. Since this work started in 1928, the Sunday School attendance has grown from 12 to about 60 children.

Mrs. Ruttan also displayed samples of work done by the children in their Kindergarten, which she conducts once a week. The need of clothing, and kindergarten material for children, was also stressed.

Mrs. H. H. Graham, president, presided at the meeting, and the opening prayer was led by Mrs. L. J. Pettit and followed by a Scripture reading by Miss Emma Aldridge. Rev. J. Sutcliffe gave a pleasing solo, with Mrs. F. M. Somerville as pianist. An announcement was made that bales for the North and the West will be packed on November 22.

Honorary Writer In Women's Club

WINNIPEG, Nov. 3—(CP).—London has its Crosby Hall, New York its International House, and if plans of the University Women's Club materialize, Winnipeg will have its Ralph Connor House as a club and residence for college women.

When it was announced recently that the famous old stone and brick mansion on Armstrong's Point had been taken over by the city for taxes, the University Club thought the fates had at last opened a way. For 20 years the members have raised money labelled "club house account," looking forward to the day when they would have their own home.

The house at 54 West Gate, built by the late Dr. C. W. Gordon, "Ralph Connor" to his readers, could be rented from the city for a reasonable sum. It would provide a place for meetings and bring in a revenue from dining and tea rooms and from rented suites and rooms on the bedroom floors.

Club executives have examined their bank account, found $2,200 in the house account, which would be used to furnish downstairs as reception room, lounge and office. Already 100 of the 220 members on last year's membership roll have signed up to pay the increased fee of $10 to make the venture possible.

Trinity Tea Is Popular Affair

Maybe it's the fall flowers that make everything look so bright and gay, or maybe it's the brisk breezes that make a charming living-room the ideal rendezvous, but certainly this is the time for teas, and the untoward success that has attended the large number of them on the season's calendar is proof of it.

Yesterday saw another delightful and popular affair added to the long list, the tea and sale of home-made cooking which was staged in the lovely home of Mrs. H. Martin on Monaghan road under the auspices of the Trinity Women's Missionary Auxiliary.

The large number of guests were welcomed by the hostess, Mrs. Martin, and the president, Mrs. S. Carver, and were ushered into the drawing-room by Mrs. Morley Lyle, Mrs. Robert Neill, and Mrs. Thomas Barrie.

A low blue bowl filled with Briarcliff roses and flanked by tall pink tapers in silver holders centred the lace-covered table in the dining-room, where tea was poured by Mrs. G. S. Easton, Mrs. W. C. Switzer, Mrs. J. A. Bannister and Mrs. M. A. Morrison. Tea assistants were Mrs. J. W. Pierce, Mrs. Archie Gates, Mrs. Clara Hughes, Mrs. A. W. Pratten, Mrs. Leggon, Miss Moore and Mrs. Fred Skitch.

The home-made cooking table was convened by Mrs. A. Fife, who was assisted by Mrs. Thomas Sargent, Mrs. R. MacMorran and Miss Carver.

Two thousand forty children in 102 teams took part in a relay run in Tashkent, Uzbekistan.

Mrs. Scott Is Hostess To I.O.D.E. Chapter

Mrs. H. R. Scott, Geraldine avenue, was hostess to the members of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I. O. D. E., on Wednesday evening when the November meeting was held with a splendid attendance.

The regent, Mrs. H' Keefer, presided. Reports were brought in regarding the plans for the kitchenette at the Y.W.C.A. which the chapter is equipping, and of a bridge tournament which has been organized, and is to be played for during the coming months. Plans were completed for the annual Christmas tea and bazaar which is to be held in the greeen room of the Y.W.C.A. on Saturday, December 3. At this tea the draw will be made for the merchandise at several Peterborough stores, prizes being to the value of $50, $10 and $5. The stores sponsoring the draw are Richard Hall, Warne's Jewelry, Belleghem's, Grant and Loucks and Selkirk's Men's Shop.

Several members volunteered to act as canvassers for the Red Cross campaign, and as taggers for the Legion Poppy Day. Donations were voted to the Red Cross relief for northern fire sufferers, and the northern school adopted by the chapter.

The membership list was extended to include several new members whose names have been on the waiting list for some time. Seven new members were voted in.

A report from the provincial executive outlining the different phases of the work of interest to the chapter was read by Miss M. Hicks. Mrs. Al. Sharpe's group was in charge of refreshments, and the appreciation of the chapter members to the hostess, Mrs. Scott, was expressed by Mrs. R. White.

American tourists spent $40,000,000 in Mexico last year.

With The Girl Guides

Ghosts and goblins have had full reign over all companies and packs this week, all having had parties instead of meetings.

There was a good turnout to church parade last Sunday. Second company will parade this Sunday to the Cathedral, and an invitation was extended to Mrs. Whalon to accompany us, which she accepted. Plans for Armistice parade are as in previous years, except the Brownies will not parade this year. This, of course, does not apply to their leaders.

Guides who are tagging for Poppy Day, get your boxes on Friday after school at the Legion Hall, and don't forget, bring draw tickets in on Monday. Brownies' mothers and friends, keep November 10, 7 p.m., free for the social evening in All Saints' Sunday School. We want to meet every mother.

"THE SCRIBE."

Even Marriages Mark Great Trek

JOHANNESBURG, Nov. 3—(CP).—Even weddings are affected by the Voortrekker fever—in anticipation of the Boer pioneer centenary in December.

A young couple, aged 21 and 16, who were married in the Johannesburg magistrate's court, left in a "carriage and four." The grandparents of both bride and bridegrooms had set their hearts on their grandchildren being married in the old Voortrekker manner, in which a "carriage and four" were indispensable.

If You Are Run Down Or Depressed, You Need

Haliborange

Vitamins A, C and D

IF you catch cold easily and have a tendency to get run down and depressed during the winter, you need Haliborange. Haliborange is rich in the three essential vitamins A, C and D, which you need to restore your vitality and build resistance to winter ailments. It is made of Halibut Liver Oil and the juice of fresh oranges, treated by the Allenbury process. No fishy taste or odour. Its orange flavour is delicious. Cod Liver Oil is good and Halibut Liver Oil is better, but the combination of Halibut Liver Oil (vitamins A and D) and Orange Juice (vitamin C) in Haliborange is best of all.

Try Haliborange Free

Buy a 5-oz. bottle of Haliborange with the free sample attached. Try the sample for tasting. Then, if you are not absolutely satisfied with its taste, return the 5-oz. bottle to your druggist and he will refund the full purchase price of 75c. The 5-oz. bottle contains about two weeks' treatment.

Deer Breaks Its Back

STRATFORD, Ont., Nov. 3—(CP)—A four-year-old buck deer which hurdled a fence on the McKone farm about a mile east of Stratford early to-day and broke its back when it stumbled after the jump, had to be shot by County Constable Archie Mulford. The deer cleared the wire fence, but evidently lost its balance after making the hurdle and tumbled into a deep ditch. The animal weighed about 175 pounds. The carcass was taken to the Perth County Old People's Home.

Bewdley School Stages Contest

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BEWDLEY, Nov. 3.—Miss L. McBride, teacher, and her pupils entertained a number of visitors in the class room at a pleasant Hallowe'en party. The room was prettily decorated for the occasion and a program had been arranged, with a short Red Cross meeting during the hour.

Most of the children were in fancy costume and presented a weird assembly. Prizes were won in this order: Murray Manley, Arleigh McAllister, Shirley Halligan and Barbara Halligan.

Candy and apples were passed and after the games dainty refreshments of cookies, pumpkin pie, coffee were served.

At the close, Rev. Mr. Whatmough, a guest, conveyed the appreciation of the visitors for the afternoon to Miss McBride and her pupils. Other guests included Mrs. Frank Bray, Mrs. Harry Bray, Mrs. Will Gordon, Mrs. Cliff Manley, Mrs. Harold McAllister, Mrs. H. Stinson, Mrs. H. Goss, Mrs. Hibbard, Mrs. J. Hibbard, Mrs. Strong, Mrs. Halleran, Mrs. G. Byers, Mrs. J. Ryan, Mrs. R. Cornelius, Mrs. H. Graham, Mrs. H. Bamsey, Mrs. K. Halstead, Mrs. M. Wilson, Misses Helen and Catharine Carruthers, Mrs. W. Sackville, Mrs. W. Benson, Mrs. F. Halligan and Mrs. A. Buttars and a number of smaller children.

Mrs. J. Ryan and daughter have returned to Toronto after spending a few days with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Byers.

Mr. Will Whitehead had his barn raised Tuesday afternoon.

MILLBROOK

All the rooms in the Public School enjoyed their usual Hallowe'en programs, followed by games and refreshments, on Monday afternoon, after the recess period. In the evening, shortly after six o'clock, the young folk of all ages were abroad, false faces and costumes, grotesque and otherwise, being much in evidence. Door bells were rung constantly by these roving bands, and obliging householders handed out generous response to the usual demand.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hall, and daughter, Glenna, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Hall, and Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Hall, of Millbrook, motored to Bowmanville on Sunday and attended morning service at St. Paul's United church, where the Rev. G. H. Kent, principal of Queen's theological college, Kingston, was the guest speaker.

In connection with this service the little daughter of Rev. W. F. Bannister, Barbara Elizabeth, was baptized. Rev. Mr. Bannister is pastor of St. Paul's church, and his wife, formerly Dorothy Hall, of Millbrook, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Hall.

The Millbrook Citizens' Band is holding a concert on Nov. 11, with a draw for five geese as a feature of the evening.

Mrs. G. Mugford, of Miami, Fla., and Mr. Cecil Larmer of Moose Jaw, Sask., who were called home owing to the death of their father, Mr. William Larmer, have returned to their respective homes this week.

At the recent dance held in the armouries the winners of the spotlight dance were Miss Mary Eakins and Rod Armstrong.

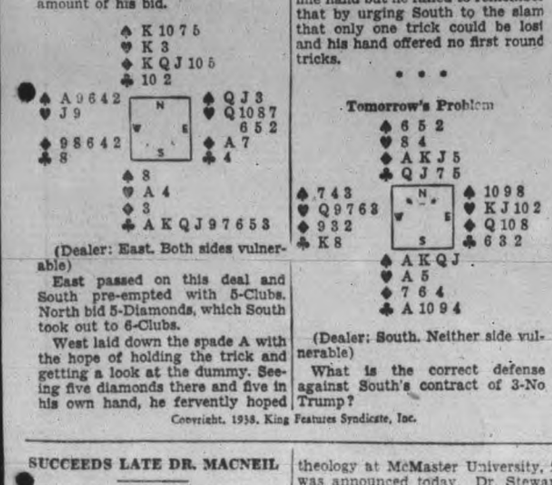
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

LET A BUZZ SAW ALONE

A PRE-EMPTIVE GAME bid, such as four spades or five clubs, is like a buzz saw — usually a bad thing to monkey with. Unless you hold a couple of aces and a king or void in the three off-suits, you seldom can hope soundly for a slam. Remember that your partner is purposely over-bidding for defensive purposes because his hand is weak generally, and he needs a good bit of help from you to make the amount of his bid.



(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable)

East passed on this deal and South pre-empted with 5-Clubs. North bid 5-Diamonds, which South took out to 6-Clubs.

West laid down the spade A with the hope of holding the trick and getting a look at the dummy. Seeing five diamonds there and five in his own hand, he fervently hoped his partner might be void and an extra trick could be found there. Instead he was agreeably surprised to discover that East held the A. East came back with a heart but declarer was able to claim the remainder of the tricks. Any other return by West at the second trick would have made it possible for South to score his slam.

North had no just excuse for touching South's original bid. His contention was that he had a very fine hand but he failed to remember that by urging South to the slam that only one trick could be lost and his hand offered no first round tricks.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable)

What is the correct defense against South's contract of 3-No Trump?

"King Of France" Gives Press Interview

Press photographers and newspapermen gave their word of honor not to reveal the place at which this photograph, showing the Comte de Paris, pretender to the throne of France addressing press representatives, was taken. The Comte flew into France, risking arrest and imprisonment, to urge a return to the monarchial form of government as the only means of uniting French factions and insuring French security and independence. The Comte is the smiling figure on the LEFT.

Enough Troops In Palestine To Quell Arabs

LONDON, Nov. 3—(CP-Havas).—Great Britain has sufficient forces in Palestine to quell terrorism, Malcolm MacDonald, Secretary for the Dominions and Colonies, told the House of Commons last night.

Announcing the Government intends to make known its plans for Palestine on publication of the new Royal Commission report probably after the new session of Parliament opens November 8, Mr. MacDonald revealed the exact military measures taken in the Holy Land.

Eighteen battalions of regular infantry and two regiments of cavalry were in the Holy Land, he said, with an artillery battery and various auxiliary units. Recruiting of supplementary police units is proceeding. Six thousand Jews have been allowed to arm for purposes of self-defence.

The military authorities thus had sufficient forces for re-establishing order, but he added the task probably would take considerable time.

Resigns

Tipped Off, Druggist Locks 'Gunmen' In Only To Find They're Customers

Montreal, Nov. 3 (CP).

DRUGGIST Louis Levesque was certain he had captured two gunmen, but found instead his suspects were customers.

The mix-up occurred last night when a fellow druggist telephoned and said two men were on their way to the Levesque store for a preparation which he did not carry. He told Levesque he suspected the men were responsible for recent hold-ups at their drug stores. So Levesque was ready.

He waited outside his shop and when the men entered closed the front door and locked them in. Then he telephoned police. But the two "hold-up" men were able to produce satisfactory identification. It even developed that while Levesque was notifying authorities the customers whose names were withheld, were using Levesque's phone explaining their predicament to police headquarters.

Canada's First V.C. Heroe's Grave Found Hidden Away In Toronto's Cemetery

TORONTO, Nov. 3—(CP).—Only the serial number of Private George Richardson — 2751 — marks the grave in Prospect Cemetery here of one of the first Canadians to win the Victoria Cross, Great Britain's highest military award.

The plot in an isolated section of the cemetery in northwest Toronto was located only after an intensive search by Capt. Sidney Lambert, padre of Christie Street Hospital for disabled war veterans. Capt. Lambert officiated when Private Richardson was buried in 1923.

The tiny cemetery marker is "less significant than a street number," says the Toronto Star Weekly in an article in this week's issue describing the grave. It adds that the Canadian Corps Association, through Lieut.-Col. C. E. Reynolds, Ontario president, will appeal to the Dominion Government to have the graves of V.C.'s marked in a "distinctive manner."

Richardson won his cross during the Sepoy rebellion in India defending the life of his superior officer. Six Sepoys had surrounded the officer and Richardson, armed only with a bayonet, attacked. He killed five and clubbed the sixth. He was gazetted Nov. 11, 1859.

Richardson made his home at Stratton, in northwestern Ontario. He left there is the early 1900's when a forest fire destroyed his home. His wife died in the blaze. For several years he travelled about Ontario and in 1914, at the age of 83, sought to enlist for Great War service.

He was "highly indignant" when refused because of his age, says the Star Weekly. "They think I'm too old," he said at the time. "But I'm not." To prove it, he set out on a tour of the province and campaigned for recruits and as a result of his efforts was tendered a banquet by prominent Toronto citizens.

Capt. Lambert recalled it was "a cold day in January, 15 years ago" when Richardson was buried. His grave is under a drooping birch tree. Fallen leaves now cover the slight mound.

Oldest Newsman Henry Clay Dies

LANDIS, Sask., Nov. 3—(CP).—Henry Clay Clay, probably Canada's oldest newspaperman, died at his home near here Saturday. He was 95 on Oct. 7.

Born at Trenton, N.J., Clay lived there until about 35 years of age, when he came to Canada and was employed in construction of the Welland Canal. Later he and his wife journeyed west to Winnipeg, where Mr. Clay owned the lot upon which a large downtown departmental store now stands. Upon leaving Winnipeg he traded the lot for a bag of jewelry and an old shotgun.

Again heading west, Clay, with his wife and two small children, travelled in a red river cart drawn by two oxen through Portage La Prairie to Rapid City where he took up his first homestead.

The early days in Rapid City brought their difficulties. Mrs. Clay took in washing to help earn the necessities of life and Mr. Clay did the ironing. Before many years, Mr. Clay was in the printing business editing the Marquette, Man., Reporter.

Friend Of Great Men

He met many of the great men of his day. Once David Lloyd George sat in Clay's little office and once he entertained the Marquis of Lorne.

In the 80's Clay took an active part in organization of the patrons of industry, one of the first farm organizations in the west. He was its first secretary.

In Rapid City, he was at various times hotel-keeper, auctioneer, collector, bailiff and three times he was made mayor by acclamation.

He was influential in formation of the Western Press Association. Upon leaving Rapid City the Association presented him with a handsome watch and chain, now in possession of his son, Charles Clay, member of the Winnipeg Free Press editorial staff.

In 1914 Clay took up his second homestead near Landis, 90 miles west of Saskatoon. For 15 years he has lived in retirement with his son, Rush Clay.

B.C. Appeals Bar To Cut In Gas

VANCOUVER, Nov. 3—(CP)—The British Columbia Government has appealed Mr. Justice A. M. Manson's continuation of an injunction against an order reducing the retail price of gasoline in the province.

H. Alan Maclean of the Attorney-General's Department yesterday filed notice of appeal returnable Nov. 9. The appeal court is sitting in Vancouver and will be asked to arrange an early hearing.

Mr. Justice Manson's judgment also ordered an early trial of the suit brought against the government by nine distributors of petroleum products who ask that the provincial coal and petroleum products control board act be declared ultra vires.

Provision made by the Judge for the filing of early statements of claim defence make possible a hearing of the suit by late this month or early in December.

Refugee Steamers Caught In Yangtse

HONG KONG, Nov. 3—(AP).—Japanese air and naval forces today bore the brunt of the extensive campaign radiating from the captured south China city of Canton.

Japanese planes in an attack on Shekj killed 50 persons and wounded 60. Incendiary bombs started fires and houses were damaged extensively. The injured were taken to Macao, across the mouth of the Canton river from Hong Kong.

Canton dispatches indicated Japanese naval forces and infantry detachments were pushing steadily west from Shiuhing, 35 miles south and west of Canton itself.

Reports not officially confirmed said the British gunboat Robin and four river steamers carrying women and children from Wuchow to Canton were bottled up in the West river there. They were caught between a boom laid across the river by Chinese and dangerous mines.

Chinese heard more than 10,000 troops arrived at Amoy, southern port in Fukien province, to reinforce Canton units; and similarly that the Japanese garrison at Fenglingtu, southern Shansi, had been increased preparatory to a new drive into Shensi province, north China.

CARDIFF, Wales—(CP). — Jack Peterson, former British and Empire heavyweight boxing champion, will contest the Plasnewydd ward as a Liberal candidate for the Cardiff city council.

Europe Facing Better Era, King's Hope

Lauds Czech Dignity And Il Duce For His Intervention

By J. F. Sanderson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Nov. 4—(CP Cable).—The King's speech at the prorogation of parliament today expressed hope that "a new era may have been opened for Europe" as a result of the settlement of the September crisis.

The review of the recent international situation was prefaced with the usual statement that "my relations with foreign powers continue to be friendly."

The speech, read by proxy in the House of Lords, gave credit to premier Mussolini, President Roosevelt, Viscount Runciman and Prime Minister Chamberlain for their parts in arranging a peaceful settlement.

After a short ceremony, featured by the speech from the Throne, Parliament adjourned until Tuesday, when the King will open the next session in Person.

Everyone Wants Peace.

For the most part the speech was a review of the legislation passed at the session which was almost a year old. In reference of the recent threat of war it said "teh desire of all peoples not to be drawn into war with one another is manifest and significant, and everywhere men and women share with me, I am convinced, a feeling of deep thankfulness that the imminent peril was thus averted."

It lauded the "dignity" with which Czechoslovakia accepted her fate, the "valuable support" given Prime Minister Chamberlain by Premier Mussolini of Italy in connection with a four-power conference, and the "timely action" of President Roosevelt in "powerfully aiding" the cause of peace. It bespoke pride in the "calmness and determination displayed by all my people."

It said the Government was confident the Anglo-Italian agreement soon to be put into effect would "further strengthen the good relations already existing between Italy and this country." Reduction of the number of foreigners fighting in Spain on either side was noted.

As the session ended the Government, frankly admitting serious deficiencies in the rearmament and civilian defence programs, embarked on a new effort to repair the fault.

Zoo Director, 60, Plays Rugby With Wild Wally

Chicago, Nov. 4 (AP)

EDWARD BEAN, 60-year-old director of the Brookfield Zoo, captured Wally in full flight. Wally, heretofore extremely timid, leaped an 11-foot wall to escape from his enclosure. For two hours Bean and a dozen men chased Wally with large nets around the zoo grounds. Finally Bean launched a flying tackle worthy of a football player and brought Wally to earth. Wally is a southern Australian kangaroo.

Night Of Grilling And 4 Admit Two Kidnappings

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—(AP)— An assistant district attorney announced today that four men, after being questioned all night had confessed to two kidnappings and the kidnap-cremation of Arthur Fried, White Plains, N.Y., businessman.

The assistant prosecutor, Joseph Rosenblum, said the confessions had been obtained from Stephen Sacoda, a convict, Demetrius, Gula, 30, William Jacknis, 27, and John Virga, 34.

Rosenblum said they confessed to kidnapping Norman Miller, 19, Benjamin Farber, Brooklyn businessman, and Fried who disappeared last December 4.

Rosenblum said the men confessed they killed Fried four days after kidnapping him and burned the body in the furnace of an east side social hall.

To Face Murder Counts

Officials also announced part of a human jawbone with several teeth still intact had been found by police digging in the basement of Ukrainian Hall, an east side social establishment where one of the kidnappers said Fried's body was cremated in a furnace.

A quantity of bones unearthed yesterday were found to be those of animlas.

Today's discovery started the police on an investigation of the possibility that an additional victim may have fallen prey to the gang. Medical examiners said the jawbone was that of a person who had died recently.

Church Bingo Stirs Ire Of Firemen

Chief Wants Conant To Rap Pastors For Overcrowding

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 4.—(CP)—Fire Chief Clarence DeFields said today he would appeal directly to Attorney-General G. D. Conant to discipline Windsor ministers who continue to "pack their churches past the danger point" at keno and bingo parties.

DeFields said complaints have been "pouring in" and that he is determined to take action next week if further protests are received.

"There have been many cases of halls with a safe capacity of 200 being crowded with 400 persons and halls with accommodation for 700 jammed with 1,200 persons," said the Fire Chief. "In many cases all exits are closed.

"We are goin gthe limit. We are not going to fool around any longer. We've tried to play ball with them. There are a whole lot of things done in the name of Almighty God of which he doesn't approve."

DeFields said he answered four separate complaints about overcrowding last night.

Priest, Cook Die In Church Fire

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—(AP)— Two men, one a Franciscan brother — died early today in flames which damaged upper floors of the rectory of the Church of St. Anthony of Padua.

One priest, trapped five floors above the street, was critically burned and another was injured in leaping from a window to the roof of an adjacent building two floors below.

Father Richard Fagin, 36, was taken to Columbus hospital, with burns of face, hands and body.

Sixty-two-year-old Father Luigi Vitale suffered a leg injury when he leaped from the window. Father Virgil Liucci, pastor of the church, ripped his cassock and bedsheets to improvise a rope ladder, but flames forced him from his room to a ledge, from which firemen rescued him.

Minister Assails Car Crash Juries

MONCTON, N.B., Nov. 4.—(CP)—Cross-examination of witnesses by Rev. Victor E. Osborn, Minister of the First Presbyterian Church here, featured an inquest yesterday into the death of Joseph Gallant, fatally injured Monday when hit by a car driven by Albany Melanson, of Lewisville, N.B., the jury reached a verdict of accidental death, without blame to anyone.

The minister, who recently criticized proceedings at an inquest into another accidental fatality, was invited by the coroner and jury to attend the inquiry and examine witnesses.

After the evidence had been heard Mr. Osborn addressed the jury and said he felt he was speaking for many people who believed fatal accidents were not being dealt with properly because jurymen felt they were trying a man for "murder" instead of merely adducing facts.

"In many cases drivers are exonerated with too much ease," he said. "It is my opinion that when any doubt exists as to the driver's responsibility the case should be referred to the courts by the coroner's jury."

The minister said driving permits were too easy to obtain and expressed opinion drivers should be compelled to take out public liability insurance.

Boy Struck By Car

Bobby, young son of Claire H. Stuart, 583 George street, had a narrow escape from serious injury when he was struck by an automobile as he was crossing water street at Murray to go to Central School this afternoon. Fortunately the car which was driven north by Thomas Watson, 227 Prince street, was moving at a slow rate of speed and the lad escaped with a cut on his chin.

Wharf Completed

Constructed by the Dominion Government to provide an attractive mooring place for local navigation, especially the yachts and cruisers that make the Trent Canal trips during the tourist season, the new wharf is ready for the season of 1939. It became part of the scheme of improving the Little Lake front. Appropriation for all this water front work was obtained from the Government by J. J. Duffus, M.P., who was convinced that Little Lake is a natural asset to Peterborough that has been too long neglected.

Arsenic Blamed In Pembroke Woman's Death

PEMBROKE, Ont., Nov. 4—(CP).—Death of Mrs. John F. Leder, 28, of Pembroke on Aug. 9 was due to arsenical poisoning, a coroner's jury reported after an inquiry here today. The verdict added that arsenic was used as an application in the form of a plaster supplied to Mrs. Leder by Richard Tennant, Pembroke railway sectionman.

No charge has been laid in the case.

The woman's husband, John F. Leder, testified that in the fall of 1937 and in July 1938, Mrs. Leder was treated for a supposed cancerous condition of the breast by Tennant.

Prof. Charles W. Ewing of Toronto, who made an analysis of a plaster supplied to him by Ontario police, said it contained an undetermined quantity of arsenic and that he found arsenic in several of the organs.

Dr. E. R. Frankish, Ontario government medico-legal expert, said he found evidence of arsenic in various quantities in Mrs. Leder's stomach, liver, breast and in her nails and hair and that her death was caused by the poison. He found a gangrenous condition in one breast which could have been caused by application of acid, a strong alkali or by an arsenical plaster. There was no cancerous condition.

First Treatment In 1937.

Mr. Leder testified she went in the fall of 1937 to Tennant for treatment and that he applied plasters and poultices. A core was removed from the breast which apparently healed satisfactorily. But last July the trouble had recurred and she returned to Tennant.

Mr. Leder testified Tennant gave her one or two further treatments but as she was not feeling well, refused to treat her again and advised her to see a doctor.

Constable E. V. McNeill of the Ontario police read a statement which he said he had obtained from Tennant on Oct. 7. In it Tennant was quoted as saying that in the fall of 1937 Mrs. Leder came to him complaining of a lump in her left breast. He examined it and believed it to be cancer. He told her, according to the statement, that he could not treat her unless her husband was satisfied and with Mr. Leder's consent he applied four or five plasters, followed by linseed poultices and salve after the core was removed.

On July 15 she returned to him according to the statement, and he applied one or two more plasters and advised her to see a doctor. The constable said Tennant made him up a plaster like that used in the treatment of Mrs. Leder and he had sent it to Toronto for analysis.

Woman With Babe Freed Of Firing Dog Cadi Says Mother Couldn't Do It

Lindsay ,Ont., Nov. 4 (CP)

FREDA GILL, of Gooderham, apeared in county police court here yesterday with a baby in her arms to answer a charge of ill-treating a dog by setting it on fire. The case was dismissed.

In passing judgment Magistrate E. A. Gee remarked: "It's despicable and I cannot conceive of any civilized person treating an animal in that way—a young mother surely couldn't do it."

County Constable W. J. Duvall, who owned the dog, said he heard yelps. "I saw a string of light running down the edge of the hill to the road," he said. "It was our pet dog, 'Dinty,' racing home on fire. The dog smelled of coal oil. 'Dinty' died two days later."

"Nobody saw me do it and I didn't do it," said Mrs. Gill.

British Airliner Cracks Up In Fog Kills 13 Aboard, Man In Field

ST. HELIER, Island of Jersey, Nov. 4 (A.P.). — Fourteen persons were killed to-day in one of Great Britain's worst airplane disasters when a fully-loaded passenger airliner crashed in a field just after taking off for Southampton, England.

The victims were nine men, four women and one child—the pilot, Captain A. G. M. Cary, the wireless operator, 11 passengers, and a man working in the field where the plane crashed.

The plane was on a regular run between Jersey in the English Channel, and Southampton.

The crash occurred at 10.52 a.m. (5.52 a.m. EST) shortly after the take-off from Jersey Airport, several miles from St. Helier. The plane was seen to circle several times in the Channel Island fog before falling into the field about 600 yards from the take-off.

It was a four-motored De Havland plane named St. Catharine's Bay.

The only recent comparable disaster in Britain was the crash of a Netherlands airliner at Croydon Airport on December 9, 1936, when 14 persons were killed, including Juan de la Cierva, inventor of the autogiro.

The airliner was seen to be in difficulties when flying over St. Peter Port with smoke and flames streaming from one of her engines. She turned around apparently in an effort to return to the airport, but suddenly hurtled to earth, barely missing a hotel.

The plane fell with a terrific crash, toppled over and burst into flames. A few seconds later there was a loud explosion.

All the dead had addresses in the British Isles.

London, Nov. 4 (CP-Havas)

THE international crisis over Czechoslovakia last month cost Great Britain £5,500,000 ($27,500,000) in extraordinary expenditures, Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the House of Commons last night.

Shot In Tire Ends 30-Mile Car Chase

TORONTO, Nov. 4—(CP).—Shots were fired, cars were ditched and a store front almost smashed in as Constable John Harrison chased a stolen car last night. Speeds as high as 85-miles-an-hour for 30 miles on Dufferin and upper Yonge streets were reached.

As the car roared through the Main street of Aurora, provincial Officer Ralph Taylor joined the chase. He hit the rear tire of the fleeing car with a revolver shot, just north of Eagle street, Newmarket.

Slewing wildly along the side of the road, the car came to a stop against a pole. The driver was arrested on a charge of car theft. He gave his name as Walter Victor Pietz. He was uninjured and the car suffered only body damage.

The chase started at Finch and Dufferin streets, as Constable Harrison was driving a farmer in the North York township police cruiser to investigate the theft of chickens. Becoming suspicious as a car roared by at high speed, he took up the chase.

Campbell Urges Toronto Empire Capital

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 4.—(CP)—Sir Malcolm Campbell, former holder of the world's speed title on land and present world speed king of water, would move the capital of the British Empire from England to Toronto.

Sir Malcolm suggested this as he discussed the present state of European affairs in a brief interview while his train stopped here at noon today. The speed king passed through the city enroute to Detroit, accompanied by Lord Percival Perry, head of the Ford Motor Company in England.

Sir Malcolm is a director of the English company and he and Lord Perry are going to Detroit for "purely a business trip."

Apparently deeply concerned about the present world situation and the outlook for the future of democracy, Sir Malcolm urged closer co-operation among the democratic nations of the world.

With regard to the immediate situation in Great Britain where rearmament is going ahead with all possible speed, Sir Malcolm urged that steps be taken at once to set up a ministry of supply in the British government.

This suggestion for such a ministry was turned down by Prime Minister Chamberlain only a few days ago, Sir Malcolm recalled, but explained that in his opinion it is essential to assure the empire defence forces that there will be no breakdown in the chain of supply which any defence force must have.

Valera Depends On Britain To Supply Eire With Guns She Needs

Propose to Manufacture Own Small Armes But Look to Ex-motherland For Major Armaments General Learns

LONDON, Nov. 4 — (CP-Havas) — Eire is depending on Great Britain to furnish the big guns and heavy armaments necessary for its defence, General Sir Hubert Gough, commander of the fifth army in 1918, declared today on his return from Dublin where he conferred with Prime Minister Eamon De Valera.

"I was in Dublin on purely private business," Sir Hubert said. "I thought it would be a good opportunity to pay a courtesy call upon Mr. De Valera. I did so in a purely private capacity. We had a long conversation which covered a large range of subjects. It was in passing from one subject to another that Mr. De Valera raised the question of the defences of Eire.

"He appeared somewhat anxious about them as he did not think that they were quite at the best stage of efficiency. He talked about improving the general defensive organization of Eire and said he thought it might be possible to set up a small arms factory for themselves but nothing could be done in the way of big armaments.

"For big guns and such-like arms Mr. De Valera said they would have to rely upon British manufacture."

Sir Hubert said it was not for him to agree or disagree with Mr. De Valera's proposal and that they merely had discussed the matter as between two individuals.

Japs May Ditch Nine Power Treaty Of 1922

TOKYO, Nov. 4.— (AP)— The Japanese foreign office spokesman today announced Japan was considering denunciation of the 1922 nine-power treaty by which the United States, Great Britian, Japan, Canada and other powers pledged respect for China's independence and territorial integrity and promised efforts to maintain equal commercialopportunities in China.

Japan, he said, considers the agreement obsolete and is examining a tri-power pact among Japan, Japanese - supported Manchoukuo, and a new Chinese regime envisioning displacement of the Chiang Kai-Shek Government. Japan believes negotiations with individual powers over interest in China are possible, however.

"Japan considers the Nine-Power pact obsolete," the spokesman said. "Whether we will denounce it or withdraw has not yet been decided. The government is examining the advantages of the creation of a tri-power pact."

A Chinese Guarantee?

Six Probes Under Way After Blast Sinks German Ship At Oakland

OAKLAND, Calif., Nov. 4 (AP)— Evidence of possible sabotage arose today as six separate investigations were pushed into the sinking of the German liner Vancouver yesterday after a terrific explosion below the waterline.

Efforts were to be made today to raise the 477-foot vessel from a mudbank in Oakland Estuary where she settled stern-down after the blast.

Four members of the crew of 54 were injured. Eight passengers on the ship were not harmed, and called the experience "tremendously exciting."

Investigation on the vessel last night by the United States district attorney, Earl Warren, federal bureau of investigation agents, and other officials brought a closely-guarded statement from Warren that "we are of the opinion the explosion was not in the engine room or in the ship itself."

Because of international implications, Warren declined to say the explosion was the work of saboteurs until the vessel could be raised and an examination of the hole made.

Not An Accident

German officers and crew members said the blast was not accidental. Captain E. W. Moessinger said the explosion was "damned suspicious" and three crew members standing at the control board in the engine room, six yards forward from where the blast took place, said the "detonation" must have happened outside the ship, or

ROBERT HENDERSON of nearby Ebenezer wishes today he had more control over his automobile. It did everything but kill him yesterday.

Even Convicts Called Into Fight As Fire Rages In Dozen States

ADEN, Ill., Nov. 4 — (AP). — Hundreds of forest fires crep across drought-seared timber and prairie lands of more than a dozen states to-day.

The fire area extended from the Ohio river to the Gulf, and from the Atlantic Seaboard States to sections west of the Mississippi.

On the fire lines were forest rangers, convicts, farmers, C.C.C. and W.P.A. workers and volunteers. Some crews in Kentucky and West Virginia withdrew hurriedly last night to avoid being trapped by flames.

Rains checked the flames in some ports of the far-flung fire area but in others stubborn blazes spread despite efforts of weary fire-fighters.

Fires dotted an area of 1,600 square miles in Southern West Virginia, burning thousands of acres of timber, destroying valuable hay crops and sending up a blanket of smoke 9,000 feet thick in places. The fire epidemic was described as the worst in eight years. A call was issued for 2,000 me nto assist 1,600 who have been at work two weeks.

Rain Cheers Crews.

In Kentucky numerous fires swept through 6,000 acres of timber in the Black Mountain area and threatened 8,000 more. A forecast of rain cheered fire wardens.

Mrs. Kenny Declared Mentally Deficient As She Appears On Arson Charge

TORONTO, Nov. 4 (CP)—Mrs. Lillian Kenny, stork derby contender, was said to be mentally deficient when she appeared in women's court today for hearing of an arson charge, laid three weeks ago after a fire at her Bathurst street home.

A further remand to Nov. 20 was granted by Magistrate Prentice, despite an objection by I. E. Weldon, counsel for Mrs. Kenny. The magistrate renewed bail of $2,000 cash.

The short French-Canadian mother of many children was grinning broadly when she entered the court and took her place in the dock.

Deputy Fire Marshall Walter McConnell walked over to her, and in a low voice, read the mentally-deficient warrant.

"Tell that to my lawyer, will you, please?" said Mrs. Kenny when the warrant was read.

"This case has been remanded, remanded and remanded," said Mr. Weldon. "Now this other charge is laid. I was assured they were all through with the mental examination. I would like the arson trial to proceed."

"I showed you the letter in which the doctors state this woman is definitely mentally deficient'," said Crown Counsel Martin.

"Yes," Mr. Weldon agreed.

"The procedure is set out in the hospitals act," Mr. Martin continued. "I would like to arrange a date for the trial to suit your convenience. You may call your own doctors in the meantime."

After a conference both charges were adjourned to Nov. 20.

Not Signing Trade Treaty This Trip Says King Reaching New York

NEW YORK, No. 4 (CP)—Sunbronzed after a three-weeks Caribbean holiday, Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Dr. O. D. Skelton, under-secretary of state for external affairs, returned to New York today on the steamship Rotterdam enroute for Ottawa.

The prime minister said he had not yet decided when he would leave for the Canadian capital, but that he expected to stay in New York over the week-end to "round out a most delightful vacation."

"We were very tired when we left Ottawa following the harassing days of the European crisis but we return refreshed and ready for work," Mr. King said.

He declined to comment on world political developments, saying he "was entirely out of touch with things." He also declined to say whether Canada would follow South Africa and Australia with a statement of approval on Prime Minister Chamberlain's action in implementing the Anglo-Italian pact, Acting-Prime Minister Ernest Lapointe was now in charge, he explained.

The prime minister said he had no information on how near conclusion the Canadian - United States trade negotiations might be.

"I don't expect to go to Washington to sign the pact this trip," he said, "but when negotiations are completed I will return to sign the treaty," he added.

Mr. King's trip took him to Bermuda, Jamaica, Cuba and Nassau.

Whistles Blow As Bluenose Returns To Port

LUNENBURG, N.S., Nov. 4—(CP).—The Lunenburg schooner Bluenose, queen of the North Atlantic fishing fleets in realms of both age and speed, returned yesterday after defeating the Gloucesterman Gertrude L. Thebaud, in a racing series off Massachusetts, to receive a noisy welcome.

The 18-year-old vessel, pride of this south shore fishing port, whose men and ships are known across the world, was towed into Lunenburg harbor by the Canadian Fisheries patrol boat Arras, her escort to the series.

Whistles ashore and afloat blew a tumultuous welcome as the North Atlantic sailing champion came in sight shortly after 1 p.m.

School children were given the rest of the day off and stores closed while the townspeople welcomed the victories crew. Captain Angus Walters, her skipper in the races with the Thebaud, arrived here by automobile from Halifax earlier in the day. He flew from Boston to Halifax Wednesday.

Anglo-Italian Deal Victory For Franco

LONDON, Nov. 4—(CP-Havas).—"Ratification of the Anglo-Italian agreement while Italian intervention proceeds on a scale but slightly, if at all, diminished, is the latest step in the desertion by the democracies of the democratic cause." The Daily Herald (Labor) declared today.

"It means that the British Government does, in fact, cease to have even formal objection to the utterly one-sided intervention in the Spanish struggle. That was practically admitted by Lord Halifax (Foreign Secretary) yesterday when he said the Anglo-Italian agreement could not affect the balance of forces in the civil war, since Signor Mussolini has let everyone know he would not tolerate a General Franco defeat anyway."

"Lord Halifax is an honest man." The News Chronicle (Liberal) said, "and we welcome the frank admission made yesterday regarding the British-Italian pact. . . The agreement, therefore, was made in full knowledge of this fact. Without exaggeration, it may be said to provide for General Franco's victory."

Youth clubs are being organized in Ireland.

Wanders 13 Years Turns To Theft

HAMPTON, N.B., Nov. 4 (CP)—A story of wandering since the age of 12 was told in the county court here yesterday by Joseph Boudreau, 25, claiming to be a native of Halifax, who pleaded guilty to breaking into the Sussex Mercantile Company store at Sussex Oct. 19 and stealing goods worth $125.

"I broke into the mercantile to get clothes," said the accused. "I wanted to make a good appearance going into the United States."

Boudreau said his parents were killed in the Halifax explosion and he stayed at the St. Patrick's boys home there until he was 10 years old. Adopted by a family of the same name, Boudreau, he lived on their farm at Antigonish, N.S., for the next two years and since then spent most of his time "on the road" in Canada and the United States.

He worked three years as a dishwasher in a hotel at Cobourg, Ont., looked after elephants in a circus, cooked for a touring theatrical group, worked in a restaurant at Belleville, Ont., from July, 1937, to March, 1938, and came to New Brunswick with the intention of continuing to the United States, said Boudreau.

He was remanded until next Thursday.

Woman Promises To Keep Out Of Store For Period Of 2 Years

One of the conditions under which a married woman who had pleaded guilty to stealing a suit of underwear from the Canadian Department store was allowed to go on suspended sentence by Magistrate O. A. Langley, KC, in police court this morning was that she should keep out of the C.D.S. store during the two years of her probation.

The woman appeared a week ago and pleaded guilty and sentence had been postponed until to-day.

This morning Magistrate Langley announced that sentence would be suspended for two years, the principal condition being that the accused should stay away from the local store of C.D.S. "You must not go in there during the two years," he informed the woman. "They don't want you there."

Houses Block Whitby Streets

WHITBY, Nov. 4.—Whitby town council today gave contractors who are moving houses to make room for the passages of the new provincial four-lane highway until Saturday noon to get the houses off Brock Street South, where they have tied up traffic for some days and necessitated a detour.

The Saturday deadline on one house was set by council after several members alleged that trees planted by the town were being uprooted and that the detour road was not wide enough for two cars to pass in safety.

"They are doing damage that cannot be repaired in thirty years," contended Deputy-Reeve A. M. Irwin.

One house stands squarely on Brock Street blocking all traffic. Another is still to be moved before the new highway can come through. Council voted to give the men at work on the first house until Saturday to finish the job and informed them that they could not start moving the other house until Monday so that Brock Street would be clear for Sunday traffic.

Decisive Advances Claimed By Rebels

HENDAYE, France, Nov. 4—(CP)—Spanish Insurgents reported today that their offensive in Eastern Spain had brought them within rifle shot of the Ebro river, all along the front where they have been attacking under General Franco's personal command since Sunday.

The six-day offensive resulted in capture of more than 35 square miles of territory with government entrenchments, the Insurgents said.

Although the government insisted its troops were fighting so desperately that the cost of the Insurgent gains made them almost valueless, dispatches from Barcelona did admit the Insurgents were advancing.

Death Certificate Claims To Be Probed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Nov. 4—(AP)—Three attorneys won a spectacular race against time early today to obtain a writ of error and prolong the life of Oscar Ralph Ashworth, confessed kidnapper, for at least 10 months.

The writ of error serves as an automatic stay of execution to enable the lawyers to get the case before the Supreme Court. It will be returnable in the May term and the case probably will not be heard before September court attaches said.

While the attorneys drove from St. Joseph, Mo., through a blinding rainstorm, reporting their progress by telephone to Warden Frank Ramsey at the State prison, Guy Silvers, Deputy Supreme Court clerk waited in his office to sign the necessary papers to save Ashworth from the State's gas chamber.

Originally scheduled to die at midnight, Ashworth, who pleaded guilty to kidnapping a seven-year-old St. Joseph girl, was given an hour's delay when his lawyers, Abe Goldman, Leonard Johnson, and Earl Borcher, notified the Warden by phone from Moberly they had been delayed by the rain. They arrived here and the papers were signed at 12:30 a.m.

Cerdo will take office on Dec. 23 as successor to President Arturo Alessandri.

Relief Boosts Hospital Cost

LINDSAY, Nov. 4.—An alarming increase is being shown in the amounts being written off each year for accounts of indigent patients, T. H. Stinson, K.C., chairman of the board of governors of the Ross Memorial Hospital, reported at the annual meeting of that body last night.

"The annual amounts written off during the past ten years show that hospital services are being taken advantage of by an ever-increasing number of indigents who require this kind of treatment and who are evidently unable to be cared for in their own homes," he said. In 1929 the cost of free treatment was $2,692, while this year has increased to $8,236.

The average cost per patient this year was $2.76 per day; 1,349 patients, including 213 babies, were admitted to the hospital; a new refrigeration system was installed at a cost of $1,923 ;the los son operations for the year was $3,913. These were further items contained in the chairman's report.

The chairman also reported that facilities for holding clinics are being used more extensively each year. This year there were 167 attended travelling chest clinic, and 14 at orthopdic clinics held by the Lindsay Rotary Club.

Only Election Speech By Roosevelt Tonight

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—(AP).—President Roosevelt will make his only speech of the United States general election campaign tonight just two years after he won the greatest vote victory in the country's history.

Just as in 1936 he called for popular support for his policies, so tonight he will have opportunity to ask the voters to stand back of his program.

Although this is not a year when the presidency is contested, the results of next Tuesday's balloting will be examined closely by both Republicans and Democrats for indications of the country's attitude toward the administration.

In some states Mr. Roosevelt's new deal is a clear-cut issue. In others local problems have created cross-currents in virtually all, however, every vote cast will help shape the course of national policies for the next two years.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 4 (C.P.). — Improved export interest in Canadian wheat following a better inquiry at Liverpool for the same grain gave Winnipeg wheat futures a strong undertone late to-day. Prices rallied from an indifferent opening to close ⅜ to ¾ cent higher. November 57½, December 57⅝ to ½, May 60⅞ to 61, and July 61⅝a.

Exporters and millers showed more interest in the cash wheat pit where Nos. 1, 2, 3 Northern and Garnet wheats changed hands in large volume.

Scattered outside commission house orders and light short-covering enabled futures to recover fractional losses at the half-way mark. Then operations became drab.

Liverpool rallied briskly to close ⅛ to ⅛d higher.

'Honest' Jasper To Be Licked In Connecticut?

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 4—(AP)—Plain Jasper McLevy, socialist mayor of Bridgeport since 1933 and as rugged as the hills of Scotland from which his parents came, is conceded a slim but fighting chance of winning Connecticut's governorship in next Tuesday's election.

McLevy is the sort of man people call "honest as the day is long" and the tax-paying electors have turned rapt attention to his charges that graft exists in high places. Both major parties must be swept out of office before the state can be "redeemed," he has said.

Honest Jasper probably will not be able to "redeem" Connecticut this election. He is running again Wilbur Cross, Democratic incumbent seeking a fifth term, and Raymond Baldwin, twice house Republican leader in the state assembly. But a pronounced swing toward the socialist has the majority parties worried.

McLevy has hammered away at a claim that this New England state of substantial factories and 5,000 square miles, has been ruled by an "invisible government," or political machine. His charges of graft were given a ring of truth by a grand jury expose of corruption in a state purchase of land and fraud in certain affairs of Waterbury City.

No Attack on Cross

Neither "mince-no-words" McLevy nor the Republican candidate have made any personal charges against the scholarly Governor Cross, author, critic and former Dean of the Yale graduate school. They have directed their fire at a small group in his administration and most political peers agree democratic chairman James Farley wasn't far off the mark when he said:

"I'd like to be as certain of eternal salvation as I am that Wilbur Cross will be sitting in the Governor's chair after the next inaugural ceremonies are over."

However, McLevy is not discouraged easily—he became Bridgeport's chief magistrate in the 11th try—and he'll be back in governor contests of the future. It is predicted he will draw upwards of 100,000 of the 650,000 votes usually polled in Connecticut. Other years when he ran as Socialist candidate for the Governorship he never drew more than 38,000 ballots.

If the political prophets are borne out by Tuesday' result, it may mean that Jasper McLevy, who left school when he was 14, will yet govern the state in which proud Yale University was established more than two centuries ago.

Soapbox Start

McLevy, now 60, was born in Bridgeport and after apprenticing set up his own roofing business. He became interested in socialism in the middle 90's and soon was orating in crisp, two-syllable words from a top a soapbox.

His boast that he could manage civic affairs as well as his small busines swas not an idle one. In each of the three years he has governed Bridgeport and its 150,000 citizens he has reported a financial surplus and reducted taxes.

He runs the city from a glass house, for all to see. The meetings of all civic boards and agencies are open to the public. Anyone can call at his office and see him without being interviewed by a secretary. The rigid civil service code he established in Bridgeport has been adopted by other cities.

Hallowe'en Parties Enjoyed At Lifford

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LIFFORD LINE, Nov. 4. — The spirit of Hallowe'en has by no means vanished into the dim and distant past. Artistic drawings in Hallowe'en colors adorned the school room and altogether it had a very spooky appearance when on Monday afternoon the pupils donned their costumes for the occasion and received their guests in the person of mothers, friends, and junior tots, some of whom gazed in fear and trembling at the weird caricatures. An appropriate Hallowe'en program was presented by the pupils under the direction of their teacher, Miss Harper. Following a display of costumes, prizes were awarded by their teacher to Macie Lang and Stewart Staples for best costumes. The teacher and pupils passed candy and a jolly time was spent.

Party at the Hall.

The senior young people of the community celebrated Hallowe'en later in the evening by attending a jolly party in the Lifford Community Hall, sponsored by the Women's Guild of St. Mary's Church. Owing to counter attractions the crowd was not large, although many unique costumes were seen in the parade, which was a highlight of the evening. A good program was presented. The purpose of holding this event originally was to make the lucky draw for a handsome quilt on which the ladies have been selling tickets for some time.. The ticket was held by a youthful resident of Carleton Place. The ladies realized the creditable total sum of $21 from their efforts in connection with the quilt. Thirteen dollars was received as a result of a small door charge and $2.50 was realized on the sale of home-made candy, which was made and sold by members and friends of the Guild. During the latter part of the evening lunch was served by the ladies.

Mussolini Flays Dreamers Of Wild Revenge

ROME, Nov. 4 (C.P.). — Premier Mussolini warned the country today against men who "are dreaming of speculative and impossible revenge."

"For this reason," he told a crowd massed before the Palazzo Venezia for ceremonies marking the 20th anniversary of the Italian Great War victory over Austria, "there is still need of sleeping with our heads on our packs as we did in the trenches."

Mussolini evidently was referring to factions abroad whom he regards as being opposed to policies of general European appeasement on the basis of the Four-Power Munich accord which sliced up Czechoslovakia.

"In the European political sky," the Premier continued, "the blue area tends to spread. Responsible men are working to this end, but it would be imprudent and not the Fascist way to abandon ourselves to exaggerated and premature optimism.

"There are men who, feeling themselves beaten by the rectilinear, truly peaceful, European and human policy of the (Rome-Berlin) axis, are dreaming with their eyes wide open of speculative and impossible revenge."

A hundred thousand veterans arrived in Rome for the celebration. Thousands more of civilians poured into the city to see Mussolini review the troops.

The four-day festivities began on Tuesday on the battlefield at Vittorio Veneto and were concluded with solemn ceremonies before the tomb of the Unknown Soldier here.

The War Is Not Over

On Saturday poppies will be sold on the streets of Peterborough. The proceeds will go to aid war veterans and their families who are not otherwise cared for. Give all you can because the cause is deserving.

We admit that looks pretty much like a straight advertising announcement. And it is, but there is no charge made.

It is more than 24 years since the World War began, and it is not far removed from 20 full years since it was declared to be officially over. The very fact that they will be selling poppies on our streets on Saturday is sufficient proof that the war is not yet over. Those who took part in it are still fighting it; they do not march forth as companies, but the struggle to-day is carried on by the individual, and unfortunately there are cases where a man's incapacity to work as he formerly did has visited a degree of hardship on his family.

One can buy poppies with safety; the people who sell them and who look after the funds are not making anything out of it. The funds go in their entirely to perform a good, a kindly and a needed service.

So Many Knew Him

John S. Adair, a young man of but 32 years, died suddenly in Peterborough. He had never taken any part in what might be called public life; had never held office, but went about quietly attending to his own affairs and finding good company where he could. He was interested in his church, in a weekly gathering of young men at the "Y", and was a member of a service club.

And yet it is not far short of being somewhat of a surprise to find how many people knew John Adair. The number who quit work to attend his funeral could be likened to what might be expected if a pioneer were to fall in our midst. Not only that, but one hears reference to him on the streets and in offices and often enough where a few gather together. It is not simply a case of speaking well of the departed, but rather a desire on the part of many people to express the same feeling in different ways. It is right to say that by instinct and preference John Adair was a gentleman; if he made a friend he had that peculiar something which made it a lasting friendship. His outlook was bright and helpful. The number of people who knew him and liked him must be large indeed.

Our Bus Service

The finance committee of the City Council recommends that the franchise of the Peterborough Bus Co. be extended so it will not terminate until 1947. In making a request for extension the president of the bus company said every time he came to this city he was "ashamed of the two old crocks" which are still included in the service here, but which he proposed to replace as soon as it could be done. Mr. Mitchell can be assured there will be no objection whatever to the change, and he can make it as soon as he desires with no fear of protest.

Ald. Stocker said something which may now and then be forgotten or overlooked. If the bus company were not supplying service here it would mean that the city might possibly have to go into the business itself, a move which would call for a generous expenditure of money, constant supervision, depreciation allowances, etc. We are being well served under the present arrangement, and citizens in general know it.

When a Man Is Drunk

Magistrate Campbell in court at Peterborough said he would rather accept the evidence of the average police officer than the average doctor as to whether a person was or was not drunk. The magistrate felt that an officer had no other interest in the case than telling the truth, and he seemed to be under the impression that if a man accused of being drunk called his family doctor then there might be the desire to make his case look as favorable as possible.

Apart from that we do not believe a doctor would care to go into court and claim that he could tell with any more accuracy than a police officer whether a man was or was not drunk. That is, provided he did not secure a blood test at the time of the alleged offence or shortly after. And even the blood test has now been seriously questioned by some medical men on the ground that alcohol used to cleanse the skin and also on the needle affects the result of the test.

Take away the blood test and it seems right enough to conclude that a police officer would probably be a better judge of drunkenness than the doctor, for the simple reason that in the course of a month or a year he would come in contact with more such cases.

Particularly when the driving of a car while drunk is the issue there has been small patience within recent times to get into useless argument in court. We have been arriving at the point where it is taken for granted that one who drives must not drink—not at the same time—and from that standard it is not well to depart.

Should Remember It

There was a newspaper heading which attracted attention, and this is what it said: "Average Weekly Wage In Ontario $17.73." The man who gave out that figure was Hon. N. O. Hipel, our Provincial Minister of Labor, and he had secured the information from considering the earnings of men employed in 24 industries during the last five years. He added that a survey also showed that nine per cent. of these men were at present working for less than $10 per week.

Mr. Hipel also gave wages paid by some of the trucking firms, which were low indeed for the number of hours worked, and also because the worker would have to depend entirely for a living on such a wage. The Minister of Labor explained that the surveys had been made for the purpose of gathering more information regarding a minimum wage scale for the province.

When Governments seek and find such information it ought to impress one or two things upon the Government, and upon all Governments, but chiefly this—that the great majority of our people have not a great deal of money.

There have been times when we have heard addresses about our great national wealth; about our forests, mines, broad acres and so on, and it would tend to create the feeling that we are a great and rather wealthy people as a whole. But natural resources mean little enough to a man when he comes to pay his bills, and he has to depend pretty much on what he has in his pocket.

When our Minister of Labor finds that many workers receive just $17.73 per week it ought to make him feel that such people cannot afford to spend much of that amount for the sake of being governed. They would need every last cent of it for their own board and keep. It would be a very convenient figure for our Federal Government to keep in mind too when the members there consider the expenditure of millions of dollars, knowing eventually they will be turning to many men for these millions who earn $17.73 per week and no more. We are just a young country yet as countries go; we are not a wealthy people, and yet our Provincial and Federal Governments have some notable debts contracted in our name. Mr. Hipel might be doing a worthy service if he could make legislators in general remember that $17.73 figure which he found to be the wage of a number of people in certain Ontario industries.

The Father Was On Hand

An automobile had been stolen in Toronto. Later it was recovered and the young men who had taken it were brought into court. That is pretty much routine, as nearly all stolen cars are recovered and most of the people who take them are arrested.

There was another interested party in court and it was the father of one of the young men. He had something to say and the court listened. Drink had nothing to do with the trouble in this case. A young man found it harder to-day to get going than in former years, and it would be a bad thing for these young men to have the handicap of ex-convicts placed on them. The suggestion of the father was that he be allowed to go along and serve the time. "I'm up in years and it doesn't matter much to me," was his way of stating the case.

We know nothing at all of the case except what appeared in a news story. It may be this father had been trying to shield and shelter his son for too long a time, but it is worth noting that when trouble came the father did not quit. He was there in court and he was ready to go to jail in place of the son, and we do not suppose there would be anything very pleasant for that father in going to jail, but he was willing to take the rough road if the son by his sacrifice could escape it and not be known as an ex-convict.

We do not know whether there is a great lesson in it which can be spread over too much territory but there is something for the son to think about if he cares to do any thinking.

41 U.S. Newspapers Quit

Newspapers as a rule do not discuss their own business. They are willing at all times to present statements and views about a good many other lines of effort; if a man wants to say business is rotten the newspaper will say it for him, and if on another occasion another desires to say trade is better, than again the newspaper gives space gladly.

In the past 15 months there have been 41 daily newspapers in United States which have suspended publication. Within recent times we lost in Ontario one in London, one in Hamilton and another in Toronto. We notice that in United States the trouble has been hitting papers of all sizes and some of them of long years. On 12 papers it is stated 5,000 people lost employment, and all these workers would be trained for their special vocations and might find it difficult enough to turn to anything else.

Looking over a review of the causes it is interesting to find one which runs through them all like a straight line—increasing labor and production costs at a time when business returns were lower than usual. Newspapers do not as a rule throw up their hands and quit without a struggle. They will stay at it until their money has vanished. They become accustomed to losing money at certain seasons of the year and on certain days in the week, and they keep on firm in the belief that later on they will be able to pick up their losses and be on a safe enough footing once more.

Papers in cities like New York, St. Louis, Toledo, Akron, St. Paul, Albany, Providence, Omaha, Miami, Rochester, Brooklyn, as well as cities of lesser size, have found it necessary to merge or discontinue publication, and the age of some of the papers runs back from half to three-quarters of a century. Most of them admit they found competition ruthless and insistent; their costs of publication kept on going up, while their revenue was on the way down. And the answer was that in 15 months 41 dailies went out of business in United States.

There is a good deal said by some regarding the "capitalistic press" and the "subsidized press," but in no instance in this long list of failures did any of the so-called subsidizing forces come to the rescue of a single newspaper. So it might be just as well to quit talking about the "subsidized press."

NOTE AND COMMENT

The way in which that Bren investigation is being drawn out leads one to ask, When?

Politics continue to run true to form. A lawyer has been nominated as Conservative candidate in Hastings-Peterborough.

Cadet training is to be made optional in local schools. There is no choice about military training in some countries we could mention.

Man in Toronto who was shot in mistake by police is to receive $2,200. The most fortunate part of the affair is that the man is able to receive it.

The Bobcaygeon chief who was shelled with hen-fruit on Hallowe'en says they were all cowardly eggs, because they hit him and ran.

Those cattle rustlers in Victoria County who leave only the bones of their prey must be what might be described as pot-hunters.

Damage done in Hallowe'en celebrations at Hamilton is placed at $5,000. The institution on the mountain there unfortunately is reported as being already crowded.

A man with a gun robbed a tea-room in Galt, and it looks as though the man who operates a shoe-shine stand will soon have to apply for permission to be armed.

Lloyd George professes to fear Mr. Chamberlain may pick up dictatorial airs from the company he has been keeping. But then it is difficult to imagine the British Prime Minister in the role of a dictator.

We were informed there was a terrific blizzard in the country 79 years ago to-day with roads all blocked. Any of our readers who recall having helped to clear up things will please drop a few lines about their experiences.

Ned Sparks of the movies says he paid $3,500 for a set of false teeth which would eliminate hissing sound when he came to the letter "s". Probably Ned can go right through with "Sister Susie sells sea shells."

Several articles were stolen from the school house at Port Burwell on Hallowe'en, and among them the teacher's strap. Some of the other things have been returned, but the trouble is to get a search party to work industriously looking for the strap.

ROBINSON CRUSOE

(By A. R. K.)

¶ I used to weep when but a lad, for Crusoe's life was rather sad, for he was wrecked alone; he could not borrow from the banks, but had to gather boughs and planks, before he had a home.

¶ He must have been so lonely there, no barber man to cut his hair, and in the blinding sun; and no one ever spoke a word, the only noise he often heard, was when he banged his gun.

¶ But now that I am old and bent, and have to hustle for the rent, I've sort of changed my mind; there were no taxes there to pay, no permits issued day by day, no chance to get behind.

¶ There was no license then to fish, he caught as many as he'd wish, no license for a gun; no tax on anything he'd eat, no sales tax when he rigged his feet, no fines for what he'd done.

¶ And when he went to build his shack, he didn't have to set it back, there were no by-laws there; and no inspector bothered him, to see if he used bark or tin, or if the joints were square.

¶ I used to grieve at Crusoe's fate, and mourn his lone and dreary state, wherein he had to dwell; but now that I've seen taxes grow, I've changed my mind and now I know—that Crusoe's plan was swell.

1,400 Farmers Kept Records

SOME YEARS AGO IT was announced that the Economics Division of the Department of Agriculture would make a survey of milk production costs in the various milk-producing areas of Ontario. Over 1,400 farmers kept accounts in a book provided for the purpose. The records were for the year 1936, and a summary of results was recently released.

It is natural to supose says Rusticus in the Stratford Beacon-Herald that the majority of the farmers who agreed to co-operate would be among the more successful producers of whole milk, for several cities were included in the survey as were producers of milk for the condensaries, the cheese factories and, what might be of greater interest to many Perth County farmers, is the fact that farmers who produced cream for the creameries were also keeping their accounts to see what chance they might ever have of getting rid of that document we generally refer to as a mortgage.

AFTER THOSE 1,400 farmers had done their best to keep the sheriff away for a year and had jotted down the figures on how they did it, (or did they?), experts in some government office got to taking all those figures apart. Among other things they wanted to know was this question: "What actually is the average cost of 100 lbs. of milk?" And from the records the farmers had kept these experts could tell to a cent just what the cost was, and, mark you, they allowed wages for the chap who did the work. In some districts the hourly wage rate was found to be 14.5 cents per hour and upwards to 20.4 cents in other areas.

Feed costs, of course, bulk large in the production of any kind of live stock produce. Then, too, the accountants took into consideration depreciation on equipment, etc. The farmers doesn't do that. He just cracks in a nail here or there where a board is coming loose, patches the old roof on the barn once more and lets it go at that. He knows all right that the old place is failing to pieces and all that, even if he never did hear about depreciation.

WHAT DOES it really cost to produce a hundredweight of milk! Farmers who sell their milk in the Toronto area report a cost of $2.23 a hundred. In the Hamilton-Niagara area the cost is even higher at $2.26, while producers supplying Ottawa cheesemen claim to be able to produce a hundred pounds of milk for $1.24. Cream shippers claim an average cost of $1.40 per cwt. What did these farmers receive for the hundred pounds of milk they knew the cost of so accurately? In Toronto they got $1.90, in Hamilton the price was $1.91, while the Ottawa cheese producers got $1.04 and cream shippers got $1.03. It will thus be seen that in no case did producers get the actual cost price of their milk. In the various areas under study the Ottawa wholemilk producers are the only ones who made a small profit of 23 cents per hundredweight. In all other zones the loss ran from 14 cents in the Sudbury-North Bay area to 50 cents in the Owen Sound-Peterborough-Oshawa areas.

Had no labor costs been included in these figures the farmer might have fared a trifle better. For instance, the Ottawa whole milk producers would have had 19.7 cents per hour for his labor. Even the Western Ontario producers, who markets his milk via the cheese factory, had a little left for his labor. For every hour he spent in diary work could take out 1.6 cents for labor. The Western Ontario condensary-producer had the misfortune to have to pay in nearly a cent and a quarter every hour he worked with his cows.

WHAT ABOUT the man on the back concessions who produces milk for the creameries? Well, he did not exactly work for nothing, for every hour he worked he had a labor income of exactly (no guessing about it) exactly 4 cents. Yes, sir, the chap who raises cattle to a milking age, feeds them, milks them, and sells the cream to the creameries only needs to work 25 hours for the sum of one dollar! All this won't do any good. It won't change the price of milk a bit, but it will give most anyone something to think about.

ROAD CASUALTIES

(Manchester Guardian.)

THE TRENCHES in the parks may help to percuade us that if it is worth while to save lives from air attack it is also worth while to save lives from the perils of the highway. In the first nine months of this year 172,695 people were killed or injured on the roads. The number of deaths was 4,658. This was a decrease of about 150 as compared with the first nine months of 1937.

There is not much consolation to be derived from that, and the remaining quarter may unfortunately have disproportionately heavy casualties. The annual death-roll remains between 6,000 and 7,000. The problem has hardly been touched by any steps that the authorities have yet taken.

It is interesting to notice that Germany is concerned about the number of her traffic accidents. A year's casualties on the German roads are 8,000 killed and 175,000 injured. To cope with this evil extraordinary powers are being given to the police. They have for some time been entitled to exact small fines for minor offences. Now they are to be given power to deflate an offending motorist's tires and in certain cases to impound licenses and withhold them for a few weeks. Such powers in the hands of the police might not be favored in this country, but there is clear need for some action.

IT WOULD BE SHOCK

(Toronto Globe and Mail)

The greatest shock Saskatchewan secessionists could experience would be notification to get out of Confederation if they wanted to and run their own show, without any assistance from outside.

• Borden's Advice to Lloyd George

POLITICAL CIRCLES are excited by the publication of "Robert Laird Borden: His Memoirs," an extensive delineation by the former Canadian prime minister of his political career, especially during the war years. Sir Robert died on June 10, 1937, nine years after the Macmillan Company of Canada approached him to write his memoirs.

Sir Robert reveals one of the outstanding moments of his career when, in the distressing days following the German offensive in 1918, he stood in the Imperial War Cabinet as Canada's representative and criticized the British high command.

"I spoke for nearly an hour," he writes of his war cabinet speech on June 13, 1918. "The intensity of my emotion enabled me to speak without hesitation and with more rapidity than usual. Sir Henry Wilson, chief of the general staff, had left at the commencement of my remarks. When I began to emphasize the incompetency, disorganization and confusion at the front, Lloyd George sent for him saying 'This is very important.'" The British Prime Minister later congratulated Borden on his stand.

Borden writes that he made his attack on the high command after conferring with Sir Arthur Currie, commander-in-chief of the Canadian Corps.

The memoirs disclose that David Lloyd George came to have great confidence in Borden's judgment. He successfully supported the Canadian prime minister in the latter's insistence the dominions should have direct representation in the peace discussions. They also disclose that Lloyd George offered to make Borden British Ambassador to Washington.

Envisioning a British Empire in which each dominion would be entirely independent in its own affairs, Borden believed representatives of the dominions should sit with those of the United Kingdom to decide foreign policies in which they had a common concern.

On the Imperial War Cabinet, under Lloyd George's leadership, when Britain "for the first time called the Empire to her council," Borden was closely associated with Premier Hughes of Australia, Premier W. F. Massey of New Zealand and General Jan Christiaan Smuts, who represented Premier Botha of South Africa, during the time the Cabinet operated.

Later during the peace conference Botha himself attended. He and Borden became fast friends. "Louis Botha was a man of broad, generous instincts," he writes. "I have met many men of greater intellectual power, greater intellectual machines ....but I met none whom I regard as having possessed more truly the essential attributes of greatness."

It was Premier Botha, according to the memoirs, who told Borden the selection of governors-general should not be confined to residents of Great Britain and asked Sir Robert to take it up with Lloyd George. Borden writes: "I found Lloyd George's outlook more restricted than ever before. He felt that appointment from the British Isles was essential as it constituted the last link between each dominion and Great Britain. I replied that if the Empire's unity depended on that link it was not very secure."

• Was Written Way Back In 1870

HERE IS A PARAGRAPH from a personal letter addressed to his wife by a keenly observant and exceptionally well-informed English newspaperman:

"What an eventful year this will be for the world! France cast from the first rank of powers to the second, Germany risen up strong and mighty . . . and who knows what else there may not be yet to come? England is behaving ignobly, pitiably, in all this, and I almost blush to be an Englishman at the present moment. We have no statesman and no policy and we refuse to raise our voices against the dismemberment of a faithful ally. England never abdicated so shamefully her place as a great power and never gave such reason as now to those who accuse her of utter selfishness. We shall suffer for it bitterly one day and in our distress shall look around in vain for a single friend to help us. We think we are secure in our island and so let carnage and violence go on unchecked and allow ourselves to become the byword of Europe as the power that will talk but never fight to prevent wrong. In my humble opinion Mr. ....., great man as he is, is quite at sea in foreign affairs, and the rest of the cabinet are narrow-minded respectabilities and peace-at-any-price men."

To many people this comment will seem most timely. But it was written, in reality, not in October, 1938, but in September, 1870. Its author was George Douglas Williams, of Reuter's Agency, and it is printed in the book, "World of Action," just published by his son, Valentine Williams. The British prime minister of that day was not Chamberlain, but Gladstone. The dismemberment was of France, not Czechoslovakia. The disaster which had so deeply stirred the British newspaperman was not a great diplomatic surrender, as at Munich, but the crushing defeat of the French arimes by Prussia at Sudan.

Mr. Williams saw truly, says The Chicago Daily News. Vast consequences came of Sedan, not alone for Britain, but for all the world; just as vast consequences will come of the surrender at Munich and the destruction of the Versailles system. For the drama of the nations is endless. There are frequent climaxes, but the denouncement is never final. Britain, remaining neutral, tolerated the partition of France in 1870 because it felt that a strong Prussia was needed as a counterpoise to imperial Russia. Was not the surrender at Munich inspired by a similar preoccupation with communist Russia? After Sedan a new balance of power had to be found. It was found, but only with Russia's help, and it held Germany in check for 44 years. After Munich, too, a new balance of power will have to be found, and found speedily, or Germany, with its fascist allies, Japan and Italy, will soon be dictating terms, not to Europe alone, but to the entire earth. To this new balance will not Russia, even a communist Russia, prove as necessary now as it was 68 years ago?

THE HIGH COST.

(Port Arthur News-Chronicle)

THE STEAMER GULLPOOL has left Churchill with the "third and last grain cargo of the season."

Shipments of grain from the northern port for the season, carried by the three ships are reported as totalling about 1,000,000 bushels.

Investments in the Hudson Bay Railway and terminals was $53,000,000.

Interest on that amount at three per cent. for one year is more than $1,500 000.

A total of 1,000,000 bushels of grain having been moved out by that route this year the cost for interest on investment alone is above $1.50 per bushel.

After that there are operating costs to be added in.

If they would close the elevator, quit the railway and forget it, the people wouldn't be reminded so often about the high cost of playing politics.

WHO PAYS THE TAXES?

(Winnipeg Free Press)

IT IS PERFECTLY obvious that much of the taxation paid, in the first place, by industrial, commercial and financial companies in Toronto, Montreal and other parts of Ontario and Quebec, really falls on the West and Maritimes.

Why on earth should not some of the revenue collected in Ontario and Quebec be spent elsewhere? It is only paying back to those other parts what they themselves have contributed.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

THE BURDEN of the word of the Lord for Israel, saith the Lord which stretcheth forth the heavens, and layeth the foundation of the earth, and formeth the spirit of man within him. . . . And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and of supplications; and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn. . . .

In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and uncleanness. . . . And it shall come to pass, that in all the land, saith the Lord, two parts therein shall be cut off and die; but the third shall be left therein. And I will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried: they shall call on my name, and I will hear them: I will say, It is my people: and they shall say, The Lord is my God.—Zech.xii, 1, 10; xiii, 1, 8, 9.

Cloyne Lumber Camp To Employ 40

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Nov. 4. — The Sawyer-Stoll Lumber Company Ltd., of which Mr. Wallace Johnston of Tweed is Manager, expect to employ about forty men in their recently acquired timber limits in the Township of Effingham, north of Cloyne.

Mr. Stoll, was a recent visitor to the district and expressed himself as well pleased with the quality of the timber available. A mill will be installed in the near future and the finished product wil be trucked to Kaladar for shipment.

Fred Babcock, Elmer Babcock and Joe Brant of the Township of Tyendinaga were taken into custody by Game Overseer Ed. Morley of Northbrook, and have been charged with netting whitefish. It is alleged that the trio had about 350 pounds in their possession when they were arrested near the village of Henderson. Mr. Morley suspected that fish were being taken by nets from Big Gull Lake and his all-night vigil was rewarded by the apprehension of the culprits. Using gill nets, it has been the practise of those breaking the law in this regard, to take the fish to Toronto, where they have been sold.

Whitefish are not considered game fish although they provide food for bass and trout. The three men will appear in court at an early date. This is the second seizure in which similar charges have been laid this year. In the first instance, a truck was seized and it was discovered that along with the whitefish a number of trout, including a twenty-four pounder, were being removed from the lake.

The steering apparatus of a car owned by Charles Cassidy, Stoco, was damaged when the owner ran across a snow fence stretched across the road on Highway No. 37 north of the village. The incident was reported to Constable Clair Hayes, who investigated.

All Have Hobbies At Hastings W.I.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Nov. 4. — One of the most successful monthly meetings of the Hastings Women's Institute was held on Tuesday in the Council Chambers. The attendance of members was exceptionally large, and seven visitors were present. Mrs. J. A. Brown presided and the meeting opened with the Institute Ode. The roll-call on "My Hobby" was responded to by all present. The hobbies included the making of scrap books, lace and tea, knitting, making friends, and many others.

Communications included a letter from Miss Greta Pollard in regard to the new project "The Milky Way." As it seems impossible to get the girls interested in the girls' work, no action was taken.

In regard to the Legislative grant of $3.00 the secretary, was authorized to apply this year. She was also requested to write a letter of thanks to Ken Tedford of Norwood for donating a table cloth as first prize for the euchre held at Mrs. Bert Preston's home.

Business centered around the Christmas cheer work and it was decided that each member should bring some gift to the December meeting, suitable for the Christmas cheer boxes for the needy of the district. Many members offered to knit mittens and scarfs as their donation. As the Village Council generously contributed last Christmas, and greatly assisted the members, they will again appeal to them for as large a donation as they feel like giving. The program was in charge of the convener, Miss Kate German.

Mrs. R. King gave a brief report of the Belleville area convention which she attended as a delegate on October 20 and 21. Mrs. Grover Kerr gave a reading, A Portrait of Lord Halifax, by Beverley Baxter. Mrs. G. Sine, leader of the project "Buymanship," gave a lesson on linen, one of the oldest fabrics, explaining the advantages and disadvantages of using linen, its care and uses, and how to test a fabric to know if it is linen. Miss Flo German kept every one interested as she told fortunes by a "meet yourself" method.

Following the meeting a special five-cent tea was enjoyed, Mrs. E. Richardson, Mrs. S. Stevenson, Mrs. Wallace Orr, and Mrs. Donald Pollock providing the refreshments, which were served by the lunch convener, Mrs. C. Dodd.

Chest Wheezing Means Bronchitis

The principal symptom of bronchitis is a dry, harsh, hacking cough accompanied with a rapid wheezing and feeling of tightness across the chest.

There is a rising of phlegm, especially in the morning. This phlegm is at first of a light color, but as the disease progresses becomes yellowish or greenish, and is sometimes streaked with blood.

You will find in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup a remedy to stimulate the weakened bronchial organs, subdue the inflammation, soothe the irritated parts, loosen the phlegm and mucus, and help nature to easily dislodge the morbid accumulation.

". . . Tell them about batteries from the standpoint of the man who sells them. Take ourselves. We've handled Exides for 15 years. We always figured that we had our future to think of and could not risk losing customers by selling a battery that might not stand up. Exide is the choice of experienced, successful dealers—men who know that the basis of success is good service and good merchandise. Make motorists understand this. Make them realize that the reasons which cause the better class of service station to sell Exides are the same reasons they should buy Exide."

The makers of Exide Batteries appreciate the enthusiasm and loyalty of a dealer who writes a letter like this. He is right. There is no surer indication of the automotive dealer's interest in your welfare than the brand of battery he handles . . . for unlike other kinds of merchandise, the value of a battery is something you cannot see. And the dealer who does not take advantage of that fact, but offers you a battery of unquestionable merit, justifies your confidence.

That is why you can regard the Exide dealer sign as the symbol of honest service . . . a safe guide to follow in buying automotive merchandise and service generally.

Plaxton Charges Puzzle Judge At Bren Inquiry

OTTAWA, Nov. 4 (CP)—Herbert Plaxton, Toronto lawyer, stepped into the role of accuser from his place in the witness box before the Bren inquiry commission yesterday and charged Lt.-Col. Drew and his associates with "an attempt to burke this inquiry and to suborn witnesses."

Mr. Plaxton linked Gordon Balfour, Col. Drew's law partner, with his charges and also brought in the name of Captain Roy Brown, famous Canadian airman who is an employee of the Toronto brokerage firm of Cameron, Ponton and Merritt. He indicated he would ask to have Captain Brown called.

Near the close of yesterday's hearing, and with a suddenness that left the commissioner, Mr. Justice H. H. Davis of the Supreme Court of Canada somewhat puzzled as to what it was all about, Mr. Plaxton launched into a statement. It covered an incident involving destruction of papers in his law office about the time of publication of the Drew article in Maclean's magazine criticizing the Bren machine gun contract.

Mr. Plaxton had been on the stand all day under questioning by various counsel on his association with Major J. E. Hahn and the Cameron, Pointon and Merritt brokerage firm, in acquisition of the assets of the John Inglis Company Limited plant in Toronto.

Col. Drew's article criticized the manner in which this company negotiated a contract for 7,000 Bren machine guns with the defence department, and a supplementary order for 5,000 guns with the British war office. The article was published last Aug. 24 and resulted in the inquiry now proceeding.

Charwomen Involved

Mr. Plaxton charged that Col. Drew or his associates had endeavored to induce charwomen in the Toronto office building he occupies to testify with respect to destruction of some baskets of documents destroyed in his office about the time the Drew article appeared.

Some baskets of these papers had been placed in the office of James Boylen who occupied an adjoining office, the witness said.

About 10 days after the incident, the witness said, "Mr. Boylen came in, in great agitation, and said he had been interviewed by Mr. Balfour who had invited him to the National Club and had endeavored in every way to persuade him to make some statement in regard to or involving the members of our firm and my brother (Hugh) the member of parliament."

Mr. Plaxton swore the destroyed documents, so far as he was aware, comprised an accumulation of stenographers' note books. By accident some of the baskets had been placed in Mr. Boylen's office.

"I also learned," Mr. Plaxton said, "that our good friend Col. Drew had called Captain A. Roy Brown of the Cameron, Pointon and Merritt firm, one of our Canadian war aces——"

Col. Drew interrupted to say Captain Brown was a distinguished war pilot and if he had anything to say or complain about it should be before the commission. Mr. Plaxton said he would "ask for a subpoena in that connection. This is too important to be passed up entirely."

Noted Financer Publicly Rebuked

The United States Securities Commission publicly rebuked Thomas W. Lamont, RIGHT, partner in the J. P. The commission charged that Lamont was fully informed of Whitney's embezzlement when his brother, George Whitney, borrowed $1,082,000 from him to aid the former exchange president.

The actor explained that the second set was necessary to eliminate a slight "s-s-s-s" hissing sound when he used the letter "s" over the motion picture microphone. He set the cost of the teeth at $3,500 when he protested before the United States board of tax appeals that he should be allowed deductions from his income tax returns for cost of the two sets of false teeth. WOMEN GO FOR MASSACRES IN SPORT JACK DEMPSEY SAYS

Lady Fans Given Panning By Ex-Champion

NEW YORK, 4—Jack Dempsey, who has considerable personal experience in the world of sports, has just completed an analysis of the reasons why women prefer sports of the legal-mayhem variety, and has come to the conclusion that "Girls go for massacres." Writing under that title in the current Collier's, the former heavyweight champion says:

"Women go for sports all right, but for a reason that never fails to disillusion their escorts. The lovely ladies are interested only when someone is in imminent danger of being killed.

"Look at the sports that get a heavy consistent play from the feminine trade: boxing, football, horse racing, wrestling, hockey and polo. The dolls dearly love these blood-and-thunder exercises for the enchanting contingency that at least one of the adorable athletes will get his large, well-shaped ears knocked off or a lump of meat, bone and hair will be left for dead in the arena.

"The vindictiveness and cruelty of women as sports spectators is highlighted by the numerous and outrageous demonstrations of outright bad sportsmanship by the critters who are participants in major-league golf and tennis, the two games that engage them as featured competitors. No man likes to lose, of course, but a woman has a passionate and positive hatred for seeing somebody win at her expense. She takes defeat as a personal affront."

Points To Ball

Dempsey contends that the fact that baseball leaves the overwhelming majority of women cold is the tip-off on their sports taste.

"Baseball holds little appeal for women for several reasons," he says. "First of all the element of violent physical contact among the players is negligible; there are few serious injuries to satisfy the sadist. Then again, the concentration capacity of women is limited. They cannot stay, in a mental sense, with a situation which builds up to a series of climaxes, such as a nine-inning ball game.

"Every sport that attracts women as spectators carries the distinct possibility of a sudden explosion of energy that alters the course of battle radically. The one-punch knock-out, the long, stabbing touchdown run, the spectacular goal in hockey or polo, the hell-for-leather drive down the stretch in racing, are illustrative of this. The event that draws the largest proportion of women in the world is the annual 500-mile automobile race in Indianapolis. Nearly 75,000 of them sit under a broiling sun and inhale nauseating gas fumes for more than five hours every Memorial Day because men are flirting with sudden death on the speedway—and occasionally succumb."

In conclusion, after citing numerous other examples to make his point, Dempsey says that perhaps it's just as well that women are content to take their sports thrills vicariously.

"The atrocities they would wreak upon men as active participants in the more exuberant games are too horrible to contemplate," he states. "Remember how the Basque fishwives gave the Italians the old heave-ho into the sea at Bribuega? Man will be a doomed breed when women pour out of the stands, roll nup their sleeves, and join the gladiators in the arena."

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

ON ACCOUNT of there will be an eclipse of the moon Monday, and also as our insurance is due in two weeks, we are kinda rushed for time today, so our poetic effort may sound as scratchy as a seismograph in rough weather. But we had to rip off a bit of rhyme for inspiration and send it to the Orfuns by native runner, tom-tom and mental telepathy. Read it and weep:

* * * * * *

A bunch of the boys were roughing it up
In a senior gridiron melee;
Gees named Hempey, Ferraro and Burns,
Loucks, Irwin, Curtin, Magee.

When out of the air with the score tied up
Came a forward pass from Crowe,
To a fleet outside who was travelling wide;
He clutched it and over did go.

Well the husky Nats all looked like saps,
And the Orfuns copped the fame;
Mainly through Dangerous Cec Perdue
Whose poetry won the game!

* * * * * *

Don't Forget Sarnia's Loss

WELL, as the guy in the bathtub said when they played the National Anthem, we're not right at our best but can't recline under the circs. So we'll rise to remark that football fans should see a sweet grid scrap here tomorrow when oMntreal Nats, undefeated so far, meet the amazing Orfuns. Don't forget what happened here last home game when the unbeatable Imperials were outfought and outscored. We won't call Orfuns to win—as Nats should do it on form—but we will predict a dandy joust; with the scrappy locals giving the Nats a much tougher tilt than they did in Montreal—and then they held 'em close in the last half. Some of the Orfuns said to us after the Beach game: "Be a real prophet and pick us to win—and we'll go out and beat Montreal." That's their attitude, and they'll startle the burly Frenchmen with their fight.

* * * * * *

OUR CRYSTAL BALL has been mislaid and old Chief Spit-in-the-Wind is off fishing, but we'd nominate Beaches and Nats to win tomorrow, and hope we're wrong locally. The game here, at 2.30 in the Grounds ala Exhibish, rates a record crowd for several reasons. (a) it will be a grand grid battle; (b) it's the last senior scrap here in 1938; (c) the Orfuns beat the Imps here and they must have learned something since then; and (d) you won't see another game with such action here till hockey comes. So don't pass it up, folks; give Sarnia's conquerors—the Imps haven't lost to Beaches or Nats this year—some real vocal support Saturday.

* * * * * *

Knockouts and Knockdowns

TONIGHT'S BOXING SHOW at the Brock deserves a good crowd, too, as it has seven classy mitt bouts lined up. Promoters picked the boxers so as to provide the most action and the tightest decisions, in order to get the fans fight-conscious here again—as they plan more shows. Riverview A.C. has put on some good fist cards and this eve at the rink the ring followers will see another. Three good Toronto toreadors are matched with the best local talent, and preceded by four first-rate prelims. Anyone who likes boxing, and not very many people dislike this sport, can bank on a large evening with plenty of yodelling at the fast action.

* * * * * *

JUST A QUICK skim through the card again. Nick Orlando, a dandy local lightweight, headlines it against Scotty McDonald of Toronto. Dutch McIlmoyle, who hits like two trip-hammers, faces Bill Amato, a Toronto 165-pound pug. In the semi-final, Harry Low meets Harry Kiel of Toronto, and if these welters don't stage a sweet slugfest we'll eat the crimson Xmas tie that Aunt Lucy always sends us from Winnipeg! Ken Roy tackles Eddy Curtain, who goes 147, in a prelim; and Joe Hobbins and Bill Joiner, local lightweights who love each other like Winchell and Hitler, are in another. Buddy Redmond meets Izzy McIntosh, and Gord Riel tackles Dan McGregor, in the other early bouts. Lots of fun and fury on this card.

* * * * * *

Look at Belleville Sports

KNOCK, KNOCK. Who's there? The Quinte columnist again. Ye Belleville writer for some reason or other has been panning Peterborough sports scandalously since Sept. 1st. Showed unholy glee for an ex-C.O.B.L. umps when the Petes lost out to Stratford and belittles the Orfuns, even when they beat Sarnia. And now intimates Cobourg Galloping Ghosts are as good as the local senior gridders and that the intermediate group is as strong as the Intercollegiate. Yet Orfuns, 50 per cent weaker than they are now, defeated Cobourg in an exhibition game early in the season. With all due respect to the good Cobourg club, the Peterborough seniors could trim 'em now by several touchdowns. And they'd massacre the weak Quinte squad. Look how the intermediate Orfuns beat Cobourg and Fliers last fall. So toss away your hammer, Ken, and be a good boy.

* * * * * *

PICK HINES sort of picked several good puckists from this district for his Baltimore team this winter. Took Bill Calladine and Ned Vitarelli from Peterborough, and tried to get Honey Tompkins to go, too. Also invited Jack White to go along as trainer. And the Petes' former coach made a big effort to grab Johnny Lalonde of Trenton Fliers. Offered him $45 a week and would enroll him as a university student, thereby obtaining his leave of absence for 6 months from the R.C.A.F. But it was no go. Pick then picked up several good Cornwall players. Teams in that U.S. loop play a heavier schedule than N.H.L. squads, and have often packed in some 15,000 for a double-header Sunday in Madison Square Garden. Drake Jopling of this town played in it for several seasons for the Rovers.

* * * * * *

HITHER AND YAWN: Norm Worthy, good lacrosser with the Petes' champions this year, is pulling out one of these days.... Dope on their banquet and windbreakers may be decided Monday eve ....No further word on pro rasslin' here Monday; it may be postponed a week or so...Bernie Moroz of Sarnia and Ed Barnabe of Nationals will be out of their O.R.F.U. games tomorrow with injuries....Tommy Munns says: "Remember Peterborough!" as awarning both to Argos and the Nats, the Globe writer referring to the local upset of Sarnia ....Cobourg ball officials say there isn't a chance in the world of a Lakeshore Loop team going senior next semester....Loucks' leg is coming along gradually, but we doubt if he'll be ready for Sat'day.... P.C.I. seniors play today in Bowmanville....Appointment of a coach and manager for the senior Petes is bothering puck ossifers at the moment....Nope, Ted Reeve won't coach here in '39 on account of Queen's say he can coach there as long as he likes....Heavy weekend here with P.C.I. playing today, boxing tonight and senior O.R.F.U. on tomorrow....Owen Hendy will play hockey in St. Kitts this winter....Al Schacht, "Clown Prince of Baseball," travelled 50,000 miles last summer with his one-man diamond circus; that's carrying a joke a long way!

YIEWSLEY, England—(CP).—A 22-year-old swain who tried to crash the gate at a local dance was fined $4.80 for insulting behavior and ordered to pay doctor's fees occasioned by his onslaught.

Barnabe Is Out Of Saturday's Game

MONTREAL, Nov. 4. — (CP).—Scheduled to leave to-night for Peterborough, Montreal's Nationals faced the prospect of taking the field Saturday against their O.R.F. rivals without the services of Quarterback Ed Barnabe, out of the line-up with a charleyhorse.

Directing National's final workout before the Peterborough clash, Coach Hoddy Foster had A. Holmes calling signals last night. A former quarter with St. Lambert of the old Q.R.F.U., Holmes has worked at half since joining the Nationals.

Foster said Barnabe, injured in the Sarnia game here last week, was the only "doubtful starter" for Saturday. A victory over Peterborough will clinch a playoff berth for the locals.

$100,000 Blaze

MONTREAL, Nov. 4—(CP). — A two-alarm fire destroyed a three-storey building housing Brown's Bottle Exchange, Inc., last night, causing damage estimated unofficially at about $100,000.
